PREFACE

At the Annual Town Meeting, held March 20, 1905, a committee was chosen, consisting of Mr. George F. Chase, chairman, Mr. John C. Crane, Mr. Ira N. Goddard, Mr. George W. Mallalieu, and the Rev. George A. Putnam, to consider Millbury's past history, especially its industries, with a view to the publication of a history of the town. Accordingly, at intervals in the succeeding years this committee met and made plans for the compilation of such a work. One member of the committee, Mr. John C. Crane, had already for many years been privately gathering literary material pertaining to the industries, institutions, and individuals of the town, and this collection became the nucleus for the present volume. For a year Mr. Crane continued his labors of compilation and read his manuscript to the committee regularly at its meetings and, in recognition of his enthusiastic and patient work, the committee voted to express its appreciation of the "valuable, devoted and loving labors of Mr. John C. Crane in compiling the History of Millbury."

In 1910, two vacancies had been created on the committee, one through the death of Mr. Mallalieu and the other through the removal from the town of the Rev. Mr. Putnam. Consequently, at the annual town meeting in that year Mr. Henry W. Carter and Mr. Henry A. Phillips were appointed to fill these vacancies and they have continued in their service on the committee.

In the year preceding the celebration of the centennial anniversary of the incorporation of the town, Henry W. Aiken, Esq., was added to the committee, making the number composing its membership six. In 1913, Mr. Goddard died and as his place has not been filled the number on the committee has continued to be the same as it was originally.

At the meeting of the committee, held March 28, 1912, Mr. Henry A. Phillips was chosen secretary of the committee. Owing to the illness of the chairman of the committee Mr. Aiken presided at its meetings for several months, and since the retirement of Mr. Chase from the chairmanship on account of ill health, two years ago, Mr. Aiken has served as chairman of the committee.

Supplementing the labors of compilation performed by Mr. Crane, the Rev. Robert W. Dunbar, after the Centennial Celebration, was chosen by the committee to revise the material and prepare it for publication. In addition to the material collected, however, many old deeds (all the oldest so far as we have knowledge) as well as the Proprietors' Book of Sutton were consulted so as to ascertain, so far as possible, the facts concerning the earliest industries of the locality. The chapters concerning the Revolutionary War, the Civil War and the Blackstone Canal were very much enlarged and the entire book has been rewritten or freshly constructed. Thus this history is in a sense a composite production, for eight different men have served on the committee, but the whole compilation has been edited by Mr. Dunbar.

In the preparation of such a history the stopping-place is largely an arbitrary one, as there is always more description of places, people, or events, that might be included and more painstaking care may ever be exercised in revising the manuscript, but the committee presents the history of the town believing that the book gives a true idea of Millbury happenings, together with such particular chronicles of people, societies, and institutions, as to leave little of importance that remains uncovered.

As the book is a growth, rather than the working out of a previously adopted scheme, the committee feels that, perhaps, the work is even more representative of the life of the town than it otherwise might have been.

The committee wishes to express its thanks to the many persons who have so freely offered what information they may have possessed in order that these chronicles might be complete.

CHAPTER I.

TOPOGRAPHY

Millbury was fashioned by nature to be a manufacturing center for it has several streams and rivers with an unusual fall of water within the limits of the town. Nowhere are the variations in level precipitous, though they are in places abrupt. Several hills are over or nearly seven hundred feet in height and the lowest point in the town is three hundred feet above the sea level. Of the streams of water which furnish power all come from ponds which lie wholly, or partly, within the limits of the town, although the Blackstone River is fed from other ponds besides Ramshorn. The surrounding country sheds its rainfall into the ponds of Millbury and in addition there are probably springs in the bottom of Singletary and Dorothy Ponds as the streams which flow out from these seem larger than the streams which flow in. Thus the town receives the full benefit of its water power for the surrounding country slopes toward the Blackstone and, except for evaporation, well nigh all the water that falls within the town or comes up from the ground within its limits may be utilized within the limits of the town.

The late Judge Hopkins, a resident of the town, in speaking before the joint committee on water and drainage of the Massachusetts Legislature April 2, 1886, thus referred to the Blackstone river, its valley and our town.

“And where and what is the Blackstone Valley? Taking its name from the first settler of Boston, and extending from Worcester to Providence Bay, it has a history as an industrial center antedating the history of Worcester as an industrial city. It is a busy valley, and, as such, has a record. . . . The river in its course to the sea operated the first cotton mill established in this country, and from that day to this, it has turned more spindles.

for spinning wool and cotton, than any other stream of like size in the world. . . Its industries are diversified. Not alone do the cotton and woolen industries of the country owe a debt of gratitude to the Blackstone River, and the mechanics within its valley, but every other mechanical industry has had its home there, from the latter part of the last century. The general government was supplied largely with arms and ammunitions of war from the town of Millbury for the war of the Revolution, the war of 1812, the Mexican war and the war of the Rebellion. The first scythes and improved agricultural implements made in the country were made at Millbury. The first paper machinery in the county was set up there, and for years it was the only source of supply for Worcester. Today, from the Riverlin Works, Millbury sends out the best edge-tools made in the country. The world-renowned invention for turning irregular surfaces was conceived and perfected at Millbury, and today the memory of the inventor and his invention is perpetuated in one of the beautiful halls in its town-house, and which is named 'Blanchard Hall.' Then, too, at Millbury, was conceived the principle of interchangeability of parts of machines and implements which revolutionized their manufacture, and now prevails elsewhere in the country, and made possible successful competition, by American mechanics, in the manufacture of watches, machinery of all kinds, guns, and every other mechanical device."

An advantage in the geographical situation of Millbury is its location at or near the main line of communication between the Western states and the Eastern sea-coast. The Boston and Albany Railroad runs through part of the town carrying people and freight both east and west. The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, operating the Providence and Worcester Railroad, transports passengers and goods from Worcester and points lying north and west to the sea-coast at Providence. Fast express trains may be reached at almost all times of day and night that will take one to the great centers of population, so that there is ready communication with all parts of the world.

This location on the great lines of communication is characteristic of the situation of Millbury for it was in this town and nearby that Indian trails led, over which the Red men coursed in their longer marches, and it was probably through the town that many of the earlier white settlers found their way as they made their pioneer journeys to the lands about the Connecticut. Local evidence of this early use of our town as a passage-way is seen in the name of the Blackstone River at this point for in the early deeds of 1720 and later it was termed "the Half-way River," i. e., presumably half-way between the Connecticut and Massachusetts Bay. Below the town and especially below Saundersville, the oldest name for the river is the Great river, many ancient deeds referring to land bordering on "ye Grate rever." Above Millbury center, and especially above Park Hill, the name "Pacachoag" was applied to the river, evidently because the stream was then near Pacachoag hill and Pacachoag village, the earlier Indian settlement in Worcester. This term "Half-way" applied to the river so restrictedly within the present limits of the town of Millbury leads one to think that here was the crossing place of the Blackstone in the great trails that ran from the Bay, as the region about Boston was then called, to the Connecticut River.

The earliest deeds (given in 1740), too, that determine the lands of Millbury's first industries on the Blackstone or, as it was then called at this point, the "Half-way River" refer to the "old path" apparently located where Elm street now runs west from the Common. This "old path," we believe, is a part of the old "Bay Path".

As a third factor pointing to this place as the location through which the oldest path ran, we find that the earliest map made of the route traversed by Nathaniel Woodward and Solomon Saffery, April 14, 1642, shows that the Blackstone river, or as it was called in their map the "Nipnar" river, was crossed at a point at which it makes a turn to the South, as it does in Millbury. Another similar turn is made, it is true, at Saundersville, but the river is there called the Great River and no "old path" has been found mentioned in early deeds to indicate any unusual passage at that point.

Much attention has been given to locating the old "Bay Path" which ran from Springfield to Boston, or the "Road to Connecticut" as it was called at the eastern end of the trail.

Concerning this "Bay Path" or "Road to Connecticut" we know that it ran through the town of Grafton for Major Gookin in referring to the Indian settlement at Hassanamisco, the Indian name for Grafton, stated that "Hassanamesitt . . . is about two miles to the eastward of Nipmuck (Blackstone) river; and near unto the old roadway to Connecticut." Researches have been made which have traced the old roadway from the west as far as Oxford. Thus, as Millbury lies between these two towns, it seems probable that the first roadway traversed by the white man in his journeys to the west passed through Millbury. Just where this road ran cannot be determined with precision but our fancy dictates that it crossed the Blackstone immediately above the Central Cemetery, ascended Woodchuck Hill, traversed the high level land through the old Common, thence by Ramshorn Pond to Oxford, the Indian Manchage. Over this route probably Thomas Hooker went when he made his pioneer journey to the Connecticut where he founded the city of Hartford and became one of the men rightly included among the "makers of America."

A later roadway ran three miles north of "Pacachoag," or South Worcester, as we learn from Major Gookin's historical collection. The Bradford History reflects the migrations that were taking place early in the seventeenth century, for in chronicling the events of 1635 it says, "Some of their neighbors on ye Bay, hereing of ye fame of ye Conightcut River had a hankering mind after it, (as was before noted) and now understanding, that ye Indians were swept away with ye late great mortalitie, the fear of whom was an obstacle unto them before, which being now taken away they began now to prosecute it with egerness, &c."

In his History of Worcester County the Rev. Peter Whitney stated, concerning Millbury, that (Sutton)

“This is a large and flourishing town, the second in wealth in the county. (Lancaster was first.) The census of 1791 gave the population as 2642.”

In 1827, a geological and agricultural survey of Millbury was made and reported in the National Aegis of Worcester in which the following characteristics appear:

“The surface of the town is hilly and somewhat undulating, but as a southeastern exposure presents a deep rich loam to the full influence of the sun it seldom fails to afford a rich reward to the well-directed efforts of the farmer . . . It is a fine silicious loam, rather moist, from one to three feet deep. . . . The town generally is better fitted to grass, maize, barley, and oats, than to those vegetables which are required to withstand the severity of winter and particularly the heavings of frost under the sudden changes of spring; and more favorable, perhaps, to grazing than to tillage. . . .

“The numerous ledges in the town dip to the northwest, and at various angles from 20 to 60 degrees. The prevailing rock both in ledges and boulders is gneiss, and of almost every variety from the oldest to the most recent formation. . . . A few boulders and many fragments of soapstone have been found in different parts of the town. Its texture is compact and soft.”

Singletary Lake is often called the largest body of water in Millbury but, in reality, it lies chiefly in Sutton, although Millbury derives the benefit from its waters in water power, as the outlet runs through this town. Roads running beside the lake leading to West Millbury, to West Sutton, and to Sutton Center afford beautiful drives on its shores, and its waters afford boating pleasures to those who are fond of the sail-boat, the skiff, and the canoe.

The early name for the pond was “Crooked Pond.” The Sutton Proprietors’ Book contains no other designation and all the early grants and deed of land bordering on its shores contain the name “Crooked Pond.” Ever since Millbury has been a separate town, however, it has been known by the name of Singletary Pond or Singletary Lake.

The area of the lake is about three hundred and sixty acres. There are but two islands in the lake, Loon Island near the western end, and Fire Island on the eastern shore. On the western shore about midway on the projection between the two indentations of the shore and about a hundred feet south of the present "Lacouture" camp, an old soapstone quarry is located about which Indian relics have been found.

The stream which flows from Singletary Lake was called "Mill Brook" in the earliest records and it continued to be so designated for over a hundred years, but in later times it has taken its name from the pond from which it flows so that it has gone by the name of Singletary Stream. In the '20's both the stream and pond were designated "Burbank" by many. Careful computations have been made "as to the natural flow of the water into and out of Singletary Pond for each of the months of the year and the power which that natural flow would furnish at the several privileges," by Mr. Herbert Shedd, of Providence, R. I., a hydraulic expert. The average quantity of water flowing from the pond is 12.732 cubic feet per second. The water power furnished is one and seventy-eight one-thousandths (1.078) horse power to each foot of head and fall of water.

Ramshorn Pond lies partly in Sutton as well as partly in Millbury and it also pours out its waters into this town. This pond is on the highest level of any of the ponds of Millbury, being six hundred and twenty feet above sea level. Its waters after a detour to the north come back into the town again in the Blackstone River. Originally, the pond probably resembled a ram's horn in outline but its level has been raised, so that today its shore line has been greatly altered and its area doubled, covering as it does about one hundred and fifty acres.

In 1873, the dam at the outlet of the pond gave way, doing much damage and in rebuilding the new one excavations were made unearthing skeletons, supposed to be those of Indians, but these were buried again. The new, or present, dam is higher than the former one.

SINGLETARY LAKE. FROM THE NORTH

Ramshorn Stream flows to the north for about two miles and a half when it enters the town of Auburn. Like the other streams coursing through the town the drop of water is considerable, being about one hundred feet in the distance traversed.

Dorothy Pond lies in the northern portion of the town between the old road to Worcester and the tracks of the Boston and Albany Railroad Branch. This pond, as seen from the road, is one of quiet beauty. It lies four hundred feet above the sea level and it is the only pond of considerable size that is wholly within the limits of the town.

The earliest name by which this sheet of water was called was "South Pond." In the Proprietors' Book the name "Dorothy" early appears as its name, however. Just how this name was received has not been determined. As the spelling of names in the old documents was largely phonetic we find a variety of spellings for this pond such as Dorothy's, Dorathy's, Doriat's, Doritee's, Dorrity's, Dority's, Doriet's, Dorrety, Doraites. The spelling Dorothy or Dorothy's is that most found when the handwriting is the best. "Dorothy Pond" and "Dority Pond" are the designations that older families employ the most.

The stream flowing out from Dorothy Pond, like other streams in Millbury, is not large, but in coursing a mile and a quarter it has a drop of sixty feet before it enters the Blackstone near the County Bridge.

The sections of the town that are apart from the manufacturing sites and from the thickly settled sections contain many farms that have a larger proportion of arable land than would seem possible in a town that has so much fall of water on so many streams. The soil is generally rich and is unusually well-watered, much of the land being springy.

The earliest map of the town that is in existence is found in the state archives and it gives merely the outlines of the original town of Sutton. It was made in 1715 and includes territory to the east of Grafton, although that town is excluded as it was held by the Indians and was called "Hassanamisco." Worcester lay to the north as at present. To the southeast lay Mendon. Marlboro is given as lying off the northeast corner and to the east it is marked "supposed Framingham." There is no mention of Oxford, of Ward (Auburn), or of Douglas, farms being designated on those boundaries to the west and south. At the time that this map was made this region was included within the bounds of Suffolk county, for it was not until 1730 that Worcester county was formed. The total territory embraced within this first grant of land to the township of Sutton was 41,560 acres, 1076 acres more than the contents of eight square miles, allowance having been made for farms on the border.

The next map of the town was made in 1795, when the state ordered all the towns to send in maps of their territory to the state house in order that gores and overlapping strips might be rectified. The original of this map is to be found in the state archives. The ponds, streams, roads, meeting-houses and industries are located apparently with painstaking care.

The next map to be ordered made out and returned to the state was surveyed in 1830, at a time when Millbury had become a town by itself. The original of this map is also in the state archives. The surveying was done by Hervey Pierce and the map was carefully drawn out on sheepskin. This map contains essentially the same features as the 1795 map although the industries have changed their work somewhat, new ones have been added, and more roads are shown.

In 1851 (see Annals) H. F. Walling made a map of the town which gives the location of many houses and industries in addition to those previously noted. The population of the town is given, in 1850, as 3071 and the area as 10,106 acres.

In 1878, a map was made of the town and is still used as a work of present reference.

In 1880, a bird's-eye view of the town was prepared which shows the general lay of the land and the houses and industries of a generation ago.

The United States geological survey map, surveyed in 1886, includes parts of Millbury on the "Webster" and on the "Blackstone" sheets. This gives a graphic presentation of the topographical features of the town.

In relation to the surrounding territory Millbury touches at its most northern point Lake Quinsigamond. Bounding on Worcester the northern boundary runs southwesterly to the Auburn line where it turns much more to the south until it reaches the limits of Oxford. Sutton bounds the town on the south, the line running northeast and southwest parallel to the boundary line between Millbury and Worcester on the north. On the east Grafton, the ancient Hassanamisco, is the adjoining town, the boundary line running a little to the west of north and a little to the east of south.

The limits of the town are between 71 degrees 49 minutes 55.12 seconds and 71 degrees 43 minutes 26.43 seconds west longitude. In latitude the extremes are 42 degrees 8 minutes 41.69 seconds and 42 degrees 14 minutes 16.88 seconds.

The claim of the town to its rights in the Old Common as public property is derived from the following deed (given in 1740), although a quit-claim deed for this same tract of land was given by a grandson of the grantor herein mentioned October 25, 1848. When given to the town, there is no evidence of the present road leading from the Center to West Millbury through the Old Common. The common extended twenty rods along the present location of this road, thence thirteen rods along the western side of the present common, thence twenty rods nearly parallel with the first line, thence eleven and a half rods to the first bounds:

“TO ALL CHRISTIAN PEOPLE TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME, &c. A description of the original highway districts of the town may be seen in the records of the Town Clerk. Roadways have been altered and changed many times during the time of the town's history.

The "old meeting-house" road was a bridle path, or wood-road, extending from the "Haywood District" near Dorothy Pond to the Old Common on which the meeting-house stood. The road started about a quarter of a mile north of Dorothy Pond on Millbury Avenue. It rose abruptly from the main carriage road at the start and went nearly parallel to the nearby brook which it crossed after continuing for about half a mile. The general direction of this section of the path was south-west, but there were frequent slight turns made on account of the configuration of the ground. For the greater portion of the way on this section of the road there is still a well-defined passage-way that has within a few years been passed over by a driver with a horse and buggy. Thus the path continued until it emerged from the woodland on Martin St., a little below St. Joseph's School.

From this point the road probably went independently of present roads toward the river which it crossed at a point near the north end of the cemetery. No traces can be found of this portion of the road but the transverse timbers of a former bridge that once stood at this place have been seen by Mr. Andrew P. Garfield, and Mr. Henry W. Carter has been told in his youth of people crossing the stream at this point, part of the time, at least, by foot on an old tree that was placed across the stream.

From this point, after a slight deviation to the left to avoid wet land, the path turned to the right and went up the side of Woodchuck hill on the land of the Waters estate. After reaching the top of the hill the path went generally to the southwest continuing over the land of Mr. Henry W. Carter with a few deviations because of the character of the ground, past the traces of the old Savery house that once faced the path, until it emerged on the road leading from the old common to Worcester, near the house once occupied by Simon Bixby and about a fifth of a mile from the Old Common. A jog in the wall shows the former opening, but it is now closed with stones.

CHAPTER II

INDIAN HISTORY

Prior to the advent of the white man, this region was inhabited by a race of Indians known as the Nipmucks. Some students of Indian History think that in more remote times the territory was occupied by the Beothuks, or Red Indians, who were so-called on account of their supposed custom of painting themselves and their belongings with red ochre. It is believed that the force of Indians which supplanted the Beothuks in New England, was the Algonquin, a great branch of the Indian family that at one time was probably the most numerous of any in North America.

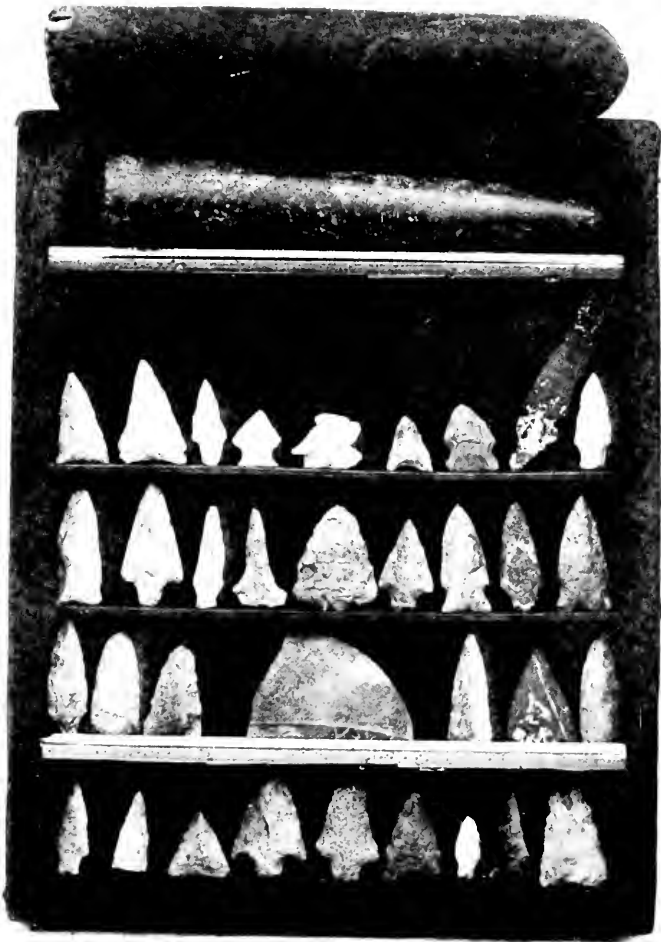

The word "Nipmuck" is derived from Nipamaug and signifies "Fresh water fishing place" and it distinguished them from those living near the seacoast. The early historians, such as Hubbard and Church, have spelled the name in many ways, such as Nipmuck, Nipmet, Nipnet, Nupmet, Nipmug, Nopmat, and Nipnar.

We hear much of the expression, "The Nipmuck Country," though the exact territory occupied by them is unknown. Hubbard states that "the more inland parts of the country were occupied by the Nipmets," and he further refers to the Nipmets as "A general name for all inland Indians betwixt Massachusetts and the Connecticut river." Church defines the Nipmuck region as the "Country about Worcester, Oxford, Grafton, Dudley, etc." The Narragansetts bordered it on the southeast, the Pequot land hemmed it on the south, west lay the Mohawk tribes, ever encroaching eastward, and to the north were the Pigwackets and Coos.

Seven sub-tribes made up the Nipmucks, namely, the Hassanamesits (the local tribe) at Grafton; the Naticks at the town of that name; the Pawtucketts at Lowell; the Pennacooks and the Wamesits on the Merrimac; the Pegans at Dudley, near the great lake; and the Quaboags at Brookfield. Some writers have added to this list the Nashuas, but their connection is doubtful. The Narragansetts and later the Massachusetts for a time exercised dominion over a portion of the Nipmucks.

Pierce's History of Grafton, Mass., in speaking of the Nipmuck country, states that "No white man, probably, ever set foot on its soil till the autumn of 1635, when it was traversed by a company of English, consisting of sixty persons, who, thinking themselves straightened for land in Massachusetts Bay, had determined thus early to emigrate to the more fertile bank of the Connecticut. What portion of the Nipmuck country they crossed is not known, but as their destined point was at Wethersfield, it is not improbable that they crossed this town, and that here, nearly three hundred years ago, that small company of emigrants, under the broad canopy of Heaven, invoked the blessing of God on their arduous enterprise." On this historic march, in 1636, the Rev. Thomas Hooker, their leader, passed through or near what is now Millbury on his way to Connecticut. Thus, with great energy, he opened a way for the white man and was a pioneer in that migration which meant the entrance of the white man into the inland country.

John Eliot, called the Apostle to the Indians, traversed the Nipmuck country and gathered many of the Indians into villages that they might thus learn the Christian religion in their own language and be taught the pursuits of civilization. One of the companies thus visited was at Hassanamisco (Grafton), about three miles from Millbury Center and about three-quarters of a mile from Grafton Center on the road which follows the Quinsigamond River from North Grafton to Fisherville. Here can still be seen a group of rude head-stones marking the graves of these aborigines. To Hassanamisco came also the good Major Gookin who was devoted to the welfare of the Indians in secular affairs as John Eliot was in religious matters. Fourteen settlements in all among the Nipmucks were affected by these preachers whose influence restrained many from taking part later in King Philip's War. A few, however, including James Printer who assisted Eliot in producing his Indian Bible, were among the hostiles.

The Nipmucks, together with other Indians, early came into the possession of firearms. In 1642, when news came to Boston from Connecticut that a general uprising in New England was feared, the authorities of Massachusetts, though not crediting the report, disarmed all the Indians over whom they had control.

About 1675 the Indian population in New England has been estimated to have been about thirty thousand. Philip, son of Massasoit, the first leader of the Indians in their dealings with the whites, entered into the leadership enjoyed by his father and was, at first, well-disposed toward the white people. He later became convinced, however, that the white men were surely driving his own people out from the land and he finally plotted the utter annihilation of the English in New England. He was a sachem among the Wampanoags, or "East-landers," as they were called, who inhabited the territory which now includes Bristol, R. I.

A hard feeling was engendered between the whites and the Indians which culminated, in 1675, in King Philip's War. In July of that year some Indians killed several settlers at Mendon. On August 3 of the same year a small company of soldiers that had been sent out from Boston under Captain Wheeler and Captain Hutchinson was ambuscaded near Brookfield. Eight were killed outright, both leaders were wounded, and the party took refuge in a house, but Maj. Simon Willard appeared upon the scene with reinforcements, just as the savages were to close in on them in a final assault, and repulsed the treacherous Nipmucks who set fire to the remaining houses and withdrew. In November, Captain Henchman appeared at Hassanamisco with his troop, about six weeks before the swamp fight at Narragansett.

By its remoteness "The Nipmuck Country," in early times, became the hatching-place of plots against the English. Hither King Philip resorted and, in its wild fastnesses of wood and water, he gathered his followers together for onslaughts on the palefaces. Hither came the Narragansetts and others, until at one time, at or near Worcester, he had a body of a thousand men ready and waiting to pillage and murder. Lieut. Ephraim Curtis, of Worcester, was several times sent among the Nipmucks to prevent them from assisting King Philip in his war on the white settlers. Thus there is little doubt but that the wily savage was well acquainted with our locality and often passed here on his marauding expeditions.

The attitude of the early white settlers and the Indians toward each other is thus expressed by Barry who states that "There were few points of affinity between them, and they had few interests in common. By habits, custom, and inclination their paths lay far apart; and the red man was not so obtuse but that this was one of his earliest discoveries, once his intercourse with the English became fairly grounded." It should be stated, however, that many settlers took a most kindly interest in the welfare of the Indians. They depended much upon the Indians in their trade with them and marked instances occur, such as Winslow's treatment of a sick Indian who said, "Come over and help us," which show a finer spirit that was existent.

In May, 1676, Henchman, Brattle, Prentice, Sill, Cutler, and Holbrook with foot and horse visited Hassanamisco (Grafton) and engaged in conflict with the Nipmucks and others, after which the expedition returned to Medfield. In July of this year, Sagamore John of the Nipmucks surrendered with one hundred and eighty men. The death of Philip soon followed, and the famous war which had for a time threatened the existence of the colony was ended.

In 1686, some of the Huguenots who had fled from France settled at Oxford. For a time the strife between the whites and the Indians seemed to be about ended, but this devoted band of exiles felt the heavy hand of Indian hostility and one of their number, named Johnson, was a martyr-pioneer in the settlement of that region. After ten years of struggle at Oxford, however, amidst hope and discouragement, this people retreated and only their graves were left in the haunts of a savage foe, together with the little church which stood as a witness to the faith that they held and had tried to implant amidst a hostile people.

Locations near the mouths of streams entering our ponds and at the outlets of the latter were chosen working-places for the Indians, where many of the tools which they used and the large rocks which served them for milling-places are found. Also along these streams entering ponds or lakes, and even far back on the hill-sides sloping to the water, fragments of their bowls and cooking utensils, as well as material for their stone-work may be seen, much of it bearing traces of their crude tools.

On the southwestern shore of Singletary Lake an outcropping of steatite, or soapstone, is found, which was utilized by the Indians for the manufacture of their domestic vessels and some fragments have been found there. In 1885, and again in October, 1886, this place was visited by members of "The Worcester Society of Antiquity." The excavation from which soapstone had been taken was examined and the shore of the lake searched for relics of the Red-men. On Soapstone Hill, in the rear of the home of William E. Horne, at Bramanville, an opening may be seen where the Indians took from a ledge quantities of steatite for their use. In May, 1895, Prof. F. W. Putnam and Mr. C. C. Willoughby, of the Peabody Museum at Cambridge, inspected this locality. Several students accompanied them and a day was spent in searching for relics. Many broken soapstone vessels and some stone picks used in the making of these were found. The ledge is said to be well-nigh exhausted. On the farm of Mr. Henry W. Carter soapstone mortars have been found and at present there are many large pieces of the rock to be seen.

Many kinds of material were utilized in the manufacture of arrow and spear-points. A hard yellow stone was commonly used in making their spear heads, though some flint obtained elsewhere was also taken for the purpose. The stone most used by the local Indians for arrow-heads was white quartz, which is in veins among the rocks and ledges near our lakes. Places from which it was apparently chipped by the Indians can be seen to this day. Mortars in which to pound corn were as a rule worked out of granite. Picks were made from some hard stone. These were seldom completely formed, but a good point was required. Bowls and small vessels were almost always wrought from soap stone. Nearly all had knobs or handles on them.

The vicinity of Ramshorn Pond has yielded more than one thousand specimens of Indian handicraft in the last fifty years. The specimens have ranged from the small arrow-head to the soapstone bowl. From the shores of Lake Singletary and Dorothy Pond some specimens have been secured, though not so many.

In 1900 and the following years, Mr. Owen W. Mills and Mr. Charles Geer found implements on Soapstone Hill for fashioning Indian dishes, such as bowls and mortars, as well as some specimens of Indian handicraft. Several of these were sent to the American Museum of Natural History in New York City and were added to its collection.

The following extracts are taken from the late C. C. Baldwin's manuscript History of Sutton.

"It is said the Hassanamisco Indians were visited by the Narragansetts, and it was a common custom with them to go together to the neighborhood of Wachusett (mountain) in the fall, to hunt." "A battle was fought between the Indians and the English on the southern side of Ramshorn Pond. The Indians posted themselves on Potter Hill (so-called from the owner) and the English on a small elevation of land, now an island in the pond at the south end, and the battle was fought in the morning. They spent the night in the places before mentioned. Several Indians were killed and many bullets have been since found on the battle-grounds. Two human skeletons were found, some fifty years ago, a short distance south of the pond and one skull was found on the place where the battle was fought. This tradition comes from Anthony Dike's father who had it from one of the soldiers who was in the battle."

King Charles of England, by the charter granted to the Massachusetts Bay Company, conveyed to it territory within certain bounds, but the rights of the Indians to the title of their lands was always recognized by the government of Massachusetts Bay Colony, so that all lands acquired by white men within its bounds were purchased on terms satisfactory to the Indian settlers. For the protection of the latter the laws from an early date forbade the purchase of land by the white men from the natives unless the terms were adjudged by the General Court to be fair to the Indians, thus in every case the approval of the General Court must precede a change of title.

The visible connecting link between the Indian of the seventeenth century and the Millbury land owner of the twentieth century is the deed given by John Wampus, alias White, the Indian proprietor of all this territory. The deed from Wampus was dated July 28, 1679, and was recorded in the Middlesex County, Massachusetts, registry of deeds Nov. 3, 1679, where a copy may be consulted—see Vol. 7, pages 157-160.

The territory covered by this description was carefully surveyed by John Chandler before 1704 as governor Joseph Dudley confirmed the title to the plot May 15, 1704. Thus this early date has been claimed by the citizens of Sutton as the natal day of the town including, as it did, the present territory of Millbury. June 18, 1715, John Chandler made affidavit that he had made "a true draft and it contained no more than 41560 acres of land as set forth in the Plot" and not until this date did the House of Representatives approve the transfer to the proprietors of Sutton and the Council confirmed this approval three days later.

CHAPTER III

FROM THE FIRST SETTLEMENT TO THE INCORPORATION OF THE TOWN

After the test of martial strength between the Indians and the English settlers a period of rest ensued in which the colonists renewed the depleted or abandoned settlements such as Brookfield, Lancaster, Mendon, Oxford, and Worcester. After the re-establishment of these places, Sutton was the next among the Worcester county towns to be settled and, May 15, 1704, Joseph Dudley, "Captain General and Governor In Chief In and over her Majesties Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England in America," confirmed the purchase that had been made from the Indian, John Wampus, and the white men gained a title to the soil under the usage of the colony. The town was incorporated June 21, 1715.

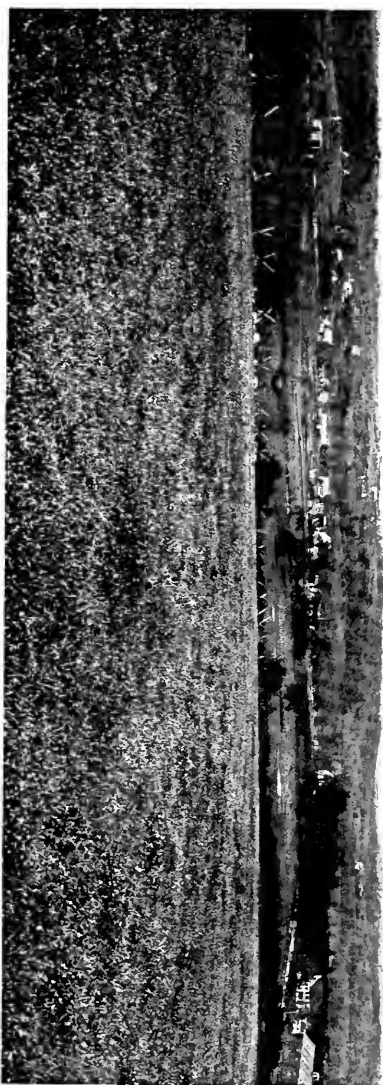

Previous to the spring of 1717 only three families made their homes in the town. The first white child to be born there was Abigail Marsh, who was born Sept. 29, 1718. The first town meeting was held Dec. 3, 1718, at the dwelling house of Mr. John Stockwell. The first church was organized in the fall of the year 1720, and the first minister, the Rev. John McKinstry, was ordained Nov. 9, 1720, and dismissed Sept. 22, 1728. His successor, the Rev. David Hall, was ordained Oct. 15, 1729.

In a few decades the population so grew in numbers that the old meeting-house could not conveniently seat all the people who wished to attend the services and steps were taken, Jan. 18, 1741, preparatory to the erection of a new meeting-house for the accommodation of those living in the Northern part of the town. This was the beginning of that tide of affairs which culminated nearly three-quarters of a century later in the establishment of the separate town of Millbury. The proposition created considerable discussion and, May 25, 1742, the town appointed a committee, consisting of Elisha Putnam, Captain Sibley, Mr. Isaac Barnard, Mr. Obediah Walker, and Mr. Henry King, to consider the matter which had been brought more definitely before the inhabitants by a petition from some of the men living in the northerly and northeasterly parts of the town asking that they be set off as a separate precinct. The report of this committee, presumably, was adverse to the proposed separation for the town voted not to allow them to be set off.

In the same year another petition was presented by persons who lived in the northwest part of the town asking permission to unite with others in adjoining towns for the purpose of forming a new town. Their petition, too, was denied. The town, apparently to remove the argument that the meeting-house was not large enough, voted to build a new one. A committee was, therefore, appointed to build and upon their asking for instructions in regard to the size of the building, the town "Voted that the said Comity should Build the said meeting-house—55 fouts long—45 fouts wide and the height be left to the Judgement of the said Committy."

The northern inhabitants of the town were persistent, however, and a vote was passed, apparently to see how much territory was affected, stating that "Capt. John Stockwell, Lieut, Goddard, Dea. Hall, Mr. Benjamin Woodbery, Capt. Carter, Cornelius Putnam, Mr. Solomon Holman be a committee to go and measure three miles and one-half from the north line of the Town, south, and make return to the Town." The committee measured the three miles and one-half, as they were instructed to do, but this took off so much of the town that the members of the committee were well satisfied that the town would not set off so large a portion so they went back to their three-mile mark and ran a line from Oxford to

WEST MILL BURY, TOWARDS THE NORTH WEST

Grafton, parallel to the northerly line. This placed the farms of Francis Kidder, Josiah Allen, Richard Singletary Isaac Barnard, Garshom Waite, Samuel Goodell, and Amos Goodell (taking them in order from west to east) to the north of the proposed line, including these men in the new precinct.

The position of the northerly inhabitants of the town is well set forth in the petition which they presented to the town, Sept. 8, 1742, in which they stated that

“your petitioners, living, sum and the most of us, very Remote from ye place of worship and having, sundry times, petitioned said Town for Releef, and hether to all our petitions have been abortive and unsuccessful yet, notwithstanding our Difficulties being so grate, we cant content our selves to give over seeking, hoping we shall succeed at last—and, having thought upon a new skeem—which we think will pritty well accomidate us all, we pray that you would not Deny us this Request. (viz.) To set us of (off) three miles and an half wide by a parallel line with the northerly line of said Town. Beginning at oxford and Runing to gafter In order to make a precinct, that so we may have the worship of God set up amongst us, which we think Cant but be a Reasonable Request and what we hope you will not Deny unto us, which as in Duty Bound we heartily pray for. (signed) Timothy Carter, Isaac Manning, Thomas Whitemore, Josiah Bond, Daniell Greenwood, Joseph Sparrowhack, Isaac Gale, Nathan Hiscock, Jabesh Pratt, John Allen, Samuel Buck, Junr., Jabesh Pratt, Junr., Jeremiah Bukman, Johnathan Dwinell, Amos Singletary, Ebenezar Pierce, Thomas Hall, Ebenezar Sibley, Garshom Bigelow, Samuel Boutell, John Allen, Junr., Johnathan Park, Robert Goddard, Francis Kidder, Edmond Barten, Abel Chase, Richard Singletary, William Fiske, Elisha Goddard, Garshom Waite, George March, Johnathan Fuller, Johnathan Waters, Theophilous Kinne, Daniel Buckman, Samuel Buck, Thomas Gould, Edward Lyon, Elisha Barton, Thomas Holman, Jeremiah Buckman, Junr., Solomon Holman, Robert Jeneson.”

The town, however, refused to set off the precinct in answer to their petition, whereupon the petitioners applied to the General Court and asked that they be set off as a precinct by special enactment. The town sent a committee to oppose the granting of this request. Nevertheless, the General Court reported favorably for the petitioners and in February, 1743, sent a committee to visit the town and hear the parties interested. As a result, October 28, 1743, an order was passed establishing precinct No. 2, according to a line drawn three miles south of and parallel to the northerly line of the town. November 11, 1743, an additional provision was made, by vote of the General Court, which compelled the inhabitants in this newly established precinct to pay their proportion of all ministerial charges in the town up to March, 1744.

The following is a copy of the petition for the issue of a warrant for the organization of the second precinct:

Worcester, ss.,

To Richard Moore, Esq., one of his Maj's. Justices &c. We the Subscribers, Inhabitants of ye Second Precinct in Sutton in said County hereby signify to you our Desire that a warrant may issue agreeable to Law for calling a Meeting in said Precinct as soon as may be &c. (which was to choose Parish officers.)

Jeremiah Buckman
Daniel Buckman
Thomas Gould
Abel Chase

Ebenezer Pierce
Solomon Holman
Francis Kidder

The warrant which was issued appointed the first meeting to be held at the house of Richard Singletary on the twenty-sixth day of December, 1743. It was directed to Jeremiah Buckman and it bears the following endorsement:

"Sutton, Dec. 26, 1743. By vertue of this Warrant, to me Directed, I have notified ye Freeholders and other Inhabitants of this ye same at Mr. John Singletary's Mill Doore. By Mr. Jeremiah Buckman one of the Petitioners of S'd Warrant."

Capt. Timothy Carter was chosen moderator and Robert Goddard was precinct clerk of the meeting.

The First Congregational Church within the present town limits (the Second Congregational at the time in Sutton) was formed by covenant, Sept. 10, 1747. The Rev. James Wellman became the first settled minister Oct. 7, 1747, and he was dismissed July 22, 1760. The Rev. Ebenezer Chaplain was settled to succeed him, Nov. 14, 1764.

After the establishment of the second precinct, agitation subsided and public matters moved forward without apparent friction.

At a meeting held March 3, 1755, the town voted to choose a committee of five to consider and "treat with ye several ministers in ye town consenting to sell ye ministerial land in s'd town, ye town having one-half of ye use of ye money and ye ministers ye other half. Voted y't ye land be sold." May 18, 1756, Robert Goddard, Esq., John Hazeltine, Esq., Capt. Henry King, Mr. Samuel Chase, and Mr. John Hicks were chosen a committee "to make sale of ye ministerial land and to treat or agree with ye several ministers concerning ye same."

On June 20, the same committee was instructed and authorized to receive bonds drawing interest and well secured for the land when sold. Either land or substantial bondsmen were accepted for security. The bonds were to run to A. B. & Co., trustees, and their successors in said trust. The interest was to be paid annually by the trustees to the selectmen, or such men as the town should select. The following is a copy of the agreement entered into between the town and the ministers.

"We, ye Subscribers, Consent y't ye ministry Land within ye Township of Sutton be converted into a money Fund for ye use of ye ministry in s'd Town for Ever, and where, as now, we have, by way of Lease Ten pounds old Ten'r we consent that ye Remainder of what ye Lawful Intrest of ye money ye Land shall sell for— Shall amount to, be divided Between ye Town and ministers now Incumbent s'd one half with ye Ten pounds as above To be divided between ye ministers Incumbent judged to have Right thereto as Law or Equity or personal agreement according to ye Right they now have to ye use and Improvement of s'd Land shall determine; the other half to be ye Town's property during our ministry, provided we have annually paid us out of ye Town Treasury ye s'd one half and ye Ten pounds old Ten'r.

The committee appointed to sell the ministerial land were instructed to give the purchasers deeds in the name of the town and the ministers united in the conveyance by signing the deed.

On March 12, 1761, at ten minutes past two in the morning, a shock of earthquake was felt lasting nearly two minutes when constant jarring and trembling was felt. On August 6, a record stated that "a parching drought prevails the like of which New England never heard."

A year later, August 8, 1762, the drought was still severely felt and the pastures withered.

On March 7, 1763, the town clerk of Sutton (Benjamin Morse) was instructed to transcribe the births, marriages, and deaths into a bound book provided for that purpose, thus establishing a vital record for the town.

As early as 1770 an effort was made to have a portion of the town meetings held in the Second Parish, for at a town meeting held May 1, during that year, a test vote was taken to see if consent would be given for holding any of the future Town Meetings in the Second Parish of Sutton, but the vote was in the negative. The reason for the effort, no doubt, was that it seemed unfair to require the inhabitants of the Second Parish to perform all the extra travel and that it would be a relief to them to have a portion of the meetings held in their part of the town.

The inhabitants of Millbury early assisted in supporting the poor of the Town for, on May 20, 1771, it was voted to raise eighty pounds to be used in caring for them.

On January 11, 1773, a special town meeting was called "to see if the Town will hear the Request of the Town of Boston." (Concerning the alleged infringement of charter privileges.) Capt. John Sibley, Lieut. Daniel Trask, Deacon Ebenezer Pierce, Messrs. Edward Putnam, Daniel Marsh, Nathan Putnam, and Willis Hall were chosen as a committee to consider the several articles of grievances, imposed on this Government by the British Parliament, as represented in a printed pamphlet from the Town of Boston and to make report at the adjournment of the meeting. They reported as follows:

"We do apprehend that our Charter Privileges are Infringed in many Instances and that there is just Cause of Complaint: Therefore we think it advisable that this Town recommend to Capt. Henry King the Representative of this Town in General Assembly, that he use his best Influence with his Brethren, the members of s'd Assembly, that a humble and pungant address be made to his Majesty and Court at home—that we may Obtain redress under such pressing and alarming Grievances. Further, that whereas it has been thought that the Judges of the Superior Court have not had salaries adequate to their Important service that he make due Enquiry into that matter, and if he should find it to be fact, that he use his utmost Endeavours that their Salaries may be enlarged and made Adequate to their Merit and Station."

At a town meeting called, in 1774, to see if the voters would grant money to supply the town with arms and ammunition, it was voted to grant the sum of forty-two pounds, ten shillings.

On Sept. 26, "Edward Putnam was chosen a Delegate to meet and act with the General Congress of the Province; when and where they shall meet." It was recommended that the military companies in the town choose their own officers, as the commissioned officers had proposed to resign.

On January 5, 1775, Capt. Henry King and Elder Amos Singletary were chosen to represent Sutton in the Provincial Congress to be held at Cambridge, Feb. 1, 1775. This meeting was of unusual importance because the action taken plainly represents that the citizens were in favor of espousing the patriots' cause. The town voted to approve what the Continental Congress had done and to adopt the Association of the Continental Congress.

This first Continental Congress was the mouthpiece of the colonies. It expressed in terms that could not be mistaken a common determination to resist the aggressions of the British Parliament. The "Association," so-called, took the character of legislation and proved to be effective. This forbade the importation of goods from England or from the English colonies. Resolutions were passed and penalties laid in many places to enforce this among the towns in the colonies.

A Committee of Inspection was chosen to see that the Association of the Continental Congress be duly observed and the following were selected, namely: Arthur Dagget, Edward Putnam, Samuel Marble, Asa Waters, Abraham Waters, Capt. Samuel Sibley and Mr. Seth Chase. The following notable instruction was by a vote given the constable "that he shall pay no monies due to the Province to Harrison Gray, Esq.," who was then the collector of taxes for His Majesty. It was voted to indemnify the constables upon conformity to such orders. It was voted that the representatives be instructed not to do anything inconsistent with what the Continental Congress had done.

Capt. Moody Morse, Messrs. Stephen Prince, Willis Hall, Abraham Waters, Captain Trask and William Waite were selected as a "Committee on Donations."

It was voted to raise thirty-two pounds with which to purchase a stock of ammunition.

On January 16, it was voted "that the assessors of the town make return of the assessment of the Province tax granted by the General Court last May to Henry Gardner, Esq., of Stow; and to defend the assessors in so doing."

It was voted "that the minute-men be provided with a bayonet and other accoutrements agreeable to the advice of the Provincial Congress, that all others from sixteen to sixty years of age be equipped according to the Province Law, or may get bayonets in room of swords or cutlashes if they please, and that every householder provide himself according to law."

It was voted that all alarm men, "who shall neglect or refuse to be equipped according to law, and to bring or send their arms and ammunition into the field upon a time appointed for receiving arms, shall be treated as those that transgress the Association of the Continental Congress and shall be treated by the Committee of Inspection as such."

For nearly seventy years prior to the incorporation of Millbury, the sires of this North, or Second, Parish of Sutton performed no small part in forwarding in their own sphere of activity the great political movements which were stirring the hearts of the colonists everywhere and which resulted in securing the freedom of the American colonies and the establishment of a national government. Besides places occupied in the camp and on the field the citizens rendered valuable service by serving on important committees at home and in supporting the struggles of the men in the army.

News that the British troops had marched to Lexington and Concord, April 19, 1775, and that blood had been shed caused great excitement among the inhabitants who then realized that the hope of an adjustment of differences between the colonies and the mother country without a resort to arms was gone. The men who had faced the dangers and privations of pioneer life, however, were not lacking in courage to assert their rights and to contend vigorously in maintaining them.

On May 22, 1775, Capt. Henry King and Amos Singletery were elected delegates to the "Provincial Congress to meet at Watertown on the thirty-first day of May, instant, and for six months after, to serve alternately but one at a time." On Sept. 18, Lieut. William King and Elder Amos Singletery were nominated justices of the peace.

On February 3, 1776, twenty-four soldiers, in addition to those previously furnished, were raised and set off for camp.

On March 4, Capt. Moody Morse, deacon Willis Hall, Nathan Putnam, Col. Timothy Sibley, deacon Ebenezer Pierce, David Holman, and Capt. James Greenwood were chosen on the committee of Correspondence, Inspection and Safety, for the year ensuing.

On July 1, 1776, it was voted "that if the honorable Congress should, for the safety of the colonies, declare them independent of the Kingdom of Great Britain the inhabitants of this town will solemnly engage with their lives and fortunes to support them in the measure."

On July 8, 1776, William King, Tarrant Putnam, Enoch Marble, Ebenezer Pierce and Daniel Greenwood were chosen as a committee to adjust to every person his equal part for service done in the defense of America since April 19, 1775.

On March 3, 1777, Capt. Jonathan Carriel, Capt. Bartholomew Woodbury, Lieut. Enoch Marble, Lieut. March Chase, Mr. Jonas Bond, Lieut. David Holman, and Capt. Elisha Goddard were chosen as the committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety for that year. It was voted that "the sum of twenty-five pounds be paid by the town to every soldier of this town, that has or shall enlist to go into the Continental army, then being raised, until the town's quota for said army be completed, provided he has not received equivalent in some other way." On May 19, 1777, Willis Hall and Amos Singletery were chosen representatives to the General Court.

On Jan. 5, 1778, the articles of confederation proposed by Congress were read, and a committee, consisting of Capt. King, deacon Pierce, Mr. Nathan Putnam, Col. Holman and Lieut. Asa Waters was chosen to peruse and consider the articles and to make report at an adjourned meeting.

It was voted to raise three thousand pounds to diminish the town's proportion of the public debt. On January 9, the committee chosen to consider the Articles of Confederation reported that, "In their opinion they should be complied with by this Town." The town voted unanimously to accept the report of the committee.

Upon the petition of certain inhabitants of Sutton, Worcester, Leicester and Oxford that they be incorporated into a separate town, the General Assembly appointed a committee to view the territory and issued a citation to the several towns to confer with this Committee.

On February 2, the town chose deacon Ebenezer Pierce, Capt. Elisha Goddard, Col. Jonathan Holman, as agents to meet this committee and to enter the town's objections maintaining that the proposed town should not be incorporated a town.

On February 18, the town chose deacon Ebenezer Pierce, Mr. Asa Waters, and Mr. Ebenezer Waters as a standing committee to take action in behalf of the town "to prevent a part of this town at the northwest corner being set off (against its will) according to a line ordered to be run by the Honorable Court's Committee on the fifth Day of February instant."

On March 2, deacon David Harwood, Dr. Benjamin Morse, Mr. Abel Dudley, Mr. Moses Bancroft, and Mr. Josiah Goddard were chosen on the "Committee of Correspondence, Inspection and Safety" for the year. On April 13, Capt. John Sibley, deacon Ebenezer Pierce and Lieut. Asa Waters were chosen as a committee "to report the reason why the town does not accept the new form of government." On May 18, it was voted to grant three hundred fifty-eight pounds, eight shillings to pay for clothing which the selectmen promised for the Continental soldiers.

On March 1, 1779, Ebenezer Waters, John Elliot and Nehemiah Gale were chosen on the "Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety." On June 21,

Lieut. William King, Ensign Nathaniel Carriel, Lieut. Joseph Elliot, Jr., Samuel Waters, deacon Willis Hall, John Harback, Joseph Waters, Dr. James Freeland, James Bond, Nehemiah Gale, and deacon Asa Waters were chosen as a committee "to procure men to serve in the Continental Army."

On July 5, the town chose Dr. Willis Hall and Ebenezer Waters as a committee "to represent the town in the State Convention to be held at Concord on July 14 and to make a report to the town of the proceedings."

On August 2, their report was received and accepted. Deacon Asa Waters and Mr. Ebenezer Waters were chosen to attend a county convention to be held at Worcester the first Tuesday in August, for the purpose of regulating the prices of labor and various articles of necessity.

On August 17, the following named persons were chosen as a committee to act in connection with the committee of Correspondence for the purpose of carrying into effect the resolutions of the state and county conventions, namely,—Lieut. Nathaniel Whitmore, Mr. Nathan Putnam, Col. Timothy Sibley, Follansbee Chase, Capt. Moody Morse, Lieut. Caleb Chase, Lieut. James Prentice, Capt. Samuel Trask, Mr. Jonas Bond, Mr. Jona. Kidder, Capt. James Greenwood, and Lieut. Simeon Haywood.

On August 23, Ebenezer Waters was chosen to represent the town at a convention held at Concord in October.

On September 23, the town voted that those persons who appear to be inimical to the cause of America "shall not be employed in any public business in this town" and it was also voted that "if any person shall speak anything against the Regulating Acts he shall be called to account by the committee and dealt with according to his crime."

On October 19, Stephen Prince, Dea. Aaron Elliot, Caleb Marsh, Thomas Todd, Jonathan Gould, Abijah Tainter, Capt. James Greenwood, John Waters, Abel Dudley, John Dudley and Benjamin Hicks were chosen to procure twenty-three men to fill the town's quota for three months' service. November 22, it was "voted to raise one thousand pounds for supporting those families whose husbands are in the Continental service for three years or during the war."

It was voted to raise three thousand, five hundred fifty-eight pounds to pay those soldiers who were procured to serve three months in the Continental Army.

It was voted to raise four hundred forty-two pounds to pay the soldiers whom the officers procured in the previous September to go to Rhode Island and serve two months. On March 6, 1780, Maj. Bartholomew Woodbury, Mr. John Dudley, and Mr. Jonathan Gould were chosen as the "committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety."

On April 10, Lieut. William King, Ensign Nathaniel Carriel, Lieut. Joseph Elliot, Jr., Mr. Samuel Waters, deacon Willis Hall, Mr. John Harback, Mr. Joseph Waters, Dr. James Freeland, Mr. Jonas Bond, Nehemiah Gale, and deacon Asa Waters were chosen as a committee to settle with the nine-months men, since their time had nearly expired.

On May 1, Dea. Tarrant Putnam, Lieut. Wm. King, deacon Asa Waters, Capt. March Chase, Col. Jonathan Holman, Col. Timothy Sibley, Elder Jeremiah Barstow, Dr. James Freeland, and Elder Daniel Greenwood were selected as a committee "to consider the Constitution and make a report to the Town of what they do approve of and what they do not approve of." At an adjourned meeting Elder Jeremiah Barstow, deacon Willis Hall, deacon David Harwood, deacon Rice, and Mr. Abel Chase were chosen to consider the third article in the Bill of Rights and to make report to the town. On May 22, it was "voted to grant the sum of nine thousand pounds to pay the Nine months men." On June 12, in answer to a requisition made on the town (Sutton) by the General Court for thirty-six soldiers to serve in the Continental Army, Lieut. Nathaniel Whitmore, Lieut. Bartholomew Hutchinson, Lieut. Nathaniel Putnam, Ensign Samuel Rich, Lieut. John Woodbury, Mr. John Hall, Lieut. David Putnam, Lieut. Ezra Lovell, Mr. John Gould, Sergt. David Chase, and Mr. Moses Hovey were chosen as a committee to procure the men. On June 26, it was "voted to grant the sum of twenty thousand pounds to pay the six months men." It was voted to grant the sum of twelve thousand pounds to procure forty-two men out of the militia to serve three months in the army." On October 9, it was "voted to raise the sum of fifty-three thousand, five hundred pounds to enable the committee to settle with the six months and the three months men now in the Continental service."

On October 16, Capt. March Chase, Mr. Moses Hovey, and Mr. John Hall were chosen as a committee to procure seventeen thousand five hundred twenty pounds of beef for the army, and twenty-five thousand pounds were voted to enable the committee to purchase the beef. (The great depreciation of colonial money accounts for the seemingly high price paid for the meat. The colonial money was as low as two hundred to one when in use and in places it was worthless.)

On December 4, each taxpayer who wished to do so was allowed to pay his rate in grain. The allowance for corn was fixed at twelve pounds per bushel and for rice at eighteen pounds per bushel. The price of the commodity only goes to show the very low value of continental money.

On December 18, the town voted that one-third of all the town meetings, both stated and occasional, be held in the meetinghouse of the Second Parish.

A requisition was made upon Sutton for thirty-three thousand six hundred forty pounds of beef. Capt. March Chase, Mr. John Hall, and Mr. Moses Hovey were chosen as a committee to purchase the amount and fifty thousand, four hundred sixty pounds were appropriated to meet the expense. At nearly the same time a call came from the General Court asking the town to furnish thirty-one men to serve for three years in the Continental Army or during the war. Col. Timothy Sibley, Capt. Abijah Burbank, Capt. John Putnam, Capt. Andrew Elliot, Lieut. Solomon Leland, Mr. Abraham Batchellor, Jr., Dr. James Freeland, and Mr. Ebenezer Waters were chosen as a committee "to class out the town into classes in order to procure the thirty-one men for the Continental Army." At an adjourned meeting, the town "voted that if any person in any of the classes refuses to pay his proportion as assessed in the class he belongs to he shall be assessed his proportion as he was in said class, and half as much more."

Other demands were made upon Sutton to which the inhabitants responded with commendable alacrity. It had been a fearful struggle in which the resources of the country had become well-nigh exhausted. The dark cloud of war passed away, however, and on the thirteenth of November, 1781, a considerable number of people assembled at the "Sign of the Soldier" to celebrate the day in great rejoicing on account of the capture of Gen. Cornwallis and his army, who had surrendered to the American forces under Gen. Washington at Yorktown on October 19, thus virtually terminating the war for the independence of America. "The Massachusetts Spy", in its account of the proceedings on that day, gives the reader to understand that well-nigh every demonstration of joy within the power of the participants was shown. The following toasts were drunk:

1. "Those Noble Patriots Convened in Congress";
2. "His Excellency, General Washington";
3. "The Most Christian Majesty, Louis XVI";
4. "The Count de Grasse and the Combined Fleets";
5. "General Greene with his Veterans and Heroes";
6. "Peace and Unanimity in the Allied Army";
7. "May All Malicious Pimps of British George and lovers of Tyranny Be Swept Off with the Besom of the Thirteen United States of America";

8. "May the Traitor Arnold and All his Accomplices be Suspended between Heaven and Earth, as Unworthy of Either";
9. "May America Maintain her Independence until Time shall be No More";
10. "May those heroes, who have Nobly Bled in Defence of their Country be Heard of in Nations Unknown and Ever be remembered in Ages to Come";
11. "May Peace on Honorable Terms Diffuse Itself throughout the Continent of America, like the Lustre of the Rising Sun";
12. "May Friendship Universally Extend and Actuate Every Human Breast throughout the World";
13. "May Consummate Happiness be the Reward of Heroic Actions."

On March 4, 1782, ensign Nathaniel Carriel, Capt. Joseph Sibley, and Mr. Jonas Bond were chosen to serve on the Committee of "Correspondence, Inspection and Safety." On November 12, Follansbee Chase, Capt. March Chase, Mr. Josiah Gooddard, and John Pierce were added to the above committee. It was also voted at the meeting that this committee "be particularly watchful of those who are suspected of being concerned in fraud or intercourse with the enemy and to communicate any discoveries they may make to the Attorney General."

On January 20, 1783, the town voted to instruct its representative not to allow the Continental officers any sum of money as one-half pay, or any other thing in lieu thereof, and to use his influence to secure a repeal of the "Tender Act."

In 1784, ensign Nathaniel Carriel, Moody Morse, Jr., and Jonas Bond were chosen as the "Committee of Correspondence, Inspection and Safety." Deacon Willis Hall, Ebenezer Waters and Daniel Greenwood were chosen delegates to attend the county convention held at Worcester on Tuesday, the third day of March.

In 1785, Joseph Hall, Deacon Willis Hall, Ebenezer Waters, Deacon Asa Waters, and Amos Singletary, Esq., were chosen as a committee "to draft a petition to send to the General Court praying for a committee to visit the Town" upon condition that the taxes shall not be settled according to the last valuation.

MILLBURY FROM BURBANK HILL

On January 9, 1786, the town voted to instruct its representative to use his influence to bring forward a Tender Act, "that Real and Personal Estate may answer Executions and that it stand two years."

On September 25, deacon Harwood, Lieut. Whitmore, Ebenezer Rich, Squire Singletary, and Nathan Putnam were chosen to instruct the delegates to the county convention and also the representative to the General Court. A vote was also passed that the delegates ascertain, if possible, whether the grievances, arising from the disturbed condition following the Revolutionary War, stated in the convention really exist to any great degree and bear generally upon the people of the country and use their influence to prevent any rising of the people in riotous manner, but persevere in petitioning the General Court for a redress of grievances and not dissolve the convention until the same be obtained, "for it is our minds that it is every way agreeable to the constitution." They also recommended that the General Court move out of Boston to some commodious part of the country and that the seat of government in Boston be sold to the best advantage to pay public charges or to build a seat of government in the country.

In the years 1786 and following, serious disturbances interfered with the operation of the legal machinery that had been set up in the new republic. States threatened to separate and opposition was repulsed by measures that were but little short of bloodshed. In Massachusetts, concerted violence prevented the courts from sitting and an organized force of insurgents under Capt. Shays threatened to destroy the state government. There were many mutterings against the state officials over the failure to pay the claims of the men who had been engaged in the Revolutionary armies, the men of Sutton being conspicuous in their insistence upon securing their rights.

The sentiment was expressed that the Court of Common Pleas under its mode of procedure was "a scourge to the people." Sutton delegates were further instructed to use their influence that the servants of the government be put on such footing as will be for the interest of the people. If such efforts as those represented in the Shays' Rebellion and in the interference with the courts had been successful, the newly formed union would have amounted to little as a government. The Massachusetts authorities were barely able to restore order and the men in Congress really went beyond their constitutional power then vested in the States in their efforts to assist.

On Dec. 4, Capt. Jonathan Woodbury, Capt. John Woodbury, Colonel Woodbury, Deacon Harwood, Elder Greenwood, Lieutenant Hazeltine, Lieutenant Whitmore, Col. Jonathan Holman, and Captain Smith were chosen as a committee to treat with the court of Common Pleas and also with the men engaged in Shays' Rebellion (who were also known as Insurgents).

On January 15, 1787, at a town meeting the report and request, dated Dec. 7, 1786, of a committee in behalf of the "Regulators," who would adjust matters independently of the government, was presented. Amos Singletary, Esq., deacon Harwood, Capt. John Woodbury, Lieutenant Whitmore, Ensign Carriel, Squire King, and Elder Greenwood were chosen to give instructions to the representatives and delegates, but at an adjourned meeting, held January 17, it was voted that the delegates to the convention be instructed to dissolve.

On January 24, 'squire Singletary, deacon Harwood, and Colonel Woodbury were chosen "to treat with the Hon. Gen. Lincoln to see if there could be any plan of accommodation laid to settle matters between Government and the 'Regulators' as they called themselves." It was also voted to instruct the representative to use his influence in "General Court that any man may be permitted to keep a half score of sheep that may not be liable to be taken from him by warrant or execution."

On March 22, Ezra Wheelock, Nathaniel Carriel, Daniel Greenwood, Jedediah Barton, Follansbee Chase, Bartholomew Woodbury, John Pierce, Asa Goodale, Stephen Marsh and Noah Stockwell, who had been engaged in this rebellion, took the oath of allegiance in compliance with a court act dated February 16, 1787.

On March 5, 1792, the town voted to dismiss the trustees that had the care of the ministerial and school money and to commit the same into the hands of the town treasurer.

On January 14, 1793, Jonathan Kidder, Samuel Blanchard, and Arthur Dagget asked to be set off "from the town of Sutton to be annexed to the town of Oxford." They also petitioned the General Court to be set off and the latter issued an order for the town to show cause why the petition should not be granted. Amos Singletary, Esq., was chosen to appear before the General Court and to show cause why the petitioners should not be set off and the subject was not continued further.

On February 9, 1797, the people of the North, or Second, Parish made a demand upon the First Parish for eight hundred dollars, as their portion of the ministry money; and, on March 20, the clerk of the First Parish was instructed to send the following reply, "The Society, after taking into consideration the demand made on them by Mr. Aaron Pierce, Josiah Stiles, and Lieut. Asa Goodale, agents for the North Parish in Sutton, for eight hundred dollars of the Ministry money, dated February 9, 1797, voted that this Society will adopt such measures respecting the demand as it conceives will be consistent with the honor and interests of the Society. With regard to that part of the demand which proposes a friendly negotiation as the most probable means of settling such claims to the mutual satisfaction of both parties: it is the determination of this Society to cultivate friendship and good neighborhood with the North Parish and with the Town in general upon fair and honorable principles. But it is the opinion of this Society that it can not with propriety enter into a separate negotiation with the North Parish upon the subject until the lawsuit between the Town and this Society respecting the ministry money shall be finally determined."

At a town meeting held November 5, 1798, "The question was put to see if the Town would grant the petition of the North Parish to be set off and incorporated into a separate Town with their equal proportion according to taxation, with all the privileges and immunities which in any wise belong to the Town of Sutton," but it was decided in the negative. A committee was, however, chosen consisting of Colonel Holman, Capt. Jonathan Woodbury, deacon Waters, Josiah Stiles, Ebenezer Waters, Asa Goodale, Colonel Woodbury, Maj. Samuel Waters and Colonel Sibley to treat with the North Parish with reference to the separation. On May 6, 1799, the committee reported in favor of "setting off the North Parish as a separate Town, but the town voted not to accept the report of the committee."

On Nov. 20, 1809, a committee was chosen to draw up a remonstrance to be presented to the General Court against the incorporation of the Second Parish of Sutton as a separate town.

On May 7, 1810, the town of Sutton gave consent that one-third part of the town meetings be held in the Second Parish on condition that the parish withdraw the petition to the General Court, seeking incorporation as a separate town.

On Jan. 21, 1811, the town voted to continue its remonstrance at the General Court against the incorporation of the Second Parish into a town; and, with the object, perhaps, of making its case a little stronger, a vote was passed stating that the town would not consent to incorporation.

In 1812, the Second Parish demanded a portion of the ministerial money, one half of the whole then in the treasury, and it also voted that Lieut. Asa Goodale, Josiah Stiles, Esq., and Aaron Pierce, Esq., be a committee to serve the clerk of the First Congregational Society of Sutton with a copy of the vote and to ask and receive on behalf of the Second Parish its portion of the fund.

The message was delivered March 10, 1812, and a reply received as follows:

“To Lt. Asa Goodale, Josiah Stiles, and Aaron Pierce, Esq., Gentlemen:

Having been appointed by the First Congregational Society of Sutton at their Annual Meeting in March last to present to you an answer to your request: in conformity to the votes of the Second Parish in Sutton at their meeting held March 9, 1812, to the first Congregational Society in Sutton for the one-half of the Ministerial fund now in the hands of the Treasurer of said Society.

“In answer to your demand we can only say that in consequence of so unexpected request, we have examined the charter of the Town, the Proprietor’s Book, and the Town Records, and can find nothing to justify a compliance with your demand, and unless you can, gentlemen, show us some ground either in justice, or law, we cannot comply with your request.”

“Agents for the First Congregational Society in Sutton.

Sutton, April 8, 1812.”

On January 11, 1813, the inhabitants of the North Parish continued to press their petition before the General Court for an act of incorporation, and the people of the south part of Sutton renewed their remonstrance against the act. Nevertheless, the petitioners were this time successful and permission was given the Second Parish, embracing the territory now known as Millbury, to be set off as a separate town.

CHAPTER IV
SOLDIERS OF THE COLONIAL STRUGGLE; OF THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR; AND OF THE WAR OF 1812.

The earliest military records of Millbury families are included manifestly in the chronicles concerning Sutton. The following names that are enumerated include many, if not all, of those who took part in the pre-Revolutionary struggles and who were living within the territory that was later set off as Millbury.

Elijah Waters lost his life in 1758 in the struggle that was waged in America in behalf of the mother country in its conflict with France. Benjamin Gowing, for whom the Gowing Bridge over the Blackstone River, near the N. Y., N. H., and H. railroad station, was named, was one of three thousand men who, in 1755, sailed from Boston under generals Moncton and Winslow for Chignecto, N. S., on the Bay of Fundy, where they were joined by British troops and took part in the campaign which won Nova Scotia from the French for the British.

Col. Jonathan Holman, who later served with distinction in the Revolutionary War, carried a musket in this early campaign and the old fire-arm is still in possession of the family.

Among the heroes of the French and Indian Wars was Capt. Samuel Trask whose old home (now owned by Mr. Henry W. Davidson) is still standing at West Millbury. It is said that when the tidings of a threatened incursion of British troops reached Sutton he ordered his boys to saddle his horse and bring the animal to the front door where the captain soon appeared. Mounting his steed he called his family about him and taking off his hat said, "Let us ask God's blessing." When the prayer was over he bade each and all a warm "Good-bye" and spurred away toward Boston.

The following is a list of Millbury's Colonial soldiers with the addition of a few names of those who lived in other parts of the mother town of Sutton but whose remains rest in this town.

Jonathan Barnard	James Greenwood
Joshua Barnard	John Haywood
Edmund Barton	John Holland
Elisha Barton	David Holman

In the series of events which preceded the outbreak of the Revolutionary War the men living in the North Parish of Sutton shared with their compatriots of other towns the independent spirit of the times and they supported the Colonial government by force of arms because they were convinced that the American position was the true one. The strife on the part of the inhabitants seemed to be more against the attitude assumed by the British Parliament and officials than against England itself. The government of England claimed the right to tax the colonies, but the Colonists objected to the levying of any internal tax by the mother country, although they acquiesced in the external tax collected on imports. The English government sent over new governors and, finally, additional troops were despatched to overawe and, if necessary, to coerce the colonists into an acceptance of the demands of the parent nation. Charters were even modified in their scope by Parliamentary action.

On their part the colonists set up a parallel activity. In 1772, in the Boston town-meeting, it was proposed that a "committee of correspondence be appointed . . . to state the Rights of the Colonists and of this Province in particular as Men, as Christians, and as Subjects:—and also request of each town a free communication of their sentiments on this subject." (Hence we find in the mother town of Sutton a committee of Correspondence.) In 1774, the first Continental Congress met and voiced the common feeling of the colonies and crystalized the common sentiment which looked toward independence.

As this parallel activity developed, the opposition of the colonists became more determined and well-organized. Corresponding to the crown government was the Continental Congress, corresponding to the governors were the patriotic leaders and corresponding to the British soldiery were the minute-men who were organized in every community and held themselves ready to start forth on an alarm.

As early as September, 1774, citizens from the North Parish of Sutton responded to an alarm from Boston that was occasioned by the removal of three hundred barrels of gun-powder which had been kept in the arsenal at Charlestown. Messengers from that city brought tidings of this action and spread an alarm that the powder was to be used against the people of New England in forcing them to surrender to the drastic action of General Gage who was stationed at Boston. The affray of March 5, 1770, which has been called the "Boston Massacre" was still fresh in men's minds, although it was an insignificant matter in itself being occasioned by abusive threats between a mob and a squad of soldiers, which finally provoked the soldiers to fire and kill five of the citizens. Men flocked to arms and thousands started for Boston. The alarm, however, proved to be a needless one; but as a result of the general response General Gage recognized the seriousness of his position so that he "speedily began to fortify the entrance to the town (Boston) to prevent a surprise from the enemy without." This early response to the alarm of 1774 shows how keenly alert the men of Sutton were to the exigencies of the hour.

On the nineteenth of April, 1775, an alarm from Lexington came to the minute-men of Sutton who started out at once for the scene of conflict, but Roxbury Camp was as far as the Sutton companies went. The minute-men of Concord and of Lexington, however, confronted British troops who retreated to Boston.

The following is a list of those who went out from the town of Sutton on the Lexington alarm. Altogether in the colony about ten thousand minute-men responded to this alarm.

Below is a list of those who served in the War of the Revolution, including the names of a few who lived in the South Parish of Sutton but whose remains have been interred in Millbury cemeteries. The records of those who went out on the Lexington alarm are accessible but an account of those who served later in the war is not easy to procure. In some cases, too, a name has been found and presumably the right record is given although in a few instances this has not been without some uncertainty as several names in the list of Massachusetts men would be the same. Terms of enlistment were short because both colonial and state governments were embarrassed for funds and each Province or Colony was jealous about having its own militia come under any but its own officers.

In reality the Revolutionary soldiery was the irregular armed force which sought to repel the British troops. The American soldier depended upon the rising but still uncertain government which had been created parallel to and as a successor of the previously established British rule. The struggle, in short, was a Civil War in which the colonists won the fruits of victory.

A record of Massachusetts soldiers in the Revolution has been published but its volumes are so bulky that it is in few private libraries. It may be consulted, however, in the larger, well-appointed libraries throughout the state.

Putnam for the war; also private, Capt. Job Whipple's co., Col. Putnam's reg't in 1781.

For the War of 1812, in Millbury, as well as in many other Massachusetts towns, few soldiers enlisted.

Only Ithran Harris and Nathaniel Waters are on record as going from this town. Mr. Harris was a justice of the peace, and for years afterward was commonly known as Judge Harris. Mr. Waters was the progenitor of Edwin D. Waters, a member of the 25th Mass. Reg't, who died in the Civil war.

CHAPTER V

CHARACTERISTICS AND SURVEY

As we have seen in a preceding chapter, for many years prior to 1813, the inhabitants of the North, or Second, Parish of Sutton had seriously considered its establishment as a separate town. From the extremes in the northern section it was a considerable distance to the First Parish meeting-house for attending town meetings and, although the difficulty was compromised by having a third of the meetings in the North Parish, this arrangement only served as a concession to the fact that attendance at Sutton center was inconvenient for many. Mills had sprung up in the North Parish, so that the interests of many of its leading citizens and other inhabitants were away from the agricultural life, and the future of the parish seemed to lie in these industries.

At the time of its incorporation Millbury had a population of five hundred, embraced in one hundred and sixty families. The farms had not been brought completely under cultivation and bridle paths in places were still used. Wages, both on the farms and in the mills, were small, but the industries of the section promised abundant support for the future.

At this time (to quote from an annotation made in his copy of the Sutton History by the late Colonel Waters) "a town meeting was called to determine upon a name for the new town. A proposition was introduced to call it Moscow. There is a tradition that Gen. Caleb Burbank, then one of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of the town, strongly protested and said the name had to him unpleasant associations. That when he was a boy his father bought a cow of 'Old Morse' over in Sutton and she was called the 'Morse cow' and she was an ugly kicking 'critter' and as for calling the town Morse-cow, he couldn't stand it and he wouldn't. And he did not. This tradition of this peculiar man is somewhat apocryphal, but it is probably true that he prevented the name of 'Moscow' from being adopted and he deserves the thanks of all succeeding generations." (Moscow, the Russian city, had been occupied by Napoleon and his army and had been burned during the year preceding this town meeting.)

The name "Millbury" was suggested as a designation for the town by General Burbank. The word expressed the characteristics of the new town and the people at once recognized its fitness.

After previous unsuccessful attempts at incorporation, a bill, which had previously passed both houses of the Legislature, was signed June 11, 1813, by the governor, giving the North, or Second, Parish the right to become the separate town of Millbury.

The following is a copy of the Act of Incorporation for the town of Millbury:

"June 11, 1813, An Act to Incorporate the North Parish in the Town of Sutton into a separate town by the name of Millbury.

"Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court Assembled and by authority of the same.— That all the lands comprised within the North Parish in the town of Sutton, in the county of Worcester as the same is now bounded together with the farm on which Joshua Chase now lives in said town, with all inhabitants dwelling thereon, be and they hereby are incorporated with all the powers, privileges and immunities and subject to all the duties and requirements of other incorporated towns agreeably to the constitution and laws of this Commonwealth.

"Sec. 2. Be it further enacted: That the inhabitants of said town of Millbury shall be holden to pay all the arrears of taxes which have been assessed upon them by the town of Sutton; and shall also support and maintain all such persons as heretofore have been, now are, or hereafter may be inhabitants of that part of Sutton hereby incorporated, and are or may become chargeable according to the laws of this Commonwealth, and who have not obtained a settlement elsewhere therein.

“Sec. 3. Be it further enacted that the inhabitants of the said town of Millbury shall be entitled to receive and hold such proportion of all real and personal property of the said town of Sutton of what kind soever it may be, now owned in common by the inhabitants of said town as the property of the inhabitants of Millbury bears to the property of all the inhabitants of the said town of Sutton according to the last valuation thereof; and shall also be holden to pay their proportion (to be ascertained as aforesaid) of all the debts now due and owing from the said town of Sutton and the inhabitants, and the inhabitants of said Millbury or any religious society therein shall furthermore be entitled to receive and hold such proportion as they are now entitled to, if any, of the ministerial money raised by the sale of ministerial lands in said Sutton which money is now in the hands of the First Congregational Society in Sutton.

“Sec. 4. Be it further enacted: That in case the dividing line between the said town of Millbury and said town of Sutton should happen to divide the farms of any of the inhabitants of either of said towns the said inhabitants shall be taxed for the whole of their home farms in that town only where they may respectively dwell.

“Sec. 5. Be it further enacted: That any Justice of the Peace for the county of Worcester upon application therefor is hereby authorized to issue his warrant, directed to any freeholder in said town of Millbury requiring him to notify and warn the inhabitants thereof to meet at such time and place as may be appointed in said warrant for the choice of all such town officers as towns are by law required to choose at their annual town meetings.

There have been three distinct eras in the industrial development of Millbury. The first period was that of the small, independent mill having few, often not more than one, engaged in its operation. This stage was marked by small water power at each privilege for, with ruder water wheels and with no call for all the available power, the streams were not utilized to their full capacity.

The second era included the time of Millbury's beginning as a separate town and it was characterized by increased development of water privileges on the Singletary and on the Blackstone. Two families stand out at this period as thus centralizing the water power resources on these streams. On the Singletary the Burbank family gained possession of the privileges on the stream and developed them further, constructing additional reservoirs for making steady the flow of water at the mills, the height of Singletary pond was raised and the unequal rainfall of the year equalized as much as possible. On the Blackstone River the brothers, Elijah Waters and Asa Waters, Jr., acquired what power had already been utilized on that stream, at the location where the armory was built, and after the death of the elder brother, Asa, Jr. developed other privileges on the river within the town, viz: the Stillwater (Felt Mill) and the Cordis, as well as one in Sutton at Wilkinsonville, bringing all to a high state of efficiency.

In the third period the industries again divide into separate ownership and each is still further developed by the use of steam in addition to water power. For fifty years there has been until recently but little addition to the power thus developed at these various industries, presumably because of the limitations of the water power and the cost of hauling coal at a distance. Without ushering in a markedly new era, recent years have seen another step in advance which offers greater possibilities for growth in the introduction of electric power which is generated on the great Connecticut River and its branches. This supplements the local water-power cheaply, regardless of the distance of the factory from railroad transportation.

The men of early Millbury lived in a day when there was little to divert their attention to outside interests. Paper was expensive, so that newspapers were few and private correspondence was uncommon. Not all knew how to read, so that what papers and books there were meant comparatively little to many of the people. Journeys were taken either on foot, on horse-back, or in the comparatively slow-moving stage-coach. Those who read had few books and those who travelled went to comparatively few places. The result was that most of the people stayed closely at home, occupied with their immediate labors.

With this circumscribed life the men of early Millbury looked into their tasks rather than abroad from them, hence we find that the vital interests and the mental activity of those early workmen showed itself in a mastery of their tasks and in inventions of improved processes.

The first paper mill in Central Massachusetts was built in Millbury by Abijah Burbank.

The only powder mill in this section of the county in the early days of the Revolution was erected by the Province on the property of Mr. Burbank, and was operated by Asa Waters, Sr.

William Crompton perfected his first fancy loom here, an invention that has revolutionized weaving throughout the industrial world and has lessened the price of clothing in all civilized countries.

The process of welding gun-barrels under triphammers and a lathe for turning out gun-barrels of regular size were invented by Asa Waters, 2d, who made several other useful inventions.

Thomas Blanchard lived within the limits of Millbury when he developed his inventive genius in boyhood. It was here that he invented his tack-making machine that gave him a start in prosperity and it was here that he invented his eccentric lathe that revolutionized gun-making and later affected every shop in which irregular forms were made or used. His inventions, together with those of others, led to the development of the system of the interchangeability of parts in machines, guns, etc., which has meant so much in the manufacture of all machinery from the watch to the saw-mill.

Hervey Waters in Millbury invented a pin-making machine and a machine for sticking the manufactured pins into paper in rows. He also invented the process for rolling scythe and bayonet blades so that much hand labor was saved and these implements could be made more cheaply.

Thomas Kendall, Jr., a Millbury man, first made the thermometer a practical instrument, thus making his influence felt in every house, factory and store of the land.

In the perfecting of the telegraph Samuel F. B. Morse was assisted by Dr. Leonard Gale, of Millbury, who, it is said, gave practical suggestions that made possible the complete telegraph equipment.

The first brass foundry located in the Commonwealth outside of Boston was established by Asa Kenney, Jr., in Millbury.

About 1820, Millbury developed the first organization similar to what later became the old lyceum that did so much for the intellectual life of communities throughout the United States.

In this town was organized the first society established for the assistance of students for the ministry—the forerunner of the Congregational Educational Society and other similar denominational organizations.

In Millbury, Ichabod Washburn began the manufacture of wire and began that series of improvements in its manufacture that resulted in later years in the immense output of the American Steel and Wire Co., a successor to his labors.

In fact the town has been the location for the operation of industries large and small covering a wide range of productions extending from the small shuttle-eye to the large eccentric lathe, from the peaceful pen-knife to the warlike bayonet, and from the pin of the household to the powder of the battlefield.

Situated six miles from Worcester on the lines both of the N. Y., N. H., & H. R. R. and the Boston & Albany R. R., with two trolley lines, which give trolley express service, Millbury, with its five thousand inhabitants, is an excellent manufacturing and residential town containing as it does excellent mill and factory sites. It has the advantage of possessing three beautiful lakes and it has a high pressure water system which supplies the purest of water. Electric light and power are furnished by the Connecticut River Transmission Company and a local company. With its great diversity of industries the town has been remarkably free from labor difficulties. Its advantages include several miles of macadam roads, a low rate of fire insurance, an automatic fire alarm system, paid fire and police departments, and a street sprinkling service. Three free delivery mail routes are in operation and others are soon to be established. For schools, twenty-five thousand dollars are annually expended, a fifty thousand dollar high-school building has been erected and there is a private Industrial School for boys. Its institutions include eight churches, many secret fraternal orders, a free public library, a national bank and a savings bank that has never paid less than four per cent interest. Its late town clerk, Ira N. Goddard, was the oldest in point of service of any in the United States, having been elected for the sixty-second year.

Mr. Charles Monroe, once of Millbury, but now deceased, has given some interesting information about gun and scythe work in the early days of the town. He stated:

“In this place I would say that there was no machine there then to turn gun barrels, except a common engine which any green workman can set to turn any length of iron on a taper. After the barrels were welded they were taken to a great grindstone which was nearly nine or ten feet in diameter, a crank was attached to one end of the barrel and the tender would place it before the grindstone in a fixture that kept it against the stone, and at the same time turn it around. This stone revolved with great speed. Speaking of scythes. I mention the names of two men who were in Elder Waters’ employ as great workmen with the trip-hammer. I venture to say they were the best hammersmen then in existence. Their names were Lewis and John Lilley. They were the men who welded the gun-barrels with lightning speed. They made scythes and sleigh-shoes. The shoes they would hammer out true and straight as a carpenter would joint a board. One of the brothers moved to Lowell, and worked for the Tremont Corporation a number of years.”

Mr. Bela Chase, when eighty-eight years old, after seventy-two years absence, was in Millbury a few years ago, and visited many fields of his old associations. He recalled the location of the old shop in the “hollow” on South Main street, once part of the old armory, and later of the Atlanta mills. There Thomas Blanchard conceived an idea of the eccentric lathe, which he afterwards perfected at his shop in West Millbury. He recalled the occasion and the importance then attached to the invention. It was while Mr. Chase was a resident of Millbury that the digging of the canal was begun and he was in town when it was opened for commerce. He also remembered the Millbury Canal store, when it was located at the corner of Main and Canal streets, on what is now the lawn of the Walling estate.

As an example of the provision which was frequently made for one’s old age we have the following bond which was given by Elijah Holman in return for property by which he bound himself to furnish his mother-in-law with needed supplies. Strange though this may seem to us such an instrument was not uncommon in 1813.

“Know all men by these presents:—that I, Elijah Holman, of Millbury, in the county of Worcester, Yeoman, am holden unto my mother-in-law, Susannah Holman, of said Millbury, in the full and just sum of Five thousand dollars, to the payment of which well and truly to be made, I bind myself, my heirs, executors and administrators firmly by these presents—Sealed with my Seal, dated this ninth day of March, A. D. 1814.

THE OLD BLANCHARD SHOP

THE HENRY W. GLOVER SHOP

“The condition of the above obligation is such, that whereas by the last will and testament of Col. Jonathan Holman late of Millbury, deceased, there is a bequest to his Widow, Susannah Holman, a chaise, and the use and improvement of half his estate in Sutton and Ward as by said will may appear, which aforesaid bequest the said Susannah hath relinquished upon the following conditions (viz):—That there be furnished and delivered to her each and every year during her natural life the following articles (viz):—Two hundred and sixteen pounds of well fatted pork—two hundred and sixty-six pounds of beef, seventeen bushels of Indian corn, four and one quarter bushels of rye, two bushels of wheat, three bushels of oats, seventeen bushels of potatoes, one hundred and sixty-six pounds of cheese, sixty-six pounds of Butter, ten pounds of sheep’s wool, ninety pounds of small fresh meats, Six pounds of green Calf-Skin, One sixth part of the Cyder made, and of the flax raised on the farm. Also be comfortably provided with wood cut fit for the fire at the door, what she need to burn. Be furnished with a horse and Chaise whenever she wishes to ride. Be furnished with garden and other sauce growing on the farm, what she shall need for her family, and also fruit of all kind, which the farm produces. Also the right to use and occupy the two westerly rooms on the ground floor of the dwelling house, and the chamber over the southwesterly front room, and a priviledge in the Cellar & garrett, in the kitchen for washing and baking, in the buttery for dairy purposes and at the well through the north room and Kitchen for water. Also be furnished with what milk and cream she shall want for her family from the farm annually. Also have the priviledge of keeping poultry. Now upon the performance of all the before mentioned conditions the above obligation to be void, otherwise to remain in force.

Signed, sealed and delivered in presence

 PATTY JACOBS.

ELIJAH HOLMAN (seal).

In the Rev. Peter Whitney’s History of Worcester County (1793) the following industries are mentioned as being in operation in Sutton. And as the North Parish was the industrial portion of the town most of these would be early Millbury industries. He enumerates:

“one paper mill, one oil mill, ten grist mills, six saw mills, three fulling mills, seven trip-hammers, five scythe and ax makers, one hoe maker, several who work at nail making, and six works for making potash.”

In 1827, a geological and agricultural survey of Millbury was made by a committee from the local branch of the Lyceum and in the “National Aegis”, published in Worcester, for Oct. 24, 1827, the following account of industries in Millbury is given. In speaking of the Burbank River (the Singletary) it stated that:

“Few streams in New England, of the same size and length, possess so much power, or move so much machinery . . . In passing a mile and a quarter it falls 212 feet within which distance it unites with another branch of the Blackstone (the main stream) and, by the aid of this other tributary in the two lower establishments, it already moves by its force two grist mills, two saw mills, two scythe factories, a screw factory, a manufactory of pen-knives, of joiners’ squares, a paper mill, one cotton and two woolen factories, and an armory. At these establishments there is manufactured annually, flour from fifteen to twenty hundred bushels of grain, paper to the amount of ten thousand dollars, fifteen or twenty hundred dozen scythes, one hundred and eighty-seven thousand yards of cotton cloth, 7800 lbs. cotton yarn not wove, 67 thousand yards broadcloth at one mill, the other not known, and three thousand muskets. One or two priviledges are not yet taken up and several not fully occupied.”

Seven years before the North Parish was made a separate town the assessors of Sutton put into the hands of one of their highway surveyors a paper on which names appear that are largely those of North Parish people. The amount of each person’s tax was also given (on the back of the paper). The paper was as follows:

“To Mr. Ezekiel Marsh, one of the Surveyors of highways for the town of Sutton, the present year, Greeting—The within is a list of assessments upon the polls and estates of the persons therein named each his proportion of fifteen hundred dollars, being the highway tax the present year, which you are to collect and expend in Labor and materials to repair the roads and bridges within your limits. Two-thirds thereof in June, and the remainder in August next. And you will allow seventy-five cents per day for a man, fifty cents for a yoke of oxen, and twenty-five cents for a cart.

“And make return of this list to us the subscribers by the first day of Sept. next.

“Given under our hands this 23rd day of May, 1806.

Assessors of Millbury, 1813—
True valuation about $191,033

The following weather records, taken from notes made by Elijah Waters of West Millbury, give us some idea of weather conditions in the period that marked the beginning and the early development of the town.

1801. June 6. Frost destroyed brakes in the lowlands.
 July 1. Water was remarkably high in the Spring and low in the Fall.
1802. Singletary Pond was open until the last of January. At that time snow fell with little cessation until it was three feet deep on the level.
 Spring was cold and dry until the fifteenth of May, then it was cold and wet.
 June 24. Apple-trees were in full bloom.
1803. Mar. 22. Plowing on dry land.
 May 9. Rain fell for twelve hours after which snow fell very fast. Winter rye was twelve inches high and apple trees were in bloom. The rye and snow were frozen together and in the apple-trees the blossoms were full of ice.
 May 10. Sleds and sleighs were in use.
1804. Apr. 19. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
1805. Apr. 1. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
 June 9. A heavy rain fell after which it did not rain but an hour and a half until the first of August. The weather continued to be hot during this time.
 Dec. 24. The first snow fell.
1806. May 23. Severe frost which killed clover leaves.
1807. Apr. 19. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond. Old snow-banks were to be seen.
1808. Mar. 24. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
1809. Apr. 12. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
1810. Nov. 2. Very cold. Severe snow-storm continued for thirteen hours during which about ten inches of snow fell.
1811. Mar. 23. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
1812. Apr. 18. Plowing was begun.
 Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
 Apr. 19. Old snow-banks were to be seen.
 May 4. A snow-storm continued for twenty-five hours during which twelve inches of snow fell, some remaining until the eleventh.
 May 29. First warm day of Spring.
 Sept. 22 & 23. Frost came that killed uncut cornstalks.
1813. Apr. 10. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
1814. Apr. 4. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
1815. Apr. 1. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
 Sept. 18. A great number of hawks and eagles passed from the east to the west flying very high and forming a procession which reached as far as the eye could see in each direction.

- Sept. 23. A warm wind arose with a force sufficient to blow down and break off the stoutest trees and in some places whole lots were levelled.
1816. Mar. 16. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
 June 7. Very cold. Water froze in troughs and tubs and people wore full winter clothing with great coats and mittens.
 June 10. Heavy frost, in many places destroyed Indian corn to the ground.
 Sept. 26 & 27. Heavy frost, killed Indian corn in the milk.
1817. Apr. 11. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
 June 1. Water froze in troughs and tubs.
 June 14. Singletary Pond was as low as it has ever been known to be.
 Sept. 30. Frost killed Indian corn.
1818. Apr. 5. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
1819. Feb. 11. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
 Mar. 29. Snow was two feet deep.
 Apr. 8. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond for the second time.
1820. Feb. 10. Snow was three feet deep on the level.
 Apr. 7. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
 Oct. Cider was worth fifty cents a barrel.

- Apr. 25. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
- July 1. Very hot.
- July 3. Very cold.
- July 21. Frost.
- August. Wet and warm. Singletary Pond was never known to be so high in August.
- Sept. 13. Frost, so that Indian corn was killed in many places.
- Dec. 2. Singletary Pond was frozen over.
1844. The past winter was the best for business abroad known within the memory of our oldest people.
- Mar. 10. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
- Sept. 5. Frost occurred hard enough to kill brakes in low land.
- Nov. 27. Singletary Pond was frozen over.
- Dec. 1. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
1845. Feb. 4. A hard snow storm occurred in which the roads were badly blocked.
- Mar. 31. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
- May 20. Mercury registered ninety degrees in the shade.
- July 11. Mercury registered ninety-two degrees.
- July 12. Mercury registered ninety-four degrees. The month was very dry and hot.
- Aug. 1. Springs and streams were as low as they were ever known to be by the oldest people.
- Dec. 20. Singletary Pond was frozen over.
1846. Mar. 25. The snow had all gone and the birds were singing.
- May 27. Ice broke up in Singletary Pond.
- July 7. Hay was first put into J. E. Waters's new barn (the Clifford R. Harris place).
- Aug. 25. An earthquake shock of considerable force was felt, about five o'clock in the morning, sufficient to shake windows, doors, and even houses. People were awakened from their sleep.

October. The weather has been pleasant but it has been the driest Fall that has been known for thirty-five or forty years. Nearly all the mills were stopped, for a great distance about, because all the streams have been very low.

CHAPTER VI

THE FIRST TOWN MEETING.

Pursuant to the act of incorporation an application, signed by Gen. Caleb Burbank, Ezra Lovell, Samuel Bixby, Jacob Chamberlain, Solomon Marble, Asa Waters, Jr., Jonathan Trask, Josiah S. Prentice, Simon Waters, Stephen Blanchard, and Capt. Azor Phelps, dated the 12th day of June, 1813, was presented to Aaron Peirce, Esq., Justice of the Peace, who issued a warrant directing Mr. Samuel Waters to call a meeting of the inhabitants of the town on the first day of July, following, in the Congregational Meeting-house at one o'clock, P. M.

At the meeting so-called Capt. Azor Phelps was chosen moderator for the new town of Millbury; Aaron Peirce was elected town clerk; Lieut. Asa Goodell, Capt. Azor Phelps, deacon Solomon Marble, Capt. Reuben Barton, Jr., and Lieut. James Greenwood were elected selectmen; Samuel Waters, treasurer; Aaron Peirce, Simeon Waters, and Jonathan Grout, assessors. It was "voted that the taxes be set up to the lowest bidder, with the understanding that whoever bid them off, i. e., offered to collect the taxes for the smallest compensation, should be chosen constable if he could procure sureties.

Therefore Alfred Hood, who bid for the collecting of taxes at the rate of three cents on the dollar, was chosen constable.

The first highway surveyors chosen were Capt. Amasa Wood, Curtis Searles, Jonathan Muzzy, Moses Brigham, Jonathan Gale, Jr., Samuel Waters, Josiah S. Prentice, Josiah Brown and Joel Wesson. Jonathan Richards was chosen tythingman.

A few days before the incorporation of Millbury, Thomas Blanchard published the following advertisement:

“For clothiers—The subscriber having obtained a patent for a machine called the Horizontal or Circular Vibrating machine, for shearing woolen cloth, would inform clothiers in general, that he has for two years past, built and vended those machines in Vermont, New York and Connecticut. He is now building and keeps constantly on hand in Sutton, North Parish, where they may be obtained on trial, for two or three months, and, if approved, can be bought for seventy-five dollars. The simplicity and utility of this machine may be discovered from the following recommendations from Simeon Waters, one recommendation from Abijah Walker, Hanover, N. H., and one from Samuel Northrup Clother, Castleton, Vt. A handsome reward will be paid to any person that will give any information of infringements.”

Sutton, June 1.

Boots and shoes were made in Millbury in its natal year for Orlando Furness advertised for a boot and shoe maker.

Thomas Pope, a lawyer, had his law office near the meeting-house.

Regimental reviews of the 7th Div. Mass. Militia, 1st and 2d Brigades of Artillery and Cavalry, were ordered by Gen. Caleb Burbank. Gardiner Burbank and Rejoice Newton were chosen as aids to General Burbank.

Joseph Farnsworth, Esq., was elected Brig. Gen. of the 1st Brigade of the 7th Div. of Mass. Militia.

At a town-meeting, held Aug. 23, it was “voted to raise Millbury’s proportion of the one thousand dollars which had been voted by Sutton for schools previous to the separation.” This amounted to three hundred sixty-five dollars. On Sept. 13th, to which the meeting was adjourned the town “voted to raise for the support of the poor and other town charges, seven hundred dollars”; and for the Rev. Mr. Goffe, “four hundred dollars for the present year, in lieu of the sum voted by Sutton at their annual town-meeting.”

January. Asa Goodell retired from the firms of S. Farnsworth & Co. and Elijah Waters & Co.

March 7. At the town-meeting William Hull was chosen moderator and Aaron Peirce, town clerk. It was "voted that horses and cattle shall not go at large without a permit from the selectmen."

April 4. At a town meeting held to vote for state officers, Caleb Strong received, for governor, one hundred and nineteen votes and Samuel Dexter forty-six.

May 2. Lieut. Asa Goodell was chosen by fifty votes as the first representative to the General Court.

At a town meeting at which Gen. Joseph Farnsworth was chosen moderator it was "voted to raise for schools this year three hundred seventy dollars; for Rev. Joseph Goffe four hundred dollars."

Asa Waters and Luther Whitmore retired from the firm of Elijah Waters & Co., which continued under the management of Elijah Waters and Joseph Farnsworth.

July 29. Deacon Elijah Waters, oldest son of deacon Asa Waters and for many years at the head of the gun and scythe factory in Millbury, died at the age of forty-seven. His industry and mechanical skill had contributed to make the business very successful.

October. Simon and Joseph Farnsworth, surviving partners of the firm of Waters and Farnsworth, dissolved and the business was continued by Jacobs and Farnsworth.

November 7. The "inhabitants met at the meeting-house and voted for congressman. All who had a freehold estate of the annual income of ten dollars, or any estate of the value of two hundred dollars, and had resided in town the year last past, were allowed to vote." The Hon. Elijah Brigham, of Westboro, had ninety-four votes and John Spurr sixteen.

Maj. Gen. Burbank announced that Gardiner Burbank had been appointed as division inspector in the militia and that he should be obeyed accordingly.

John Waters was in business as a wool-carder.

It was "voted to have the bell tolled upon the death of any of the inhabitants."

In January the following notice was posted:—

"To be sold at auction:—The undivided half of the real estate of Dea. Elijah Waters, rolling and slitting mill, with the dams and water privileges, 1 gun factory, a saw and mill, iron factory and a trip-hammer shop, with land and water privileges, annealing shop, a forge shop, a hardening shop with coal houses, Sibley house, land and steel furnace thereon, the Wright house, hay scales, office and shop for depositing iron, land and buildings occupied by Joseph Farnsworth and one third part of the saw mill, a complete set of tools for said shops, all in Millbury.

(signed) SIMON FARNSWORTH, Executor."

March 6. General Burbank was chosen moderator of the town-meeting. Among the tythingmen chosen was Martin Crow, but it does not appear that he was sworn. Thomas Blanchard, Capt. Joseph Bancroft and Aaron Trask were chosen field-drivers. Stephen Blanchard, Dr. Amasa Braman, Dr. Wm. M. Benedict, Samuel Waters, Capt. Asa Goodell, Josiah S. Prentice, and Josiah Stiles, Esq., were chosen a committee on schools.

July. A sale of all the personal property of Gen. Joseph Farnsworth at and about the gun factory took place at the Tavern of S. Farnsworth. This constituted his right in equity.

October. There was an auction of the property of Elijah Waters, deceased. Asa Waters, 2d, was in possession of one-half of the shops, mills, etc. Simon Farnsworth, the executor of the estate, stated that Mr. Waters was fully capable of superintending the whole establishment, and was a desirable partner for anyone who might purchase.

May 6. The town "voted that Thomas Kendall, Jr., have leave to draw his school-money and carry it to Oxford" (where his children probably went to school). Dr. Amasa Braman was chosen representative to the General Court.

August 26. The town voted to pay the bills, amounting to twenty-three dollars and twenty-six cents, exhibited by John Goodell and Simon Farnsworth for refreshment given to those persons who searched for Mr. Packard's children.

Dana A. Braman and Wm. M. Benedict formed a partnership and dealt in English and West India goods at the store formerly occupied by Dr. Asa Braman by the Old Common.

"The Millbury Rolling Mill Co." (situated near the dam on the Cordis property) whose business was the rolling and slitting of iron were dealers in nail-plates and rods. The company consisted of Josiah Prentice, Martin Craw, Aaron Trask, Wm. Brown, Jr., and Amasa Braman.

The latter was agent of the company. Their advertisement announced that the "Millbury Rolling Mill Co. have machines for cutting and heading nails. It keeps cut nails and brads."

This "Rolling Mill lot" contained about two acres and lay north of the Blackstone River just below a saw-mill that was then standing. It embraced the dam and part of the canal now owned by the Cordis Mills. Through the property ran the road to Grafton and also the canal which conducted water to the mills of Asa Goodell and Trask & Co. farther east on the present Cordis property.

A tanyard was advertised for sale by the late firm of Capt. J. Grigg & Co.

March 3, at the annual town-meeting, Asa Waters, Esq., was chosen as moderator; Dea. John Peirce, Rufus Barton, Maj. Josiah Woodard, Capt. Daniel Rice and Gen. Caleb Burbank, selectmen; Josiah Stiles, Josiah S. Prentice and Elijah Waters, assessors; and John B. Blanchard tything-man, in place of General Burbank.

On May 5th, the town "voted to discontinue the road leading from Joshua Wait's, by his saw-mill to Capt. Josiah Brown's."

The town refused to send a representative to the General Court.

Capt. Andrew Elliott died in Millbury, aged seventy-three years.

Cloth made in Millbury, was exhibited at the Brighton cattle show.

The Rev. Aaron Bancroft of Worcester acknowledged, in behalf of the Worcester Auxiliary Bible Society, the receipt of one dozen twelve mo. Bibles from General Burbank.

Goodell, Trask & Co., consisting of John Goodell, Asa Goodell, Asa Goodell, Jr., John Goodell, 2d, Orra Goodell, Aaron Trask, and Nathaniel Lyon, dissolved partnership, and Aaron Trask and Nathaniel Lyon retired. The new firm was Asa Goodell & Co.

In the previous year a post office had been established in Millbury. Regular offices were being established by the government and the mails were carried from office to office by post riders on horse-back. Charles Preston was post rider for Millbury.

Samuel Waters, Amasa Braman and Luther Whitmore dissolved partnership.

Dr. William M. Benedict was landlord of the Braman Tavern.

Stephen Blanchard kept a store.

Ithran Harris, having received a land warrant for military services in the War of 1812, transferred this (160 acres in Illinois) to Solomon Dwinell and Seneca Simon Dwinell for one hundred and fifteen dollars, March 19, 1818. He had been a sergeant in Foster's Company, Ninth Regt. of Infantry.

May 4. The town again refused to send a representative to the General Court.

It was "voted to accept the meeting-house upon the conditions as recorded in the Proprietors' Book." The town could use the building but the ownership lay with the parish as a corporation.

It was "voted to raise twenty-five dollars for supporting a Singing School."

It was "voted that the town will appropriate out of the money due the town from individuals a sum of money, which, being added to the present school money, shall amount to five hundred dollars for a permanent school-fund."

August 17. At a town meeting, John B. Blanchard was chosen moderator. It was "voted to paint the meeting-house the present year," for which two hundred and twenty-five dollars was appropriated, "to be assessed upon the Congregational Society, as parochial charges." General Burbank, Dea. John Peirce and Elder Samuel Waters were chosen to superintend the work and the town also chose a committee to ask the people to assist.

August 20. Lyman Peck of Rehoboth, for the sum of sixty dollars, transferred to Seneca Simeon Dwinell his land warrant received for service as sergeant in Perry's company, 40th regt. of Infantry.

September 5. Solomon Dwinell, Jr., paper maker, transferred his land in Illinois, which came to him from Ithran Harris, to Seneca Simeon Dwinell.

A light infantry company was organized in town under Capt. John Q. Barton and on the 6th of October it received a standard from the young ladies. Miss Sally Pierce, daughter of Aaron Pierce, made the address to which Ensign Longley replied. The ladies were escorted to the meeting-house by the Infantry company and an address was made by the Rev. Joseph Goffe.

Stephen Blanchard advertised for sale a blacksmith's shop at West Millbury.

Solomon Marble advertised his place for sale. This was on Ramshorn Stream just below the old road that crossed near the upper dam. It included blacksmith and scythe shops, a tannery, and other industries. Nearby was a saw and grist mill. The place is now owned by Henry W. Glover.

Tenny and Armsby dissolved and a new company, called Armsby & Walker, was formed consisting of Joshua Armsby, Daniel Armsby and Appleton Walker.

At a town meeting held March 1, General Burbank was chosen moderator, and Capt. Reuben Barton, Jr., constable. At a town meeting held May 3, it was "voted that the money appropriated on May 4, 1818, to form a school fund, should be taken to defray the expenses of the town." General Burbank was chosen representative to the General Court, receiving fifty votes.

In April, Luther Gould and Nathaniel Goddard began shoe manufacturing near the gun factory.

In May, the Millbury Rolling and Slitting Mill was sold at auction with its good water privilege. (See 1816.)

At the first cattle show ever held in Worcester, Asa Goodell & Co. exhibited two pieces of broadcloth made in Millbury and received the first and second premiums, ten dollars and five dollars, respectively. In the same month their factory at Millbury was burned, with a loss of fifteen thousand dollars.

The Boston Advertiser of September 14, stated that "A miniature machine of an ingenious construction, invented by Thomas Blanchard of Worcester County, now in the possession of Messrs. Scott & Clark, is exhibiting in a room over The Suffolk Insurance Co. It is adapted to cutting by a very rapid operation ships-blocks, gun-stocks and a great variety of other articles. It is a species of turning lathe and the article manufactured is cut not only in a circular form but in almost any other shape so as to accord precisely with the model put into the machine. The machine has been already applied successfully to the cutting of gun stocks, the whole work including the fitting of the lock and barrel being performed by the machine, and is capable of being applied with an equal advantage to the manufacture of a variety of other articles."

Lyman Goodell was a post rider of the town (see 1817).

January 3. The town "voted that consent be given to place a stove or stoves in the meeting house, provided the same be procured by subscription as mentioned in the warrant. Samuel Waters, Jr., Gen. Caleb Burbank, Stephen Blanchard, Elias Forbes, and Reuben Barton, Jr., were chosen a committee to have charge of placing them." (See article on First Congregational Church.)

May 1. The town refused to send a representative to the General Court.

May 21. The town voted by a majority of eight in favor of a State Convention to alter the constitution and, October 16, Aaron Peirce, Esq., was chosen as a delegate to this convention.

The town voted that permission be given to sink a well on the Common near the elm tree upon the conditions mentioned in the warrant, viz:—that it be done free of expense to the town.

May 7. The town voted to instruct its agent to call upon those who have broken windows in the meeting-house and compel them to pay for the same. It was voted to lengthen the intermission on the Sabbath from one hour to one and one-quarter hours.

November 12. It was voted to discontinue the old road leading from Samuel Waters's to Dr. Braman's still-house. (This was on the Henry W. Carter farm parallel to the present road but on higher ground to the North.)

John Barnard was post rider through Ward (now Auburn), Millbury, Sutton, and Oxford.

Asa Waters advertised "to buy wrought scrap iron at two cents per pound."

THE CORDIS MILL DAM

1822

March 4. At a town meeting, Josiah Stiles, Esq., was chosen town agent to act in civil and legal capacity.

• May 5. The town voted to raise fifty dollars for a singing school.

At the fourth of July celebration Dana A. Braman was orator and Dr. William M. Benedict read the Declaration of Independence. A balloon was sent up by Mr. Prosses, a manufacturer in the town.

At the cattle show in Worcester, John Aspinwall exhibited the best morocco leather, and Capt. Joseph Griggs & Co. the best calfskins. Both of these manufactures were from Millbury.

A new store was opened by Benedict, Braman, and Preston, in which West India goods were sold.

May 25. Nancy Tenney, aged fourteen, Adaline Lombard, seventeen, Hannah C. and Mary H. Marble, aged twenty-two and twenty-four respectively, were drowned in Singletary Lake.

Asa Waters was on a committee to see what could be done about building the Blackstone Canal.

In this year the Goodell Manufacturing Co. was in operation and consisted of Jonas B. Brown, John Goodell, Asa Goodell, Asa Goodell, Jr., and Orra Goodell. This company made fine woolen goods, especially broadcloth (see Industries, Cordis Mill).

May 5. Asa Waters, Esq., was chosen representative.

It was voted that twenty-five dollars of the four hundred raised for Mr. Goffe's salary and other parochial charges be appropriated for the support of the Sabbath-School.

E. W. Goff bought the store of Amariah Preston, opposite the meeting-house (Old Common).

Asa Andrews was cordwainer.

At the March town meeting it was voted to raise fifteen dollars for wood and for building fires in the meeting-house during the last and present years.

At a store in Boston, a piece of blue broadcloth was shown made at the Goodell factory, Millbury. A Boston paper said that it was "the best of any yet seen," and that the Hon. Daniel Webster had ordered a suit from it.

In September, the company of Griggs, Abbot, and Whitney was formed which manufactured black grain, wax, chaise, harness, bridle, horse-hide, and split leather, belt and other leather for machinery, as well as morocco linings and bindings. (Their factory was at West Millbury on the site now occupied by the mill of A. D. Windle.)

It was "voted to raise twenty-five dollars in addition to the school money to be put into the hands of the school committee, to be expended for the schools in rewards and premiums as they shall see fit."

Previous to 1825 it had been the custom for the highway surveyors to expend the annual appropriation for repairing highways during the months of June and August each year and with that service the surveyors felt that their duties were done. Thus for the other months the roads were more or less neglected and complaints were sometimes made. An attempt was made to remedy this matter for the following year. (See 1823.)

The commissioners for the construction of the Blackstone canal allowed one dam at the outlet of Dorothy pond, occupying forty square rods of land belonging to Jacob Dodge; also a dam at the outlet of Ramshorn pond, covering twenty-six square rods of Elisha Jacob's land and thirty-seven square rods belonging to Stephen Blanchard.

Thomas Blanchard exhibited at Springfield a steam carriage for running on the public road. (See sketch on Thomas Blanchard.)

Notice was given that

“The stockholders of the Millbury Bank will meet at Simon Farnsworth’s on the eleventh of August next, to choose the first board of directors. They also want proposals for building a vault.”

(signed) ASA WATERS,
WILLIAM M. BENEDICT,
SIMON FARNSWORTH.

(See chapter on Banks.)

April 26. The highway committee appointed in 1825 reported that the town be set off into fourteen highway districts, with a surveyor for each district. The town voted to make a three years’ trial of the plan and chose the surveyors.

June 19. A meeting for prayer was appointed on account of the great drought.

June 20. The meeting for prayer was attended with great solemnity. It began to rain moderately until Saturday when there was a great rain.

Three meetings of the town are recorded for this year. At the first, held April 2d, it was voted to choose six persons as School Committee, according to a new law. It was voted that the prudential school committee be chosen by the town this same year.

Stephen Blanchard was elected tythingman for Grass Hill.

At a meeting held August 27, the town showed dissatisfaction with the report of the commissioners for estimating damages arising from the location of the Blackstone canal regarding the maintenance of bridges and causeways over the canal. They voted to direct their agent, with the advice and assistance of the selectmen, to claim and demand a jury, or agree upon a reference.

In December, it was thought expedient to choose a committee to devise the best method for supporting the poor during the year 1828, which committee was to report at the next annual March meeting. Dr. Amasa Braman, Rufus Barton, Gen. Caleb Burbank, Solomon Dwinell, and Aaron Pierce, Esq., were chosen.

The prosperity of the town may be inferred from the following newspaper article:

“The Goodell Manufacturing Co. is a very large establishment. It is calculated to turn out three hundred yards of broadcloth per day. In the same neighborhood is the large gun factory of Asa Waters, Esq., with extensive scythe works, etc. Also there has been built in the town a new cotton factory.”

Samuel Waters and Orra Goodell established wool-carding machines near General Burbank’s paper mill.

Amasa Braman was an inn-keeper at this time.

Henry P. Howe kept a store.

Asa Waters, together with some others, petitioned the House of Representatives for the incorporation of the First Presbyterian Church at Millbury (now known as the 2d Congregational Church). On August 23d of the same year the church was organized, with eighteen male and twenty-two female members.

The National Aegis of Worcester for October 24, gave a survey of Millbury. (See Chapters I. p. 15, V. p. 82.)

March 3. The committee, chosen in the previous December to devise a method for supporting the town’s poor, recommended that the town appoint a board of overseers consisting of three persons to manage all affairs relating to the poor. The report was accepted and Aaron Trask, Solomon Dwinell, and Hervey Peirce were chosen overseers for the ensuing year.

April 7. The town voted to allow ten and eight cents an hour for the use of oxen to work on the highways. On the vote for a new county there were nineteen "yeas" and twenty "nays."

This was the year of the digging of the Blackstone Canal. On March 27th, the first shovelful of earth in Millbury was turned over, near Mr. Greenwood's; on October 4th, the canal was filled; and on October 6th, the first boat went to Worcester. The Worcester Spy of October 8th states: "We understand that the canal packet boat, 'Lady Carrington,' will take passengers for Millbury tomorrow morning and return in the evening." One of the canal boats was called the "Millbury."

(See Chapter VII, "Blackstone Canal.")

A new road was ordered: "beginning at the Four Corners near Singletary pond, it will extend east to the southern end of General Burbank's forge dam excepting six rods near the Red Mills. The distance is one hundred twenty-six rods." This is the present road running beside West End Pond and taking the place of the old road which ran on the northwest side of the pond.

In September, Caleb Burbank petitioned for an alteration of the county road then recently located from the Four Corners (so called) near Captain Barton's in Millbury, through Armory Village to the New England Manufacturing Co. in Grafton. The county commissioners ordered a meeting for a hearing to be held at Stile's hotel in Millbury on October 22d.

At the fair of the New England Society held in Boston, this year, the committee on iron and steel awarded the premium, a medal, to Moses L. Morse, of Millbury, for a card of pink-irons.

Among the manufacturers in the town were the following: Joshua B. Tyler, hat manufacturer; Samuel Brown, maker of cast steel mule and jenny spindles.

A post-office, called "Grass Hill" post office, was established at West Millbury.

A former resident of Millbury, Lieut. Carter Elliott, died at Worcester in December, aged forty-seven. At one time he operated the old Thomas Blanchard shop, grinding black lead.

It was voted to send Aaron Peirce, Esq., and Col. Amos Hill as representatives to the General Court. It was likewise

“Voted to choose a committee of seven to examine the records and to determine whether the Congregational meeting-house in Millbury is the property of the town or of the individuals who built it, and whether, when it is necessary to repair it, it properly belongs to the town to do it.”

The Committee chosen were Aaron Peirce, Elias Forbes, Samuel Waters, George W. Livermore, Caleb Burbank, Asa Andrews, and John Jacobs. They were to report at the next meeting.

May 11. The Committee on meeting-house reported as follows:

“That upon a careful examination of the records of the town and Parish, as well as proprietors who built said house, they are brought to the conclusion that it is doubtful whether the town, as a corporation, has any legal right in said house. Your committee recommend that all repairs upon the meeting-house aforesaid be made by the Congregational Parish, and that the town allow them a reasonable compensation for the use of said house, as long as they shall occupy the same for the purpose of holding meetings therein.”

Signed by the committee.

Excursions and special trips on the canal were advertised frequently. On July 4th, and at other important times, the canal boats “Independence” and “Lady Carrington” made excursion trips from Worcester to Millbury.

Lewis Tracy advertised as a tailor in town, and Henry Parker as maker of cabinet furniture.

A serio-humorous vote was taken at one of the town meetings, forbidding “surveyors of highways appropriating money for ardent spirits, raised for support of highways and bridges the present year." Another vote taken was "to discontinue the road from Tyrus March's to Jonathan E. Putnam's. (The old road on the north-west side of the West End Thread Mill Pond.)

The company of A. and A. Wood dissolved. Asa Wood retired, but Amasa and Ezekiel Wood continued the business.

Another hatter was established in town, Samuel Leonard.

Elisha Muzzy was a blacksmith at West Millbury.

December 9. The Rev. Osgood Herrick was ordained as pastor of the First Church in Millbury to succeed the Rev. Joseph Goffe who had been pastor of the church for thirty-six years.

CHAPTER VII

BLACKSTONE CANAL

The first means of transportation with the outside world, aside from vehicles drawn by horses or oxen, which brought Millbury nearer to other towns were the canal-boats on the Blackstone Canal. Evidences of this long ditch may still be seen in the town, especially near the present road on the way to Worcester. The canal boats in use were nearly seventy feet long and about nine and one-half feet wide. They were sharp at the bow and were drawn by two horses hitched tandem. The boats were manned by a captain and two assistants, one of whom was the driver.

The first serious attempt at canal building on the river was in 1796 when John Brown of Providence, R. I., and his associates planned such a water way and had the route surveyed. They found it practical and considered the construction easy. Many were interested by them in the scheme and a company was incorporated under the laws of Rhode Island. When, however, rights to build were sought from the legislature of Massachusetts the state refused to incorporate the company, so the plan could not be carried out.

After that time mill privileges on the river were occupied by manufacturing establishments which added very greatly to the value of the land adjoining the river and created embarrassments in canal operation if the owners should not favor such an enterprise.

Demands for a water way, however, increased and, in the Spring of 1822, the matter was taken up by energetic men in Worcester. The following letter, found in the files of the American Antiquarian Society, explains the feeling at the time and gives the names of those who launched the first efforts. There had been a meeting at Colonel Sike's Coffee House, in Worcester, at which the men whose names are attached to the following circular letter, which was addressed to representative men of the Blackstone valley, were empowered to ascertain the sentiment of manufacturers and to provide for an act of incorporation.

WORCESTER, MAY 14, 1822.

SIR:—

“There is now a strong disposition to open a canal between this place and Providence arising from a conviction of its practicability, at a moderate expence. The people here, in Providence, and in other places near the Blackstone River, as far as we have learnt, feel a deep interest in carrying this plan into successful operation, as it is believed the extensive business done on the banks of that river, and in the adjacent country will fully justify such an enterprize. We cannot doubt also that this extensive tract of territory will be greatly benefited by opening a water communication—as it will probably reduce the expense of transportation from here to Providence, Boston, New York, and many other places, from one-half to one-fourth of what it now is. It will probably open to us a market for many products which we cannot now send abroad, by reason of the expense of transportation, and will enable us to carry on, with success, many branches of industry, which cannot now be pursued.

“We, the undersigned committee, in behalf of a larger number of persons assembled at Sike's Coffee-House, on Friday, the 10th of this month, to take into consideration the practicability and expediency of opening such a water communication, do therefore request you to give us such information as you possess, or can collect, in answer to the following questions.

“What number of tons of all kinds of Goods, Merchandize, and Products, is carted from Boston and other seaports, annually, by the inhabitants of your town, and what proportion consists of Plaister, Lime, Salt, Iron, Steel, and other heavy articles?

“What articles of Produce in Manufactures do you export, and what quantity of each kind?

“Should such a communication reduce the expense of transportation from Worcester to Boston or Providence two-thirds—what articles could you send into the market, which would now yield no profit, and to what amount?

“It is supposed that many Agricultural Products might find a market, which are not now transported at all; and that many kinds of manufacturing might be pursued, which are now neglected, in consequence of the expense of transportation.

“You will much oblige us, and those in whose behalf we act, if you would communicate with us as early as the 22d instant. It is necessary that we should have all the information which we can collect by that time, in order to embody it in a Petition to be presented to the Legislature at its approaching session and which Petition we are directed to report to an adjourned Meeting to be held at Col. Sike’s, on the 24th instant, at which you and all who are desirous of promoting the above object are requested to attend, at 2 o’clock in the afternoon.

The project received so much support that a charter was obtained and measures were taken towards its construction. Benj. Wright (chief engineer upon the middle section of the Erie canal) was employed “to make a topographical survey of the route and to examine the character of the soil to ascertain whether the supplies of water were sufficient—to estimate the expense of construction, and to report thereon.” This survey was completed in September, 1822, and was in part as follows:—

“Mr. Hutchinson, accompanied by some gentlemen of the committee, has completed a level over the route for the proposed Canal; and they find the distance, by measure, 45 miles as a Canal would run, and the descent $451\frac{1}{2}$ feet from Thomas street in Worcester, to tide-water in Providence. The ground is remarkably favorable. The soil is generally easy to excavate; the embankments neither large nor extensive; very little solid rock to be removed; the aqueduct and culverts are not numerous nor expensive. On viewing the country intended to be benefitted by this Canal, taking into consideration its probable future growth and increase of trade, I have come to the conclusion that a Canal 32 feet wide at top, 18 feet at bottom, and $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet depth of water, would be the proper size to be formed; and that locks of 70 feet between the Gates, and 10 feet in width would be sufficiently large for the trade intended. &c.”

As there were at the time many mills on the Blackstone River it was not acceptable to property owners on the river that its waters be used for filling the canal and operating the locks. Accordingly, for an additional water supply, it was proposed to dam North Pond which lay two miles north from the Worcester Court House, so as to hold back the Spring rain for Summer use and thus increase its surface from 100 acres to 180 acres. By raising a dam 8 feet high this would give 48,787,200 cubic feet of water more than that which the pond then fed into the Blackstone River.

Between Thomas street in Worcester and the outlet of Dorothy Pond in Millbury, a distance of about seven miles, there were locks of six feet lift each requiring 4200 cubic feet of water each time they were filled. North pond, allowing that rainfall would equal evaporation, would give 21,616 locks full of water, of six feet depth each. At the outlet of Dorothy Pond locks were located near the Goodell Manufacturing Co. (site of the Cordis Mills) with a lift of 8 feet, each requiring 5,600 cubic feet of water to fill them each time; and for this purpose Dorothy pond was made a reservoir. A dam was erected which raised the water ten feet, giving a surface of 140 acres. This, added to the water from North Pond, would give a water lockage of 19,602 locks of eight feet lift. In eleven miles there was a descent of 176 feet with twenty-six locks. Below that to the Rhode Island line there were fifteen locks in a descent of 107 feet covering a distance of seventeen and one-half miles.

The Legislature of Massachusetts granted a charter to the Blackstone Canal Company in March, 1823.

April 25, 1825, The Blackstone Canal Company held its first meeting in Worcester, at which the corporation was duly organized. The expense in building the canal was $700,000 and the stock was in great demand. $500,000 was taken by citizens of Rhode Island, and $250,000 by people in Massachusetts. Of this amount $351,368.08 was paid in by July 2, 1828, later by the sale of bonds $79,486.40 was realized.

At a meeting of the Blackstone Canal Company held at the Washington Insurance office in Providence, R. I., Nov. 14, 1829, it was "voted and resolved, that, four thousand eight hundred and eighty-one shares of new stock be created, at the nominal value of one hundred dollars each, to be offered to the present stockholders in the first instance . . . at the rate of fifteen dollars a share. If two-thirds are subscribed, subscription is obligatory, if not, all to be sold at auction, etc."

In 1824, excavation was commenced for the canal in Rhode Island. In August, 1825, commissioners were in Millbury appraising prospective damage to be done by raising the level of Ramshorn Pond and of Dorothy Pond. The first spadeful of earth for the canal was removed in Millbury, March 27, 1828, near the Greenwood crossing. $31,000.00 had been expended at the time. The company constructed the greater proportion of the locks with stone rather than with wood, as the expense was not much greater and the stone gave much better satisfaction.

January 26, 1826, a report of the commissioners on damages shows that, at the outlet of Dorothy Pond, in Millbury, a dam had been located on land belonging to Jacob Dodge and Daniel Rice. The report also mentioned Samuel March, William Brown, and Sullivan Newton as owners of land taken for the dam at the outlet of Dorothy Pond; possibly some of this land was damaged in being overflowed by the raised waters of the pond. At the outlet of Ramshorn Pond, in Millbury, a dam had been located on land of Stephen Blanchard and Elisha Jacobs.

The route designed for the canal was described as follows: Beginning at the northerly end at Caleb Burbank's Mill Pond (in Quinsigamond) near which there was to be constructed a lock; thence, crossing the road, and continuing over the land of John W. Lincoln, where another lock was to be constructed; thence, on land of Nathan Perry; thence, on land of Elijah Burbank, with the privilege of constructing a lock; thence, on land of Isaac Willard, and on land of Leonard Kingsbury, also land of Isaac Willard; thence, on land of Moses Park, with the privilege of erecting a dam across the river, and constructing a feeder into the Canal, also constructing a lock on said Park's land; thence, on land of Aaron Parks, and on land of Mr. Marble; thence, crossing the road on land of Daniel Aldrich, and on land of James Greenwood; thence, on land of Abner Pitts, and on land of Asa Waters. On this last course the road was to be located further north, and the road location was to be occupied for the canal. Thence, on land of Simon Farnsworth; the road adjoining this land to be located further north, and the present location of the road to be used for the canal; thence, on land of Widow Waters, the road adjoining this land to be turned farther north, and its present site to be used for the Canal; thence, on land of Nathaniel and Andrus March; thence, on land of Asa Waters; thence, on land of Goddard, Harrington, and Woodward; thence, on land of widow Waters, with the privilege of placing spoil-banks on her land; crossing the road thence, on land of Nathaniel and Andrus March; crossing the road, (Main St.) thence, with the necessary privileges in the vicinity of five locks, etc.; thence, on land of Goodell Manufacturing Co.; thence, on land of Joshua Wait with the privilege of constructing locks, etc., on said land; thence on land of Joshua and John Wait, crossing the road (Grafton Rd.) with the privilege of constructing two locks, with other appendages, on said land; thence, on land of David P. Chase; thence, on land of Samuel Goodale; thence, on land of Widow Relief Brown; thence, on land of Asa and Lyman Goodale, with the privilege of constructing a lock, etc., on said Goodale's land; thence, on land of Joshua Chase, crossing the road; thence, on land of Paul C. Chase; and thence, down the valley.

The first boat for the canal, the "Lady Carrington," was completed June 28, 1828, and was fitted up for the accommodation of passengers. The first boat which passed the whole length of the canal arrived in Worcester, Oct. 6, 1828, although parts of the canal had been navigated previously. On this day the packet boat, "Lady Carrington," from Providence, reached the upper basin at the head of the Canal, and was moored there, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. Her arrival was announced by the firing of cannon and the ringing of bells. The first inrush of water made some repairs to the newly made bank necessary, but on November 8th, 1828, the boats began making regular trips, and a fleet of six arrived at Worcester from Providence on that day.

In the official map of Massachusetts, issued in 1844, the location of the Canal from Millville to Farnumsville is given on the west side of the Blackstone River, and from Farnumsville to Worcester on the east side.

Oct. 8, 1828, the Massachusetts Spy stated that the "Lady Carrington" would take passengers from Worcester to Millbury, on October 9th, and return in the evening. The boat "Independence" also made excursion trips between the two towns.

In 1829, Jabez Hull was agent in Millbury securing patronage for the boat "Governor Lincoln." One of the boats was named "Millbury" in honor of the town.

The amount of freight delivered to Millbury by the canal during five of the years of its operation was as follows:—

In 1831, 876 tons;

In 1832, 1140 tons;

In 1833, 1316 tons;

In 1834, 1533 tons;

In 1835, 1375 tons;

In the same time there were shipped from Millbury:

In 1831, 360 tons;

In 1832, 223 tons;

In 1833, 171 tons;

In 1834, 187 tons;

In 1835, 183 tons;

Nov. 27, 1829, the following statement was given out:

“Notwithstanding the general stagnation of business and the embarrassment of many of the manufacturing establishments on the line of the Canal, besides the interruption of the navigation for various causes, of more than a month, the income arising from the tolls this year cannot be less, at the close of the season, than $8000.00, and there is very little doubt that more than double this amount will be received next year and afterwards that the income will go on increasing, as the capacity of the Canal to transport merchandise safely and at a cheap rate becomes more extensively known.

“The Committee flatter themselves that after all existing debts are discharged, excepting the loan of one hundred thousand dollars, the income in 1830 will enable the Treasurer to pay the interest on this loan and leave a handsome sum to be divided at the close of the year among the shareholders.”

The canal proved to be a benefit to the manufacturers on the stream as the reservoirs increased and equalized the volume of water in the Blackstone. Factories on the line of the canal nearly doubled, for an impetus was given to production and trade. It is stated that in Millbury alone over a thousand people came into the town to live, about 1830.

Serious obstacles, however, unfortunately, interfered with the operation of the canal. A portion of it was located in the Blackstone River, so that boats were more or less detained in both high water and low water and as a result goods were held up for weeks at a time. In some years the canal would be closed four or five months on account of the ice. In a season of much drought the manufacturers were jealous toward the boatmen for drawing off so much water. In Rhode Island, mill owners in a few instances went so far as to put large loads of stone into the locks so as to prevent the operation of the canal, but this drew out counter threats of setting fire to the mills.

When the canal was discontinued, the water rights were sold. April 23, 1850, the Dorothy Pond reservoir and rights were sold to Andrus March for $375. Oct. 17, 1851, the rights at Ramshorn Pond were sold to Charles Washburn and others for $1500. The last toll collected on the canal was Nov. 9, 1848.

The Charter for the Providence and Worcester Railroad was obtained in Rhode Island in May, 1844, in Massachusetts, March 12, 1844. At that time Millbury had a population of 2,171 and Worcester, a population of 7,497. In the entire Blackstone valley, including Providence and Worcester, the population was 70,555 according to the census of 1840.

After the completion of the railroad between Worcester and Providence a toast, given at a meeting held in Worcester, suggested the relative importance and permanence of the canal and the railroad in the minds of the persons present for it was, "The two Unions between Worcester and Providence. The first was weak as water, the last is strong as iron."

CHAPTER VIII

1831

In January, a newspaper, called The Plebian and Workingman's Advocate, was published in town.

April 4. In the warrant for an adjourned town meeting an article was inserted which embodied a petition received from the Rev. George W. Campbell and others seeking to have the town prevent the sale of alcoholic liquors.

The resolutions which were apparently adopted were as follows:

“Resolved, that we view with abhorrence the ravages which ardent spirit has made among us, so that we fully approve of the efforts made by temperance societies in suppressing it.

“Resolved, that considering the pernicious effects of ardent spirit by increasing pauperism and crime in the community, the public good of this town does not require the vending and retailing of it within the limits of its jurisdiction.

“Resolved, that the Selectmen be requested not to recommend any person or persons to the Court of Sessions for a license for retailing.”

“Voted, that the law respecting taking fish be carried into effect against all those persons not residing in Millbury who shall take fish from the Ponds and Streams in town.”

May 11. Nine hundred dollars were voted for schools.

At one of the town meetings a petition was presented “for a road from the saw-mill of Caleb Burbank in the southerly part of Millbury to the westerly part of Sutton.”

During this year the name of the Post-office at Grass Hill was changed to “West Millbury” by the Postmaster-General.

The Rev. Joseph Goffe opposed the renewal or extension of the act incorporating the Millbury Bank.

At the cattle-show in Worcester, D. Packard of Millbury exhibited razors and penknives that were made here.

Among the advertisements recorded are those of Sewall Brown, a manufacturer of spindles; Harvey Waters, living near Bramanville, who desired turners and filers; and Henry Parker, a cabinet-maker.

In this year the death of deacon Moses L. Morse, a cutlery-maker, is recorded.

At the town meeting it was "voted to raise one thousand dollars to support public schools this year, and thirteen hundred dollars to support the town's poor and other charges."

July 4. Asa Waters, Jr., who later took "Holman" as a middle name, delivered the oration, and M. F. Dow was secretary of the committee of arrangements.

George Marsh was the post rider from Sutton to Worcester by way of West Millbury.

The Millbury Academy opened in October for the first time.

Among the general advertisements we find the following:

D. B. & S. Harrington, masons; J. A. Hovey & Co., dealers in hardware and groceries; E. Harkness, hotel-keeper.

February twenty-sixth was "Temperance Celebration Day" throughout the United States. A meeting was held at Academy Hall. There was an active temperance society numbering about four hundred members.

March 4. It was, "voted that the Rev. Joseph Goffe, William Whittlesey, and James Shepard be a committee to inquire into the causes of pauperism in this town, and also the best method of preventing the same, and report at the next town-meeting."

“Voted that the selectmen be a committee to take into consideration the expediency of procuring a farm for the town for the purpose of supporting the town’s poor.”

“Voted that the selectmen be required not to approbate any person as an Innholder in this town who will not agree (as an express condition of such approbation) to close his bar on the Sabbath, in strict accordance with the Statute in such cases made and provided.”

March 17. Capt. Amasa Wood’s shoe factory at West Millbury was burned, with a loss of six thousand dollars. There was no insurance.

November 5. The Hon. Henry Clay visited the town and was entertained at the residence of Col. A. H. Waters.

November 11. “Voted that the subject of procuring a farm for the town be recommitted.”

November 13. “Between 12 and 1 o’clock until dawn of day, the air was filled with innumerable luminous meteors or falling stars of various sizes, and darting from different heights. The sky was streaked with flashes of meteoric fire, incessantly repeated in every quarter. Thousands of brilliant bodies might be seen falling at every moment, all having the same general direction, northward, sloping in their descent toward the earth at an angle of forty-five degrees, and resembling flashes of fire. The wind blew strong from the south and the meteors continued until the brightening of the sun hid them.”

November 15. A meeting was held to form a Library Association.

Nathaniel and Danforth Goddard dissolved partnership and Danforth Goddard formed a company with Abner Rice for the manufacture of boots and shoes. Another boot and shoe company in town was that of Andrew and Parkhurst.

Among the business men in Millbury were the following: Waters and Farnsworth; D. B. Sibley; Otis Packard & Co. (Otis Packard, Lewis Mills, and Peter Pierce);

L. Chase & Company, who conducted a bakery; Josiah L. Woodard, stone cutter; Healy and Thompson, cabinet makers; Hale & Whipple, coal and iron.

Moses Dunton was a blacksmith at Armory Village.

William Shepard was agent for the Goodell Manufacturing Company, and Jonathan A. Pope was agent for the stone mill (now Rice's) at Bramanville.

Two lawyers, William S. Lincoln and Alexander Hamilton, whose office was near Dagget and Wright's store, were located in town.

Capt. Amasa Wood was chosen as representative to the General Court.

March 3. It was "voted that it is expedient to purchase a farm for the support of the town paupers, and that John Jacobs, Simeon Waters, Aaron Trask, and Elisha Jacobs be a committee authorized to purchase a farm for the use of the town."

The town heard the report of the committee chosen to inquire into the cause of pauperism in this town and it was accepted.

April 7. "Voted that the committee on the subject of pauperism be requested to ascertain the amount of money paid by this town since its incorporation, for the support of paupers, either directly or indirectly, in consequence of intemperance."

May 14. Snow fell and remained until the next day. Water froze so that ice was formed one-half an inch thick.

October 10. A survey was begun for a branch line from the Boston and Albany Railroad at Millbury Junction to Millbury.

November 11. The committee on the purchase of a town farm gave its report but the matter was recommitted and Samuel Waters and Rufus Barton were added to the committee. It was voted "that said committee be authorized to purchase a farm when they shall think best;

THE CAPTAIN AMASA WOOD HOUSE

also that the purchase money shall not exceed six thousand dollars."

Jonathan Hooker and Edmund Rice, manufacturers of doors, sashes, and blinds, dissolved partnership, but Mr. Rice continued the business alone.

The firm of Allen and Rice, sash and blind manufacturers, was succeeded by Allen and Coombs.

Abijah Woodward retired from the firm of Daggett, Wright & Co., but B. M. Daggett and J. W. Wright continued the business.

B. M. Daggett kept a tailoring establishment.

Waters and Farnsworth, dealers in English and West India goods, sold the business to Abijah Woodward.

Charles Brooks and Sewall Brown dealt in West India goods and crockery near the Goodell factory.

John Morse opened a wholesale commission store at the lower canal basin where he dealt in flour, grain, salt, lime, and groceries. He also maintained two boats on the canal.

Cards and looms, in Burbank's cotton factory, and paper and other articles in his paper mill were sold in closing his accounts.

Tower and Lothrop manufactured hoes.

Hale and Whipple were scythe makers.

Lucien S. Larned kept a store.

Marble Putnam was hotel-keeper.

Both this year and last, money was scarce, causing several failures and assignments. It was worth three per cent a month.

January 4. At sunrise the thermometer indicated twenty-four degrees below zero, the coldest day within the memory of townspeople.

March 2. It was "voted, to accept the report of the committee chosen to purchase a farm for the town as reported;" also "voted, this town choose a committee of three, who shall be called a Board of Overseers of the poor farm and Town poor, and who shall be duly authorized to manage the same in all respects as they in their wisdom shall think most for the interest of the town, intending by these instructions to make all necessary improvements on the farm, and also to take under their care the paupers of the town, and contract with any person or persons for the carrying on the farm, and taking care of the paupers as they shall think proper, and in all to do and perform all that is necessary to do and carry into complete effect all the contracts already made in the name and for the town." Simeon Waters, Simon Farnsworth, and Samuel D. Torrey were chosen Overseers of Poor.

Following is a list of expenditures by the town for the year ending March 2, 1835:

Expense of Poor, $772.95.

Miscellaneous Expenses, $501.11.

Expenses of the Town Officers, $106.08.

March 25. "Voted, that the selectmen be requested not to approbate any persons in town to sell wine, beer, or cider."

March 26. The dye house of Waters and Goodell was burned.

July 6. Moving of the meeting-house from the Old Common was begun and September 18 it was raised at Bramanville.

Asa H. Waters was chosen vice-president of a convention at Worcester to form a county temperance society.

At the Worcester Cattle Show the Goodell Manufacturing Company received the premium on broadcloth.

Anson G. Stiles & Co. dissolved partnership, Harvey Blashfield having sold his interest to Asa H. Waters.

William Shepard advertised as a manufacturer of broadcloth.

Harvey Waters desired a young man as a partner in the chair business at Armory Village.

J. J. Bishop kept a stable.

Calvin Taft had a store by the Blackstone Canal near "the upper basin."

August 20. "Messrs. Denny and Henshaw, railroad directors, were in town to locate the branch of the Boston and Albany." (On the third of the previous month the Boston & Worcester road had been opened to Worcester with a great celebration).

In November, a comet was visible in the northwest.

January 14. The new meeting-house was dedicated by the First Congregational Church.

March 8. It was "voted, that $400 be raised and appropriated for the purpose of purchasing a fire engine and necessary apparatus, provided the same sum be raised by private subscription within ninety days, said engine to be located by the selectmen."

"Voted, that the subject of licensing be left discretionary with the selectmen."

"Voted, the selectmen be a committee on the part of the town to purchase an engine."

This year two of the old firms changed. Allen and Coombs, makers of sash and blinds, continued as Allen and Goddard. Nathaniel Goddard took Danforth Goddard's place in company with Abner Rice.

S. S. Kegwin and J. Grout, Jr., & Co., were each store-keepers.

June 29. "A northeast wind has been raging and rain has fallen every day for twenty-eight days."

August 2. "The frame was erected for a new shoe establishment. (The building is now called the "Arcade.")

October 31. Work on the railroad branch on the Boston and Worcester R. R. to Millbury was begun.

November 24. "The fire-engine voted for by the town in March arrived. Twenty-nine were at the engine meeting to form a company."

Thomas P. Green from Amherst College opened a high school. His terms were $3.00 for a quarter. If Greek, Latin, and French were desired the terms were $4.00.

The winter of this year commenced the first of November and held on until April. It was the most severely cold winter for fifty years past."

January 10. The tannery of Capt. Amasa Wood was burned at a loss of over five thousand dollars.

January 25. The heavens presented an unusual appearance at night, distinguished from any which was before observed by the deep red-color of light, resembling the reflections upon the clouds from the blaze of a burning building, but of a deeper tinge. Many persons, indeed, supposed it to be the light of a distant conflagration, but it was the Aurora borealis. The most brilliant display was at half-past seven, when a bright road of light extended from the heavens in the northwest to the south and thence to the eastern horizon. It was again quite brilliant at half-past ten. The magnetic needles fluctuated considerably.

March 6. It was "voted that the treasurer of this town be authorized to issue licenses to all persons owning dogs, who shall apply and pay the sum of $2.00, and that no dogs owned in this town be suffered at large without such license having been obtained as aforesaid, said license to continue one year from the 15 of March instant."

The town voted to build houses for fire engines No. 3 and No. 4.

May 17. "Voted, that this town agrees to receive from the Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth its proportion of the surplus revenue of the United States in deposit, and will comply with the terms and provisions of the several acts passed by the Legislature of said Commonwealth, concerning the deposits of the surplus revenue." William Whittlesey was appointed agent of the town in the matter.

The town "voted that $2,000.00 of the sum received from this Revenue be used towards paying the debt the town owes for the poor farm." The town had previously bought, in 1835, the farm of Aaron Peirce, Esq., containing at that time one hundred and nine acres and thirty-three rods, with the buildings thereon, and used it as a poor farm.

June 30. All the large manufacturing establishments in town except the Armory stopped in consequence of the general depression in business. Labor was very cheap and abundant, and there were constant applications for work. Breadstuffs continued high: flour was $12 a barrel, and other things were in proportion.

November 13. It was voted "that the trustees of the Surplus Revenue from the United States be required to appropriate the balance of this revenue in their hands not appropriated, to the payment of the town farm debt."

The grading of the Millbury branch railroad and the depot, situated on Canal street, were completed in June. The original cost of the construction of this branch line is said to have been $41,000.00. On November 22d "the first freight cars arrived on the Millbury Branch Railroad, with coal for A. Waters and Son."

November 24. By invitation, a party of forty or fifty persons came from Boston, with the directors of the Boston and Worcester R. R., to Millbury at the opening of the branch railroad. People were also present from Worcester. Cannon were fired and bells were rung, upon their arrival. After viewing the road and the station the company gathered at Academy Hall in which dinner was served followed by speeches and toasts. When the party left town, cannon were again fired and bells were rung. On November 27th, passenger cars began running. They left Millbury at seven in the morning, arriving in Boston at ten.

The meeting-house on Grass Hill was dedicated in July to the use of Congregationalists for three Sundays and Baptists one Sunday in each month, each paying in that proportion for the support of public worship.

December 5. The first delivery of five hundred pistols was made to the United States Government at Washington from the Waters Armory.

Perley Whipple offered for sale a mill site, previously used for making scythes, a dwelling, etc., below the outlet of Ramshorn pond.

Cotton waste, ropes, and bagging were bought by Silas Goddard at the old paper mill, formerly General Burbank's.

New firms in town were:

Stockwell & Pringle, manufacturers of list carpets, cushions, mats, and mattresses; J. W. Upham, carpenter and builder; Dr. William M. Benedict, Mr. How, and Boyden Sibley, wool-dealers.

William H. Wood and R. L. Hathaway were, successively, principals of the Academy.

January 7. The last twelve days were uncommonly warm and pleasant. The snow disappeared on the 27th of December, and the weather continued to grow warm until the frost left the ground. The roads became settled in many places and the grass started.

September 24. The Siamese twins were exhibited.

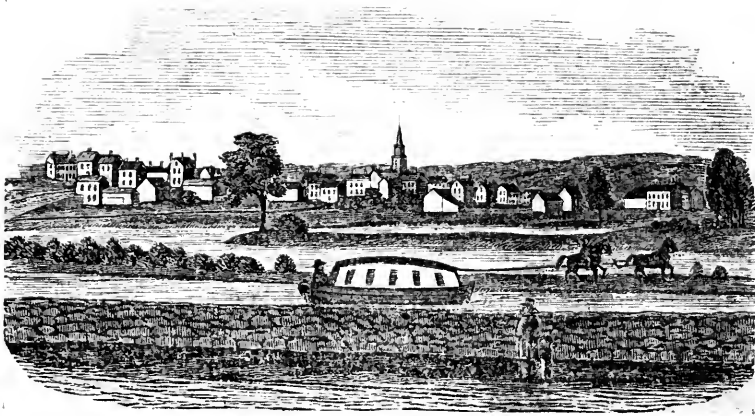

October 6. "The gun-factory caught fire at ten o'clock at night, but little damage was done."

These advertisements appear: William H. Hudson, tailor; A. G. Stiles, storekeeper; O. G. Davenport, boot manufacturer.

Brown's Woolen Mill was in operation.

This quotation was taken from a New York newspaper:

"We have seen broad-cloth made at Millbury, Mass., equal to any imported. The President and Secretary of State have ordered suits made from it. The price is twelve dollars per yard at wholesale. Members of Congress are to be invited to buy suits from this cloth."

MILLBURY FROM THE EAST IN 1839

July of this year was said to have been the hottest month for a hundred years past and the June preceding was said to have been the next hottest month.

February 28. The country was just emerging from that gulf of embarrassment and ruin into which the extravagant speculations of '37 and '38 had plunged so many. Money was getting to be very abundant and prices were expanding in corresponding ratio.

March 4. It was "Voted to re-commit the report offered by the committee to examine the title to the land occupied as a public common (old common) with instructions to take such legal advice as they may think proper, provided, the First Congregational Society will share with the town in the expense." (See Chapter I.)

"Voted to allow members of engine companies three dollars each per year."

May 17. "A barn one-hundred feet long and forty wide, belonging to Capt. A. Wood, was burnt. This was the fifth time that Captain Wood had suffered by fire, making his total loss twelve thousand dollars.

June 25. At a meeting of the Second Congregational church the propriety of women's speaking in meeting was discussed with much excitement. Other meetings were held and after frequent discussions as to the right of woman's participation it was "voted that the whole subject be indefinitely postponed."

June. Thomas Blanchard recovered $521.27 from Charles Sprague for an infringement on his patent for turning or cutting irregular forms by an engine of Blanchard's invention.

At the fourth of July celebration the Democratic collector of the port of Boston, Benj. F. Hallet, was present with a band from a Revenue Cutter.

Sept. 9. This advertisement appeared in the Worcester Spy: "One cent reward—Run away from Henry Adams, West Millbury, apprentice, Martin Flood, 16 years old"—Mr. Flood afterwards became a very prominent man in the western country.

Hale, Whipple, and Waters were manufacturers of Hathaway's improved regulators.

Wiswall and Lee were storekeepers.

Jonathan A. Pope operated the "stone" factory at Bramanville.

"Wool carding, spinning, and dressing shop-cloth garments was performed by Nathan Clark."

Tin, copper, and sheet iron work was done by Holland Batchelder at Randall's building.

Two partnerships were dissolved, viz: that of "Silas Goddard & Co.," consisting of Silas Goddard, J. A. Pope, and John Wright, and the company of "Goulding and Carlton," shoe manufacturers.

Two physicians in town at this time were Dr. William M. Benedict and Dr. William B. Moore.

"Several cases of typhus fever occurred in the southern part of Armory Village."

March 2. It was "voted that the sum of $250.00 be appropriated towards purchasing an engine with suction hose, provided, the same amount be raised by subscription." The town chose Asa H. Waters, Dr. Wm. M. Benedict, Stephen Blanchard on the school committee. Evidently there was some remaining surplus revenue from the United States, for the town "voted that the balance of this revenue be appropriated towards building new roads."

The following is a list of expenses for the year ending March 1.

Town Officers,	$ 115.05
Highways and bridges,	1,222.19
Miscellaneous expenses,	1,403.99
Expenses for poor,	539.09
Schools,	972.71
County tax for 1839,	478.28
Bounty on wheat,	21.45

July 1. A sabbath school celebration was held in the grove at Singletary Lake, at which about twelve hundred pupils were present. Hymns were composed and sung.

In July a very interesting debate was given by members of the Lyceum, the question being—"Ought Gen. William Henry Harrison (The Whig candidate) to be the next president of the United States?" The meetings which were held in the Academy Hall continued for several evenings in succession, and the room was crowded every night for the question attracted much local talent and excited a great deal of interest in the community. The affirmative or Whig side was finally victorious.

The principal speakers on the affirmative were C. R. Miles, Esq., Mr. Bruce and Mr. Hutchinson of Sutton; on the negative side, Mr. Freeland, Walter March, and Col. A. H. Waters. This campaign was notable as marking the introduction of the widespread mass meetings in presidential campaigns.

November 17. The Methodist meeting-house which was raised on July 11 was dedicated.

December 27. The old Braman Factory was burned.

Snow fell one and one-half feet deep during the night and the engine, which was drawn by oxen, arrived at the fire half an hour after the building had been burned to the ground. After its arrival, three-quarters of an hour were required to start the engine working.

The ladies of the town furnished money to help complete Bunker Hill monument.

Mr. Foster Freeland was principal of the Academy. "Allen and Goddard" dissolved partnership, and the business, that of making sash and blinds, was continued by Abijah Allen and Marquis Green.

M. D. Moulton advertised a factory to let.

February. A grindstone burst at the scythe works of Hale, Whipple, and Waters, fatally wounding the grinder, John Sawtell. One part of the stone was thrown through the floor overhead.

March. It was "voted that $250.00 be appropriated for Grass Hill Engine, provided the same amount be subscribed in ninety days."

The town also "voted to appropriate $250.00 to build an engine-house on Grass Hill, if an engine is procured."

This year there were many fires in town, more than for the twenty years previous, several being of incendiary origin. In March the tavern and livery stable of S. Farnsworth were destroyed, and in July his brick store burned. The tavern was occupied by Elijah A. Johnson. In the same month S. D. Torrey's barn was set on fire. Although it was not badly damaged, much excitement was aroused and the woods were searched in the western part of the town. July 28 the bolting factory burned. In September a store in Bramanville kept by Simmons and Stone was also set on fire.

July 5. A large sabbath school celebration was attended by about twelve hundred. Dinner was served in C. R. Miles' woods near the railroad. Mr. Jewett addressed the assembly in the meeting-house, and Mr. Stevens, Mr. Scudder, and Mr. Haven, made addresses in the grove.

Dec. 27. The Green factory in the Paper Mill village burnt down and the machinery was ruined.

Goddard & Rice admitted to partnership George H. Rice and the firm became Goddard, Rice, & Co. In addition to manufacturing boots and shoes, they carried on the currying business.

Among advertisements were the following:

To be sold at auction at the mill of Leland and Sabin, Bramanville (the W. W. Windle & Co. location), paper machinery belonging to the estate of James Phelps.

(signed) ALEXANDER DEWITT, Assignee.

Tyler and Goodwin, hat and cap manufacturers, were at the old stand of Charles Tyler.

“Singletary Manufacturing Co.: Amasa Wood, Pres.; Samuel Davis, A. G. Stiles, Asa Hunting, directors.

A. Mason & Son manufactured shoe nails.

E. Dudley was at the Millbury Shoe Store.

W. Hudson was a tailor.

1842

The emancipation of the slaves in the West Indies was celebrated.

A. G. Stiles & Company dissolved partnership.

1843

Two serious fires occurred during this year. February 14, the Singletary Mills with all the contents was burned, at a loss of sixteen thousand dollars. Later, the barn and office of C. R. Miles were destroyed by fire.

“Bryant and Simmons” (Ira Bryant and John Simmons) dissolved partnership.

There was much anti-slavery agitation in town. Several speakers gave stirring and forceful addresses before large assemblies and at the Second Congregational Church decided action against slavery was taken.

March 4. It was “voted that the selectmen be authorized to purchase three and one-half acres of land near the new cemetery, if it can be purchased for the same sum per acre that was paid for the lot purchased last year (Central Cemetery)."

Hale and Whipple's shop had a capacity for making three thousand scythes a year.

Randall Holden manufactured satinnet warp.

"J. H. Knight & Co." (J. H. Knight and W. Leonard) were hatters.

The C. R. Mile's house was opened by Thomas Stevens as a public hotel, called "The Millbury House."

Pope and Brierly kept a general store in Randall's block (site of the present Cunningham block).

The firm of "Goddard & Rice" dissolved.

Mr. Harvey D. Walker was principal of the Academy.

In December current papers contained articles about Dr. Leonard Gale, who was born in Millbury, and F. D. J. Smith, relating to the telegraph.

A building owned by Asa H. Waters caught fire. The north end was used as a grist mill, one room in the south end was used as a gun shop, one for making shoe pegs, and one for cutting shoe nails.

March 3. It was "voted to appropriate the sum of $60.00 to repair the fence, and to purchase the right which Elijah Holman has in the Grass Hill burying-ground."

At the fair of the American Institute in New York, S. Woodward exhibited broadcloth.

The Millbury Bank reduced its capital to $50,000.

During this year occurred the death of Dea. Ammi Faulkner, a Revolutionary pensioner, eighty-nine years old.

December. Rev. and Mrs. Buckingham were surprised at the parsonage and presented with one hundred and forty dollars.

December. Elijah Waters moved into his new house (now owned by Clifford R. Harris).

Mr. A. K. Packard was principal of the Academy.

Smith and Pratt, of Bramanville, advertised spinning-frames for sale.

March 2. It was "voted that the town raise and appropriate a sum of money, which shall be equal to one-half of the expense of purchasing a Fire-Engine for District No. 3, Bramanville, provided the inhabitants of said district raise and pay into the town treasury the other half of said expense, said engine not to cost more than $1000."

March 16. "Voted that the selectmen be authorized and required to build a receiving tomb at the new cemetery."

March 30. A beginning was made in town toward building the Providence and Worcester railroad, the first work that of building a stone wall, being done near the Armory south of the office.

CHAPTER IX

MILLBURY ACADEMY

When Millbury Academy was established, there were but five other such schools in the county. These were at Uxbridge, Dudley, Leicester, Westminster, and Lancaster. To meet an apparent public need in the region the Academy in Millbury was started in 1832. Funds were contributed for erecting suitable buildings, a charter was obtained, and a board of trustees was chosen, consisting of ex-Gov. John Davis, and Judge Pliny Merrick, both of Worcester, the Hon. James L. Sibley and the Rev. H. A. Tracy, both of Sutton, Dr. Bardwell of Oxford, the Rev. Elisha Rockwood of Westborough, Asa H. Waters, and Henry Mills, both of Millbury, Mr. Waters being secretary of the board. At this time Millbury had a population of only one thousand six hundred and eleven, and Governor Davis frequently remarked, that he did "not see how the people had been able to raise by subscription money enough to build that Academy." Certainly there can be no doubt that it did require an effort. Governor Davis, popularly known as "honest John Davis," was then a member of Congress, and for many years was the colleague of Daniel Webster. Although he was burdened with public duties of great moment, yet he took a particular interest in the school, driving down from Worcester to attend all meetings of the board. He drew up the By-Laws for the Corporation as well as the Rules and Regulations of the school.

The Academy building was erected in 1832, at a cost of about forty-five hundred dollars. When completed it was publicly dedicated by a celebration which made a gala day in Millbury. A procession marched to the Second Congregational Church in which the exercises were held. An appropriate and scholarly address was delivered by Judge Merrick and this was followed by music and a collation. The first teachers, Mr. William Hall from Dartmouth College, preceptor, and Miss Charlotte O. Spooner, from the famous seminary of Mrs. Willard at Troy, N. Y., preceptress, were on the ground and the school was opened at once. Scholars came from all the neighboring towns, so crowding the accommodations that an extra boarding house had to be provided for their accommodation. The school continued in a prosperous condition for several years, as long, in fact, as the original teachers remained. During the first year ninety-one pupils were enrolled.

The land on which the Millbury Academy was erected was given by Asa Waters, June 9, 1832. A portion of his deed of gift was as follows:

“Know all men by these presents that I Asa Waters of Millbury in the County of Worcester & Commonwealth of Massachusetts Esquire in consideration of my respect and attachment to the cause of good learning & the deep & lively interest I feel for the prosperity of this my native town & the improvement of the rising generation in the liberal arts & sciences & in the further consideration of one dollar to me in hand paid by the Proprietors of Millbury Academy a Corporation duly established by law in said Millbury the receipt whereof I do acknowledge do hereby give, grant, sell, & convey unto the said Corporation their successors & assigns a certain tract or parcel of land situated in the Easterly part of said Millbury near the Armory Village so-called, lying on the Northerly side of the road leading from said Millbury to Grafton a few rods Northwest of the house where I now reside. . . .containing by measurement one hundred and twenty rods and six-tenths. . . .

“Provided, nevertheless, that if the aforesaid Proprietors or their successors shall fail & neglect to keep & maintain in successful operation an efficient & respectable Academy or high school on the aforesaid premises for the space of two years at any one period of time then this deed shall be void, but in case of said neglect the said Corporation shall always have the priviledge of purchasing said land at the price of five hundred dollars.”

Some of the teachers who were later employed proved unpopular so that the number of pupils from outside fell off and the school lost its prestige, declining rapidly. At this juncture the corporation decided to sell the property and it passed into the hands of a manufacturer, who proposed to convert the building into a block of tenements. In this attempt, however, he was frustrated by a provision which the donor of the land had inserted in the deed. The purchaser neglected to secure a clear title by the payment of five hundred dollars as provided in the gift referred to, consequently, he found himself obliged either to support an Academy or a High School, or to lose his property. In the meantime a third party had secured the donors' rights to the land and he refused to sell at any price. Thus matters remained, until the manufacturer was willing to sell the Academy property to the town in 1851. Then it was made a free High School in common with the other public schools.

In a Worcester County history the Academy is mentioned as follows:

“Millbury Academy, like several other similar schools, had to succumb to the High School system, when the town in which it was located came under the scope of the law in relation to high schools. The property was sold to the town in 1852. Like other institutions of the kind now dead and forgotten, it did good service in its day. It is a great mistake to suppose these schools were failures because they died a natural death. As well might we speak of the career of a good man or woman as failures because they have passed away. They must be estimated by the amount and quality of the work they performed while they did live. Judged by this standard, the old Academies will ever be esteemed by the student of history as among the potent forces by which society was informed and elevated in former generations.” (Wor. Co. History, Vol. I, page 120.)

The last principal of the Millbury Academy, Mr. A. P. Stone, who was principal in 1851, became one of the foremost educators in the Commonwealth.

Many graduates might be named who have in their later lives reflected credit upon the institution. One, however, Horace Maynard, stands out with special prominence. He was born Aug. 30, 1814, at Westborough, Mass. When a poor boy, laboring on a farm in his native town, he heard of the new Academy and came to see what it could do for him. After two years passed under the direction of the principal, the Rev. Dr. Dana, he entered Amherst College, in 1834, and at his graduation was valedictorian. He was afterwards professor in the University in Knoxville, Tenn. He became a distinguished lawyer. He was U. S. congressman from Tennessee, from 1857 to 1863. In 1864, he became attorney-general of Tennessee, again a member of Congress from 1866 to 1875, U. S. minister to Turkey from 1875 to 1880, and postmaster-general under President Hayes, in 1880-81. He died in Knoxville, Tenn., May 3, 1882.

Among those who taught at the institution in the early days of the Academy were Messrs. Hall, Richardson, Hathaway, Bushnell, and Wood, and Misses Spooner, Young, Lewis, and Davis.

The Academy corporation later included the following gentlemen:—Caleb Burbank, Abijah Allen, Simon Farnsworth, William M. Benedict, Samuel Wood, Lewis Mills, Jonas L. Sibley, David B. Harrington, Charles Hale, James Goodell, Elias Forbes, Henry Mills, Nathaniel Goddard, William Ryan, Samuel D. Torrey, Jonas A. H. Hovey, Sophia March, Abraham G. Randall, Jonathan Gale, and Asa H. Waters. Gen. Caleb Burbank was president, Henry Mills was treasurer, and Abraham G. Randall was secretary.

Trustees were the Hon. John Davis, of Worcester, Henry Wood, Esq., of Grafton, Calvin Willard, Esq., of Worcester, the Rev. Elisha Rockwood, of Westborough, Judge Pliny Merrick, of Worcester, Jonas L. Sibley, Esq., of Sutton, the Rev. George W. Campbell, of Millbury, the Rev. John Maltby, of Sutton, the Rev. Osgood Herrick, of Millbury, the Rev. John Wilde, of Grafton, Abraham G. Randall, Esq., of Millbury, and Col. Asa H.

Waters, of Millbury. The Hon. John Davis was president, Calvin Willard, vice-president, Asa H. Waters, Esq., secretary, and Henry Mills, Esq., treasurer.

The following was taken from the catalogue for the year ending February, 1851—(the last one issued). Mr. Stone continued as principal until 1856 in the High School.

CHAPTER X

1851

March 4. It was "voted to raise and appropriate one hundred dollars to purchase town maps, said maps to be placed in the hands of the Town Clerk and by him sold at cost."

November 10. J. E. Waters, A. P. Benchley, and Henry Waterman were appointed envelope distributors under the secret ballot law.

A vote upon revising or altering the constitution of the commonwealth resulted in two hundred twenty-eight yeas and one hundred seventy-two nays.

In July the first meeting of those named in the act of incorporation of the Millbury and Southbridge railroad was called at Turner's Hotel in Southbridge.

Elijah Holman and others in Millbury desired that the Paul Thurston farm be annexed to the town. This was one of the several farms whose owners had been given the right of choosing the town to which they desired annexation when boundary changes were previously made.

The vestry of the Second Congregational Church was built this summer and dedicated September 23d. One hundred and twenty-eight dollars were collected for this purpose at a picnic held September 3d.

Clark Goulding operated the Ridgeway mill.

Goddard and Rice, dealers in boots and shoes, dissolved partnership.

March 1. Seven hundred and fifty dollars were voted for the High School for the current year.

An attempt was made by a capitalist of New York and a citizen of the town to put out of office the old board of directors of the Millbury Bank and thereby gain control of the institution. In 1851 the bank paid dividends of eight per cent and had on hand a reserve fund of seven thousand dollars in profits.

March 31. The flannel mill, situated near the cemetery, burned.

October 24. (Sunday.) The Singletary mill burned.

Charles Hale advertised that he had a stone scythe-factory to let or for sale.

Jan. 14. Friday morning, A. H. Waters & Co.'s cotton mill burned.

March 7. At the town meeting Asa H. Waters was chosen moderator and Ira N. Goddard, town clerk. (This was the first of sixty-two successive elections of Mr. Goddard to this office.) Mr. Waters was elected as delegate to the Constitutional Convention to be held at Boston.

March 8. One thousand dollars were voted for the High School. The prudential committee of the school districts was authorized to hire teachers for the several school districts.

In March a bill was reported to the legislature for incorporating the Millbury Savings Bank.

John Pender invented a new fancy loom which was in operation at the mill of Smith and Pratt, New England Village, Grafton.

April 10. Sunday morning the machine shop formerly owned by Dea. John Leeland burned at 5 o'clock.

April. The sash and blind company of Fullam & Morse (T. S. Fullam, C. D. Morse, E. M. Park) dissolved. The new firm formed was H. Armsby, C. D. Morse and E. M. Park.

GROUT CORNER, NORTHEAST CORNER OF MAIN AND CHURCH STREETS, 1892

June 6. The Millbury Sash Co. (T. B. Allen, Benjamin McIntire, Franklin Dwinell) dissolved.

Thomas Ashworth returned from California bringing a nugget of almost pure gold that weighed seventy-three and one-half ounces and was valued at thirteen hundred dollars.

Dr. Henry G. Davis advertised as a specialist of curvatures and club-feet.

W. R. Johnson and G. J. Taft were storekeepers.

J. P. Denison was leader and Wm. F. Lovell, clerk of the Millbury Cornet Band.

January. Horace Greeley lectured at the Second Congregational Church.

March 6. It was "voted that the selectmen be authorized to purchase of Asa H. Waters about three acres of land suitable for an addition to the cemetery."

N. P. Smith of the "know-nothing" party was the representative in the Legislature from Millbury.

This year so far as known all drinking places in town were closed.

March 5. It was "voted to build a receiving tomb in the cemetery on Grass Hill."

A committee chosen to determine the manner of repairing highways reported thereon and it was voted that the highway districts be abolished and that one agent be appointed for each district, who should make semi-annual report to the selectmen. These suggestions were accepted.

It was voted that the name "Central Cemetery" be applied to the new cemetery, that the part laid out in 1854 be called the "west section," the other part the "east section."

It was voted that owners of dogs should pay a tax of one dollar on each dog; and that dogs should be muzzled, if they ran at large.

May 23. B. C. Summer was appointed by the selectmen as liquor agent.

In September news was received of the death of Gen. Joseph Farnsworth.

October 23. At a meeting of the selectmen, T. H. Barton was appointed police officer with all the powers of a constable, except the serving and executing of any civil process.

October 30. The town collector and treasurer having absconded, the assessors appointed Ira N. Goddard as collector and, November 6, the town chose David Atwood as treasurer.

October. John P. Hale lectured on Anti-slavery.

Wendell Phillips lectured at the Second Congregational Church.

True W. Childs, executor of the estate of Abijah Gleason, offered for sale the old shop once occupied by Thomas Blanchard and the saw-mill privilege nearly opposite; also a reservoir near Ramshorn Pond.

1856

January 9. The thermometer registered twenty degrees below zero, the lowest for years.

January 13. More snow was on the ground than at any one time "for twenty years past."

March 8. Simon Farnsworth was chosen town treasurer. It was voted that the highway districts be re-established and that surveyors be chosen to repair the same, as in former years.

March 10, Orra Goodell, Gates Chapman, A. W. Wood, and N. H. Jordan were appointed police officers.

March 22. David Atwood was chosen to fill a vacancy on the school committee, caused by the resignation of the Rev. N. Beach.

April. There was a meeting of the "Society of Social Friends" held at the Academy as a farewell to A. P. Stone, the retiring principal, who was presented with a gold watch.

June. A large and spirited indignation meeting was held regarding the assault on Charles Sumner at which condemnatory resolutions were passed.

Millbury raised two hundred dollars in cash and collected two hundred dollars' worth of clothing for the free state people of Kansas.

September. Wheeler and Mallalieu, dealers in tin ware, dissolved, but Mr. Mallalieu continued the business.

Thayer and Johnson, manufacturers of portemonnaies, on South Main St., dissolved partnership. This business was later moved to New Worcester.

Charles A. Tourtellotte opened a hotel at the lower tavern stand, moving from West Sutton.

Advertisements:

Harrington & Heald, Tools. S. R. Parker, carriages.

January 22. On Thursday night there was a severe snowstorm and on Friday morning the thermometer registered twenty-six degrees below zero.

August 8. At five o'clock Sunday morning Capt. Charles Hale's house caught fire and partly burned. It was saved by A. H. Waters' force pump.

An attempt was made to blow up the residence of A. G. Randall by placing against the door a bomb made by filling a tube of iron two and one-half feet long with powder. The door was torn to pieces, windows were blown in and partitions wrecked, but, fortunately, no one was hurt. The selectmen offered two hundred dollars for the detection of the perpetrators of the outrage.

S. E. Slocum manufactured the "Floating Ball or Knuckle Washing Machine."

The firm of Harrington, Heald & Co. wanted grinders for chisels and drawing knives at the Witherby works.

March 1. David Atwood was chosen town treasurer. At the annual town meeting it was "voted to instruct the selectmen to appoint a liquor agent with a salary of one dollar.

"Voted that no compensation be allowed the members of the fire department for the ensuing year."

All the churches of the town held revival services.

A large demand for Josslyn's breech-loading rifle kept the armory of Col. A. H. Waters very busy filling orders.

A. Wood and Sons and A. O. Cummins introduced improved stock into town. The Woods purchased "Lady Chesterford," costing $650.00; and Mr. Cummins bought "Lady Sayles," worth $250.00. Both animals were "Shorthorns."

Aaron P. Small, of the firm of Armsby, Small, and Morse, died. The business was continued by Armsby and Morse.

S. R. Parker advertised as a carriage maker.

In August the Donatia comet appeared, the most splendid, it was said, in hundreds of years.

January 10. The thermometer registered 27° below zero.

March 7. The town voted three dollars per year to each member of the fire department. It was voted that the selectmen be instructed to retain the control of Academy Hall, that they let it for all proper purposes, and that the town meetings be held there. (This was the last town meeting held in the First Congregational church building.)

Dr. B. T. Green, a physician and preacher, was located in town.

Henry C. Rice took out a patent for John H. Hathaway, deceased, of Millbury for an improved rotary engine.

T. H. Wetherby Tool Company advertised chisels and drawing knives.

The Stillwater mill, Austin Fowler, agent, made shirts and drawers.

George A. Perry & Co. (Geo. A. Perry, H. Hall), watchmakers, dissolved partnership.

April. The old canal storehouse, owned by D. B. Sibley, burned.

May. The selectmen inquired into the report concerning a cattle disease that appeared on the Severy farm at West Millbury.

The Post Office at West Millbury was discontinued.

June. The Stillwater Manufacturing Company dissolved. Austin Fowler of Moosup, Conn., agreed to settle.

C. E. Hale sold to D. B. Chase his business of making Fuller's patent compensating railing.

November 24. The No. 2 cotton mill of A. H. Waters and Co. was damaged by fire in the morning, the loss amounting to $3,500.00. It caught from friction in the head of a pair of spinning mules. Sixty hands were thrown out of work.

1861

March 18. "Voted that the selectmen be authorized to negotiate with Colonel Waters, or some other person, for a room or rooms for a lock-up."

"Voted to raise the sum of one hundred dollars for the purpose of improving the Dwinell burying ground, so-called, provided, the owners convey the same to the town by quit-claim deed."

April 11. The first express train from Worcester to Providence passed Millbury at half past eleven in the forenoon.

CHAPTER XI

CIVIL WAR

In compiling an account of Millbury men in the Civil War the individuals have been grouped with the regiments in which they served, for it is only in a rough way that the career of the separate soldier may be ascertained, since the regimental returns were very inadequate. Indeed, not infrequently the papers and books of a regiment have been lost completely, either through the capture of headquarters or because of some necessity of strenuous campaigning. In other cases scant records were kept because of a fear lest information be given the enemy if the papers should be lost.

In the sketches which follow, engagements and campaigns are cited in which the individual may have taken part, although of this fact we cannot be altogether sure, as he may have been on detached service, on sick leave, or even in a Confederate prison.

The names that are included in this chapter comprise those men that were credited to Millbury in their enlistment, although several of these did not reside here at the time. It also includes men who have lived in the town since the Civil War, but who enlisted from other places. For this latter list we have been mainly dependent on the records of the George A. Custer Post, No. 70 G. A. R. The dates and notes recorded have been taken almost altogether from the publications of the adjutant-general's office of the state, although regimental histories, personal accounts, and the G. A. R. roster have also furnished material.

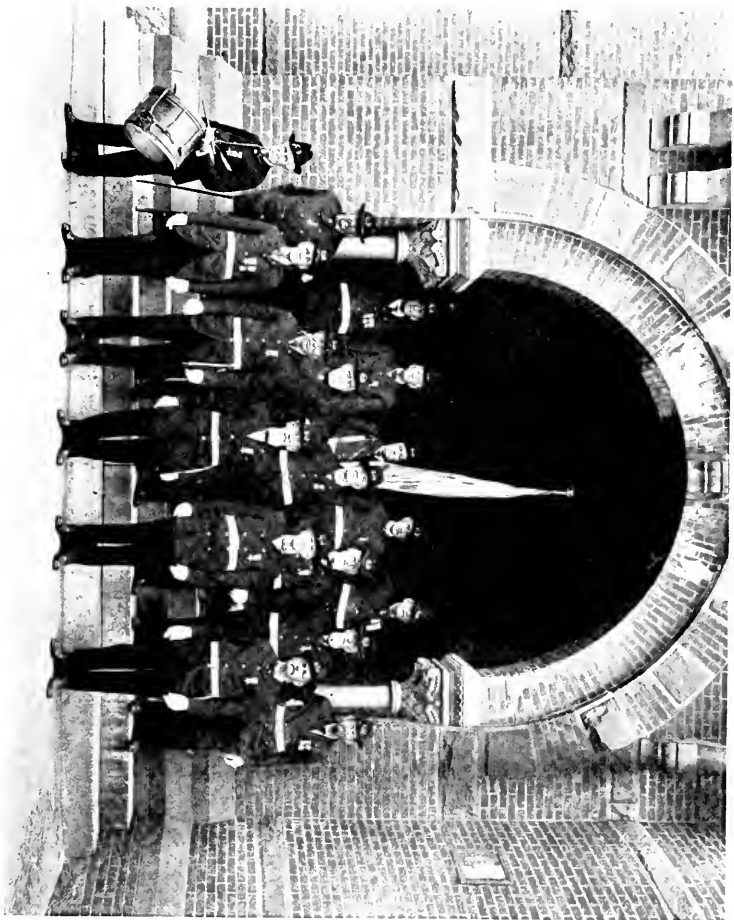

During the Civil War Millbury furnished three hundred and forty-six men, of whom seven were officers—a surplus of twenty-six over all the demands that were made upon the town. Some of these, however, were re-enlistments or second enlistments. In 1861, 471 in the town were available for military service.

The first meeting held to consider matters relating to the war met May 7, 1861, when a vote was passed appointing a war committee and authorizing the expenditure of all that the committee might deem needful in furnishing those who enlisted from the town with all that they might need, and the selectmen were directed at their discretion to supply the families of volunteers. This committee consisted of J. E. Waters, Hosea Crane, Nymphas Longley, Sylvester Smith, C. D. Morse, Silas Dunton, and David F. Wood. (See Annals, 1862, 1863, 1864, 1865.) In March, 1862, twenty-three families were thus being assisted. From time to time the town also authorized the payment of bounties to the recruits who were credited to the town. The total amount that was paid out in aid of soldiers' families was $19,676.56 all of which was repaid by the State. The whole amount of money appropriated and expended for war purposes, exclusive of State Aid, was $35,930.74.

Although there was no local Soldiers' Aid Society organized in the town the ladies of the several churches sent clothing and other supplies to the front and to the hospitals. They also took work for the "Soldiers' Rest" of Worcester and in other ways answered to the frequent calls for patriotic service that were made upon them. Teachers and pupils in the public schools devoted time to picking lint from linen cloth that was brought from the homes.

SECOND REGIMENT

The Second Regiment was mustered into the service of the United States May 25, 1861, and was mustered out July 14, 1865. It took part in the following engagements:

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC. GEORGE A. CUSTER POST No 70. 1913

Jackson, Port Royal, Winchester, Cedar Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Resaca, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta, Raleigh, and Averysborough. It was one of two Massachusetts regiments with Sherman's army in the march from the mountains to the sea.

FIFTEENTH REGIMENT

The Fifteenth Regiment of Massachusetts volunteers was mustered into the service of the United States June 12, 1861, under the command of Col. Charles Devens, Jr., and left for Washington Aug. 8, 1861. The regiment was recruited in Worcester County and its nucleus consisted of three companies, viz: A, B, and C, of the Ninth Regiment, to which were added recruits from many New England families that had been represented in the Revolution.

The regiment was first engaged at Ball's Bluff, Va., where it suffered severely. It was next engaged in the battles of the Peninsula campaign and afterwards at Antietam where 52 per cent were lost in killed and wounded and 24 were missing, for of 606 officers and men who entered the battle only 262 remained available for service. This was one of the heaviest regimental single battle losses of the war. So severe, indeed, were the casualties which the regiment suffered in its early fighting that it was reported to have been "shot to pieces."

The regiment was engaged in the battle of Fredericksburg, but it did not suffer severely.

Not only in battle but also on the march the men won distinction for with the 19th regiment the 15th was complimented in General Orders, June 26, 1863, for marching in the best and most compact order and with the least straggling from the ranks.

The regiment took part in the Battle of Gettysburg, July 2 and 3, 1863, going into action with 18 officers and 221 men of whom 22 were killed and 93 wounded.

In August, 1863, 169 recruits were received. In the fall of that year the regiment was engaged in many skirmishes and in the battles of Bristow Station and Robert's Tavern.

Early in 1864 about fifty re-enlisted for three years and about as many recruits were received. May 1, 1864, at the opening of the Spring campaign, there were about three hundred officers and men present for duty, but in the battle of the Wilderness one half of this number were lost in killed and wounded. In all the marches from the Rapidan to Petersburg in which the Second Army Corps was engaged this regiment bore its part. On June 22d, only five officers and seventy men could be put into battle near the Jerusalem Plank Road before Petersburg and in the engagement nearly all of this remnant were captured as prisoners, only one officer and five men escaping. These were placed in another command until the return of convalescents from the hospitals permitted an independent organization again.

On July 12, 1864, three years having expired since its enlistment, the regiment proceeded to Worcester, Mass., where it was mustered out of the service. It then marshaled only 85, some being in prison, some in hospitals, and some transferred to other regiments. Those whose terms of enlistment had not expired were transferred to the Twentieth Regiment.

TWENTIETH REGIMENT

The Twentieth Regiment was in the Federal service from Aug. 28, 1861, until July 16, 1865, having an eventful existence of four years. In this period it rendered all manner of service, suffering severely at Gettysburg and in other battles. Toward the close of the war, however, although frequently engaged, the regiment did not lose heavily. It took part in the following engagements: Ball's Bluff, Yorktown, West Point, Fair Oaks, Peach Orchard, Savage Station, Glendale, Malvern Hill, Chantilly, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Bristoe's Station, Mine Run, Wilderness, Po River, Spottsylvania, Tolopotomy, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Strawberry Plains, Deep Bottom, Ream's Station, Boydton Road, Vaughn Road, and Farmville.

TWENTY-FIRST REGIMENT

The Twenty-first Regiment was recruited at Worcester. It left Massachusetts, Aug. 23, 1861, and proceeded to Annapolis, Md., where it remained until Jan. 6, 1862, when it proceeded to North Carolina and later became engaged in the battles of Roanoke Island, Newbern, and Camden. In July the regiment went to Newport News, Va., and later took part in the battles of Second Bull Run, Chantilly, South Mountain, Antietam, and Fredericksburg. After doing picket duty along the Rappahannock in the winter of 1862-'63 it proceeded to Newport News again and remained there about two months.

March 26, 1863, the regiment started for Kentucky where it gained a moral victory amid a prejudiced and hostile people by winning respect and affection for the "Yankee" troops. After spending five months in this state, on September 12th the regiment marched into Tennessee where battles were fought at Blue Springs and at Campbell's Station. During the march the men were constantly harassed by the enemy and the rations were short. The siege of Knoxville followed until December 5th. On December 29th, after its hard service, all but twenty-four in the regiment re-enlisted for three years. During this year, 1863, the regiment marched 775 miles besides traversing a great distance over which it was transported.

Upon returning to the east the men were given a furlough to their homes in Massachusetts, but in the spring the regiment left Worcester for the approaching campaign, going to Annapolis where the Ninth Corps was being reorganized. After being reviewed by President Lincoln in Washington the corps co-operated with the Army of the Potomac in all the campaigns which led to the surrender of Lee. During this time the regiment participated actively in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anna, Shady Grove Road, and Cold Harbor. From June 16 the men were in the trenches before Petersburg and took part in the disastrous charge at the explosion of the mine reaching the most advanced position attained by the Union troops. Because of the great loss suffered, the confusion and the futility of the attempt, this was the most sorrowful and discouraging battle in which the Twenty-first was ever engaged.

Following the battles before Petersburg the regiment was engaged at the Weldon R. R., Poplar Spring Church, and at Hatcher's Run. At the expiration of three years from the date of enlistment those whose terms of enlistment had not expired, together with large numbers who had re-enlisted, were transferred to the Thirty-sixth regiment. The others were mustered out at Worcester, Aug. 30, 1864.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT

The Twenty-fourth Regiment left the state Dec. 9, 1861, and encamped at Annapolis, Md., until Jan. 6, 1862, when it went with the Burnside expedition to North Carolina and was engaged at Roanoke Island, Newbern, Kinston, and Goldsboro, in 1862, and at Ft. Wagner, and in other engagements before Charleston, S. C., during 1863. In October, 1863, it went to St. Augustine, Fla. In 1864, it participated in the campaign before Richmond in the Army of the James and was engaged at Drury's Bluff, Deep Bottom, and in the siege of Petersburg.

The regiment was mustered out of the service, Jan. 20, 1866, having lost eight officers and two hundred and ten enlisted men.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT

The Twenty-fifth Regiment, recruited from Worcester County, was mustered into the service of the United States at Worcester, Oct. 31, 1861, and left on the same day for Annapolis, Md.

The organization took part in the following engagements:—Roanoke, Newbern, Kinston, Whitehall, Goldsboro', Port Walthall, Arrowfield Church, Drury's Bluff, Cold Harbor, battles before Richmond, and Wise Forks. Losses, especially in wounded, were numerous because of many additional skirmishes in which the regiment was engaged.

In January, 1864, 432 in the regiment re-enlisted and after a furlough returned as a veteran regiment. Those not re-enlisting served meanwhile with the 139th New York Vols.

The regiment was mustered out of the service at Readville, July 28, 1865. It upheld the honor of the state in the service and never yielded its colors to the enemy.

THIRTY-FIRST REGIMENT.

The Thirty-first Regiment, called the "Western Bay State" regiment, left the state Feb. 21, 1862, and was mustered out as a regiment in December, 1864, leaving a battalion of five companies which was mustered out Sept. 9, 1865. The regiment was mounted and armed as cavalry and rendered service in or near Louisiana where it took part in the following engagements:—Bisland, Port Hudson, Brashear City, Sabine Cross Roads, Cane River Crossing, Alexandria, Governor Moore's Plantation, Yellow Bayou, and in the several actions at the siege of Mobile, Ala.

THIRTY-FOURTH REGIMENT

The Thirty-fourth Regiment was mustered into the service of the United States, Aug. 13, 1862, and left the state two days later for Washington, in or near which it was stationed for nearly a year, thus gaining an unusual proficiency in drill. In the latter part of 1863 the regiment performed picket and patrol duty, but was engaged in action only at Charlestown, Va.

In 1864, the regiment was actively employed in the Shenandoah Valley, participating in the battles of New Market, Piedmont, Lynchburg, Snicker's Gap, Martinsburg, Halltown, Berryville, Winchester, Fisher's Hall, and Cedar Creek. From May 1st to October 31st the regimental losses were 72 killed, 505 wounded, and 94 missing.

In 1865, the regiment was attached to the Army of the James and participated in the battle of Hatcher's Run and in engagements before Petersburg. The original members of the regiment were mustered out at Richmond, Va., June 16. Those whose terms of enlistment did not expire remained in that city and the main body proceeded to Readville, Mass., where the men were paid and discharged, July 6, 1865, twenty-five days before their period of enlistment had expired.

THIRTY-SIXTH REGIMENT.

The Thirty-sixth regiment was mustered into the service of the United States, Aug. 30, 1862, and left the state Sept. 2, 1862, having enlisted under the second call for three hundred thousand men for three years. This was after the first glamour of excitement over the newness of the war had died away and men enlisted knowing what fighting at the front meant in exposure to sickness, wounds, and possible death. It was a compact, homogeneous body of men, remarkably free from envy, strife, and jealousy, and from its ranks not an officer or enlisted man was dishonorably discharged.

The regiment was assigned to the ninth army corps, commanded by General Burnside, and joined the army at Antietam, just after the battle. It hastened to Fredericksburg at the time of Stuart's raid into Pennsylvania; campaigned in Virginia; and took part in the battle of Fredericksburg. In March, 1863, the regiment was transferred to the Army of the Ohio. It opposed the guerillas; proceeded to Vicksburg; operated against Jackson in the rear of Vicksburg; was ordered North, having suffered the ill effects of a hard campaign; operated in East Tennessee; participated in the battle of Blue Springs; was engaged in the movement against Longstreet; participated in the battle of Campbell's Station; was besieged at Knoxville; campaigned in East Tennessee; was ordered east and went into camp at Annapolis, Md., having completed a year of hard service.

At Annapolis, in 1864, the regiment was re-organized and recruited, ninety-one men were transferred to it from the twenty-ninth regiment, and fifty-six men were assigned for duty from the forty-sixth New York. Although the men in the ranks expected to be sent south the regiment was marched with the rest of the Ninth Corps to cooperate with the Army of the Potomac. It was engaged in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, and Cold Harbor. It took part in the siege of Petersburg, in the assaults on the rebel works there, and in the battle of Pegram Farm.

In November, 1864, the regiment was consolidated into seven companies and the remnant of the twenty-first regiment was incorporated as a battalion. After further service in the trenches the regiment was stationed at Fort Rice before Petersburg and it took part in the final assault. After participating in the Great Review of the armies in Washington the regiment was mustered out at Alexandria, June 8, and proceeded to Readville, Mass., for final discharge and pay.

The records of the regiment were lost in the campaign in East Tennessee. During the last campaign the regiment numbered about three hundred men present for duty. Two hundred and thirty-three were transferred to the fifty-sixth regiment, most of whom were re-enlisted veterans from the twenty-first regiment.

FORTY-SECOND REGIMENT

The Forty-second Regiment served two enlistments. The first of these was for nine months and extended from Sept. 30, 1862, until Aug. 20, 1863. In this enlistment the regiment served with distinction in Louisiana but suffered few casualties because the companies, excepting three which were captured at the very outset, were chiefly engaged in detached service. The second enlistment was for one hundred days and extended from July 22 until Nov. 11, 1864. On this second term of service the organization served in protecting railroads and in guarding prisoners near Alexandria, Va.

FIFTY-FIRST REGIMENT

The Fifty-first Regiment, a nine months' organization, left "Camp Wool," Worcester, Nov. 25, 1862, and proceeded to North Carolina where it took part in the Goldsboro' expedition and served in guarding railroads. The regiment suffered severely from malaria and other forms of sickness, and deaths were numerous. In June, 1863, with the exception of 183 sick, the regiment proceeded to Fortress Munroe, Va., and although its time of enlistment was nearly elapsed the men volunteered to perform active service. Accordingly, they were assigned to duty in the protection of railroads and in outpost service and they took part in the pursuit of the Confederates from Gettysburg.

On July 27, 1863, the regiment was mustered out, after a service of nearly ten months, during which it suffered a loss of 138 men out of an enrollment of 938.

FIFTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT

The Fifty-seventh, called also the Second Veteran, Regiment was mustered into the service of the United States Apr. 6, 1864. It left the state April 18 with its organization hardly complete and was sent immediately to the front where it was continually engaged in the severe campaigns which characterized the last year of the war.

It participated in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anna, and Cold Harbor, in the engagements before Petersburg including the charge at the explosion of the mine, also at Weldon R. R., Poplar Spring Church, and Hatcher's Run. With such arduous service the regiment became greatly reduced by death, sickness, wounds, and capture, so that at one time it entered action with only forty-five men in command of a lieutenant, and of these fifteen were lost.

June 20, 1865, the Fifty-ninth regiment was consolidated with the Fifty-seventh.

The regiment was mustered out of service July 30, 1865, having suffered a loss by death alone of two hundred and forty-nine.

SIXTY-FIRST REGIMENT

The Sixty-first Regiment went to the front in 1864 as the companies reached their maximum enrollment. For six months it was continuously employed in erecting fortifications covering City Point, Va., and in doing picket duty there. From Mar. 29, 1865, to the surrender of General Lee it was constantly under arms and took part in engagements before Petersburg, claiming that its skirmishers were the first to enter the city.

FIRST BATTALION OF HEAVY ARTILLERY

Several Millbury men who had served in the Tenth Unattached Company of Militia during its ninety days duty in the United States service re-enlisted in Co. F of the First Battalion of Heavy Artillery and were assigned to duty at Fort Warren in Boston Harbor, where important prisoners were confined. The company was mustered into the volunteer service Aug. 15, 1864, and was mustered out June 28, 1865. Although the enlistment was for one year, the termination of the war made the full term unnecessary.

Roster of Millbury men:

George A. Perry, 2d Lieut. Aug. 10, '64, to Aug. 16, '64. Capt. Aug. 16, '64 to June 28, '65.

Normand, Joseph W.	Whitney, Edwin D.
Putnam, Albert M.	Whitney, Francis
Rice, Henry F.	Willard, William H.
Robbins, David N.

In addition to the above, Walter Bunker and Michael Reardon both enlisted in Co. A of the same battalion Feb. 8, '65, and were mustered out Oct. 20, '65.

Wm. J. Barnes enlisted Feb. 15, '65, but deserted Apr. 3, '65.

SECOND REGIMENT OF HEAVY ARTILLERY

The companies composing the Second Regiment of Heavy Artillery were mustered into the service of the United States at various times during the year 1863. The regiment performed garrison duty in various fortifications in Virginia and North Carolina during its term of service. Sept. 1, 1864, companies G and H, numbering about two hundred and seventy-five men were captured, and early in 1865 but thirty-five rejoined the regiment when exchanged, thus showing the effects of prison life at Andersonville.

Roster of Millbury men:

CHAPTER XII

1871

January 3. Notice was issued by the selectmen that "cattle be prohibited from being driven through town without certificate from a veterinary surgeon that such cattle are not infected by any contagious disease."

"Voted that the money received from the tax on dogs be used for supporting the town library."

"Voted that the selectmen be instructed to procure a place, if possible, for a lock-up."

On Sunday night, July 3, the sash and blind shop of C. D. Morse & Co. was burned.

March 25. It was "Voted to accept the provisions of the act of the legislature of 1871, entitled 'An Act to provide for the election of Road Commissioners.'"

"Voted to choose a board of road commissioners, one member for three years, one for two years, and one for one year."

The town chose, as road commissioners, J. E. Waters, Nelson Walling, and Warren Sweetser.

"Voted that the selectmen be authorized and empowered to present to Samuel E. Hull a testimonial not exceeding in value $100, for his services in rescuing persons from the water near Hull's sawmill." The people thus rescued were Mrs. Minerva Marble; her son, George W. Marble; Miss M. Eva Reynolds; Miss Fanny E. Carter; and Miss Mary E. Carter.

"Voted $250, for Memorial Day."

MAIN, MILES AND CANAL STREETS

“Voted, a piano for the High School.”

“Voted, in addition to the dog-tax, $400 for the town library.”

“Voted for the support of schools in the town, $7500.”

“Voted to choose a committee of seven to take measures for securing steam-power for operating traffic on the Millbury Branch Railroad.” (At the time the cars were hauled by horses.)

1873

March 17. It was “voted that firemen be paid ten dollars and the amount of their poll-tax.”

“Voted that a committee of three be appointed to collect facts in regard to the part this town played in the late war, and prepare the same for preservation.” The committee consisted of Col. A. H. Waters, Ira N. Goddard, and Jonathan E. Waters.

A committee was appointed to consider the best means of furnishing water supply for use in case of fire.

The committee on procuring steam power on the Millbury Branch reported: but the town “voted that the report be recommitted.” This committee consisted of C. D. Morse, David Atwood, L. L. Whitney, John Hopkins, Esq., Rufus Carter, B. B. Howard, I. B. Sayles, Nathan H. Sears, H. L. Bancroft. (See Annals 1881.)

March 16. The town “voted that the selectmen be authorized to toll the bells in town this afternoon at 3 o'clock, during the funeral of Hon. Charles Sumner, and that a committee of three be appointed to present resolutions upon the death of our late Senator.”

“Voted to accept the report of the committee chosen at the last annual meeting to collect facts in regard to the part the town had in the late war, as made by Colonel Waters, the chairman, and that with the record of the Soldiers, as prepared in 1866, it be printed with the next annual reports.”

“Voted that a committee of three be appointed to take into consideration and report upon the matter of the pollution of the Blackstone river, by the Worcester system of sewerage. Committee appointed (consisted of) Geo. A. Flagg, C. D. Morse, O. H. Waters.”

“Voted that the road commissioners be instructed to construct side-walks, mentioned in Article 26th of the warrant, and that the town appropriate the sum of $1200 for the same.”

Resolutions were reported on the death of Charles Sumner.

“Voted, that a committee of five be appointed to take into consideration the whole subject of a Town Hall, and report to the town at the next November meeting.”

March 23. The town “voted, that the road commissioners be authorized to sell the land mentioned in article 25 of warrant (a gravel pit near the house of John Marlboro’) if in their opinion the interests of the town will not be subverted thereby—with the reservation that if intoxicating liquors shall ever be sold upon said premises, the title to said land shall revert to the town.”

The committee appointed at the annual meeting in 1873 on water supply in case of fire reported, and the report was accepted. Two routes were surveyed—one taking the water from Singletary Pond and the other from Hathaway’s Pond. The committee reported that the most feasible and reliable plan for furnishing an adequate supply of water for fire purposes was by taking the water from Singletary Pond.

The vote passed on the 16th of March concerning a committee to consider the subject of a Town Hall was amended so that the committee was to consist of seven persons, and it was instructed to select a suitable site for a Town-House.

Voted, that the trustees of cemeteries be a committee to ascertain the graves of any soldiers on the roll of honor of this town which are not marked, and report the cost of procuring and setting suitable markers.

May 7. "Voted, to receive the majority and minority reports of the committee on Town-House."

November 7. "Voted, that the citizens of this town are opposed to any division of the County of Worcester."

March 15. The town revoked the acceptance of the act in regard to road commissioners, and abolished the board. The outgoing board of selectmen appointed sixteen highway surveyors.

Two hundred dollars were appropriated for headstones for soldiers' graves.

It was voted that the selectmen divide the town into highway districts.

March 20. The town "voted to appropriate seventy-five dollars to furnish the armory in Aiken's Block," (for the use of the local military company).

"Voted that the trustees of cemeteries be instructed to set apart a lot in the Cemetery (Central) on which to erect head-stones for those soldiers who died elsewhere, but who were credited on the quota of this town."

It was voted that head-stones be erected at the graves of those soldiers credited elsewhere but buried in the town.

1877

March 19. A committee on extinguishing fires gave its report and the matter was postponed, but was again taken up and a committee of three was chosen to investigate.

1878

March 18. The town voted six hundred dollars for lighting the streets.

"Voted, that the town prohibit the encampment of Gypsies within its limits."

“Voted, that the selectmen be authorized to take for the town from the Commissioners of Inland fisheries a lease to the Town of Dorothy Pond.”

“Voted, that the town build a Town-Hall,” and a committee of nine was appointed to secure plans and estimates, C. D. Morse being chairman. They were also to find a suitable location, and report.

“Voted three thousand dollars for support of the poor.”

March 25. The committee on a town-house reported, recommending both the Rhodes and the Torrey lots. The committee desired to report further. The voters decided in favor of the Rhodes lot (the present location). The committee consisted of C. D. Morse, David Atwood, L. L. Whitney, John Hopkins, Esq., Rufus Carter, B. B. Howard, I. B. Sayles, Nathan H. Sears, H. L. Bancroft.

April 13. The committee on plans and estimates for a Town-House reported that, as the town had voted for the Rhodes lot, they had prepared their plans and estimates for that lot. Their total estimate of cost was twenty-eight thousand dollars for the building and lot, ready for the fixtures, and they recommended that the town adopt the plans. A minority report was presented, which agreed with the majority report, so far as it related to the plans, but differed in regard to the manner of stating the probable cost of the same. The minority believed the building would cost not less than thirty-five thousand dollars. It was then voted that the plans presented by the committee be adopted. The same committee was then chosen as a building committee, with power to build, but were instructed that they should not do so until the money was appropriated.

A motion was made to borrow twenty-eight thousand dollars, in anticipation of the taxes of 1878 and 1879, for the same purpose. The vote passed but it was afterwards rescinded. Attempts were afterwards made to change the location for the new town-house; but the $28,000 was finally voted, payable in ten years, and the Rhodes lot was retained. As a matter of fact the building far exceeded in cost the original estimate. $2,000 was paid for the site, and the town purchased an additional strip of land. The total cost of the Town House completed was $40,936.72.

March 24. It was "voted that the town join with Sutton in taking for both towns a lease of Singletary Pond." It was afterwards stocked with Lake Superior salmon trout.

$100 was voted for grading the common in Armory Village.

March 22. A town-meeting was held for the first time in the new Town Hall.

It was "voted to reduce the number of the school committee from six to three, as provided by law."

One thousand dollars were voted for the town library, to be expended for books only. It was also voted that the "reading room" (so-called) be set apart to be used for the town library.

It was voted that the old town hall in the Academy or High School building be turned over to the school committee, to be used for school purposes.

Five hundred dollars were voted for sidewalks, from the Crane and Waters mill to Wheeler's Village.

It was voted that Millbury be a fair town, and that the management of fairs be under the control of the selectmen.

May 5. The selectmen appointed tramp officers who were to protect the citizens by arresting all tramps.

March 21. At a town-meeting it was voted that a board of health be appointed, and that a committee be chosen to present names for such a board.

A committee of three was appointed to consider the purchase of steam fire-engines.

The committee on the pollution of the Blackstone River made a partial report and they were instructed to press the matter as they saw fit.

The committee chosen to select names for a board of health reported a list of names, but it was voted that further consideration of the report be postponed.

June 6. Steam power was used on the Millbury branch of the Boston and Worcester R. R. Previously, the passenger car had been hauled by one horse. The freight cars had required several horses to draw them.

November 8. The town voted that the treasurer be authorized to borrow money to meet the expenses of the committee on the pollution of the Blackstone.

March 20. It was "voted that the town ask the legislature to extend to women who are citizens the right to hold town offices and to vote in town affairs, on the same terms as male citizens."

Concerning an article in the warrant "To see if the town will purchase the unfenced portion of the 'Old Common' so-called, &c.," it was voted that it be left to the selectmen and if a clear title could be obtained one hundred and fifty dollars were voted for its purchase. There is no record in the next year's report of any such purchase. (See chapter on Topography.)

Voted to accept the report of the committee on water supply and fire-engines.

March 29. A committee was appointed to make inquiries about pipes and hydrants in the streets.

March 29. The committee on steam fire-engines reported it best to purchase two steamers, and the selectmen were instructed to have a trial of machines and to purchase what seemed best.

A committee was appointed to confer with the towns of Grafton and Northbridge in regard to having a superintendent of schools in common.

November 6. It was voted that a committee be appointed to provide suitable quarters for steamer number one.

March 17. The town "voted eight hundred dollars for lighting the streets, and $9,000 for schools.

It was voted that the engineers make arrangements to give alarms of fires, the expense not to exceed $250.

June 27. Registrars of voters were appointed by the selectmen.

November 4. A self-registering ballot-box was used. The box registered 616 votes, though but 601 names were checked on the voting list. The ballots were then taken from the box and there were found to be 601 cancelled and one uncanceled.

1885

March 16. The town voted that the committee on the pollution of the Blackstone remain in office, and continue its work.

The selectmen were authorized to put the cistern near the Baptist Church in order.

A new set of by-laws for the town was adopted and all previously existing by-laws, except those relating to truants, were repealed.

March 15. Three thousand dollars were voted for the support of the poor.

April 7. Nathan J. Streeter was appointed police-officer by the selectmen.

March 21. It was voted "that the town most strongly protests against any amendment nullifying, or in any way changing the provision of said act, that said sewerage (Worcester) shall be purified before being anywhere discharged into the Blackstone River." This above action was taken as a mark of the town's disapproval of the petitions presented to the legislature with the hope of amending the act passed the previous year (1886). (See annals, 1913.)

It was "Resolved: that the selectmen be instructed to oppose the granting of any charter to any private corporation for the purpose of supplying the town with water."

It was voted to appropriate the sum of twelve hundred dollars for electric lights.

March 12. A memorable blizzard attended by a high wind and extreme cold was experienced. Huge snow drifts blocked the roads so that travel was interrupted for several days.

March 19. The town voted to appropriate the sum of thirty-five hundred dollars for repairing the High School building, and nine thousand dollars for the maintenance of the schools.

It was voted "that the Hon. H. L. Bancroft be a committee to correspond with the proper person in regard to the portraits of Gen. Caleb Burbank and his wife, and that said portraits be obtained and placed in the Library Room."

Five hundred dollars were appropriated for improving the acoustic properties in the Town Hall.

The committee on water supply were instructed to report at the next annual town meeting.

The report of a committee was accepted recommending the completion of the Park near the Providence and Worcester R. R. depot and that fifty dollars be appropriated to cover the expense.

The trustees of cemeteries were instructed to erect headstones at the graves of those soldiers not provided with such stones.

Sixteen hundred dollars were raised and appropriated for lighting the streets, and the selectmen were instructed not to grant authority to any electric light company or any other company to cut or trim trees.

November 6. At the town meeting Mr. S. N. Rogers, under Article 2, moved that the town accept Chapter 404, of the acts of the Massachusetts Legislature for the year 1888, to supply the Town of Millbury with water, and it was voted to postpone indefinitely the whole matter.

March 18. Sixteen hundred dollars were appropriated for the maintenance of street lights.

A strip of land was purchased of Tyler Waters for the enlargement and improvement of Central Cemetery.

1890

March 17. Four hundred dollars were appropriated for the purchase of a fire extinguisher to be located at West Millbury.

“Voted the sum of two hundred dollars to improve the land purchased of Tyler Waters for Central Cemetery.”

The Fire Company at West Millbury was disbanded, but the citizens had the use of Lion Engine and apparatus without expense to the town.

Two Millbury boys, Dexter and Walter Rogers, made a remarkable journey across the continent on high wheel bicycles from Plymouth Rock to San Francisco, a distance of about 3900 miles.

CHAPTER XIII

FORMER SOCIETIES IN MILLBURY

Millbury has much in its past history of which it may well be proud. Not only in mechanical lines did interest and inventiveness manifest themselves but a wholesome effort to gain intellectual benefit has resulted in the establishment of many societies of a literary and moral nature. For Millbury the inception of some of these is claimed, but, in the absence of comprehensive knowledge, it may at least be asserted that the townspeople were among the first, if not the first, to organize the Lyceum and to form a Temperance society. Following, is a brief statement of some of these old societies, which have now gone out of existence, but which in their day stimulated the interests of the people, both men and women, and were thoroughly wholesome in their influence on the community.

TEMPERANCE SOCIETIES

About 1808, a temperance society existed in what is now Millbury, and the claim has been made that it was the first society of the kind formed in the United States. The first temperance society, however, in this country, of which any record is at hand, was organized April 30, 1808, in a schoolhouse in Moreau, Saratoga county, New York. Our town society soon followed this lead. Its purpose was not total abstinence, but moderation in drinking.

About 1820, a society was organized which became a power for good. Its purpose was the non-use of intoxicating liquor, except cider. Even the good old ministers of those days had not come to the point of total abstinence, for in the report of the county-cattle show in 1824, the

ELM STREET. LOOKING EAST FROM THE HIGH SCHOOL

Rev. Joseph Goffe, of Millbury, took a premium of six dollars for the best cider, and in the Worcester Spy of the same year he had an article on how to make good cider.

March 18, 1864, the Blackstone Lodge of Good Templars was organized. Nathan H. Sears was the first worthy chief templar. In 1871, the membership was one hundred and fifty-seven. The presiding officer was Pliny W. Wood.

A "Gough" temperance society was formed in the Baptist Church in 1886 and through the influence of this society many signed the pledge.

The Millbury Temperance Union followed in the latter years and for a few years it was a power in the community. Its first president was L. L. Whitney, and at one time the membership exceeded one hundred. Through the influence of this society, the town was carried for no-license three years in succession.

Roman Catholic temperance organizations have existed in town from time to time.

It has been stated that the career of John B. Gough as a temperance lecturer may be said to have begun in this town.

Dr. Charles H. Jewett, the prominent temperance worker, was a physician here previous to the devotion of his time and efforts to the temperance cause.

RELIGIOUS CHARITABLE SOCIETY

In February, 1812, a number of gentlemen belonging to Sutton and Northbridge assembled to consider the propriety of forming a society to aid young men of piety and talents in acquiring an education for the gospel ministry. On the 20th of the following May men from various parts of the county assembled at the North Parish of Sutton (Old Common) and listened to a sermon by the Rev. Dr. John Crane, of Northbridge. Temporary officers were chosen. The first annual meeting was held at the North Parish meeting-house, Sept. 16, 1812, when permanent officers were chosen. There were also present representatives from sixteen branches which had been formed in other places, since the first gathering. Of the officers chosen, the following were from Sutton North Parish:—Aaron Pierce, Esq., vice-president, and the Rev. Joseph Goffe, treasurer. The society was incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts, approved by the Governor, Feb. 10, 1814. At the third annual meeting, held at Holden, in 1814, it was reported that eight gospel students had received aid during the preceding year. At the annual meeting, in 1815, Millbury was credited with paying into the Treasury $48.72. In the course of its existence, the society did much good in fitting young men to labor for the ministry, and it is a satisfaction to know that in our territory the society was organized and the work begun. The books of this society have been deposited with the Congregational Education Society at Boston.

MILLBURY BRANCH OF "THE CARMINA TEMPLIA SOCIETY"

This musical society was already formed in 1820, as we find in an old record book of the organization the following minute: "August 30, 1820, voted, that the Reverend Joseph Goffe be the President of this Society, Capt. Charles Heald be the Vice-President, and Asa Andrews Secretary. Voted, that John Tisdale be the first leader, and Timothy Longley a second leader, and John F. Barton, a third leader."

In 1821 and 1822, other names mentioned as officers and leaders were: Elias Lovell, Leprelette Hunt, Benjamin Goddard, and Joseph W. Wright. Choristers chosen the latter year were Hervey Pierce, Col. John F. Barton, and Elias Lovell. The meetings for singing were held at the church building on the old common, but when business was transacted the meeting would adjourn to a dwelling-house. The name of Mr. John Barton is mentioned as a bass leader. The list of members is as follows:

Rev. Joseph Goffe	Jesse Pierce
Timothy H. Longley	Joseph Griggs
Elias Lovell	Gen. Caleb Burbank
Hervey Perry	Asa Waters (2d)
Asa Andrews	Josiah Woodward
Prentice Cushing	Oliver Bond
Joseph W. Wright	Jonathan Grout
Aaron Pierce, Jr.	Dr. Phineas Longley
Charles Heald	Brooksy Case
Julia Wright	Hannah Thurston
Julia Trask	Mary Bond
Susan H. Trask	Charity Wright
Olive J. Bixby	Sophia Waters
Mary G. Bixby	Amanda Searles
Vilinda Newton	Rachel Searles
Fanny Stockwell	Amey Sheldon
Adeline Blanchard	Elvira L. Longley
Lucy Waters	Eliza Goffe
Ezra Lovell, Jr.	Hannah Baneroft
Jotham Gale	Nancy Longley
Leprelette Hunt	Hannah Pierce
Danford Wright	Benjamin Goddard
Hervey Pierce	Nathaniel Goddard
Chester Mann	John Waters, Jr.
Oliver Puffer	Simon Farnsworth
David Harrington	Dea. Aaron Pierce
John F. Barton	Samuel Waters
Samuel Brown	Reuben Barton
Aaron Small	Dea. John Pierce
John Tisdale	Elias Forbes
William Chandler	Dr. William Benedict
Luther Gould	Jonathan Trask
Amariah Preston	Jonathan Waters
Dwight Colburn	Ira Trask
Windsor Hatch	Stephen Tainter
Lemuel Chafee

We find in the list above given the names of many of the leading citizens at the time. Several of the old singing books used by the members and bearing their names are still in existence.

LYCEUM

What is known as the old "Lyceum" is believed to have originated in this town. It was the parent of the debating societies which sprung up afterwards in many places in New England. The meetings were devoted also to lectures on various subjects by distinguished speakers. Among those who appeared in Millbury were Wendell Phillips, Thomas Starr King, Horace Greeley, Dr. Charles Jewett, John B. Gough, and the Rev. I. Holbrook. The latter said that he had investigated the matter of the origin of the Lyceum and was satisfied that the institution originated here in Millbury about 1820. Since that time similar societies have been in existence in town. In 1856, a society of the kind flourished at Bramanville of which the late Bishop Willard Mallalieu was president when a young man. Connected with this society were many prominent citizens. The meetings were held in the vestry of the First Congregational Church, and in the meetings many young men of the period made their first attempts at public speaking.

MILLBURY LYCEUM

A Society called the "Millbury Lyceum" existed here in 1869-'70 which was formed "For the purpose of individual improvement in public speaking and with a view to the attainment of a wider familiarity with subjects of historical interest or of current importance, and to the exercise of that respectful toleration and free expression of difference in opinion which best subserves the formation of correct judgment." The officers were:—

President, John Hopkins; Vice Presidents, A. H. Waters, Silas Dunton, W. A. Lovell, George A. Flagg; Secretaries, Luther M. Lovell, and Rufus R. Crane; Treasurer, Ira N. Goddard.

Committee, R. N. Holman, F. H. Underwood, George N. Smith, William M. Clinton, N. H. Sears, D. J. Duggan.

Among those connected with this Society we find the following names, the list evidently being incomplete.

J. T. Treadwell
 Rev. E. Y. Garrette
 S. N. Rogers
 G. W. Heywood
 Dr. Leonard Spaulding

E. Tobey
 Dr. W. H. Lincoln
 Rev. S. Fowler
 Dr. S. W. Cooke

This society should not be confounded with the earlier one formed in 1820.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES

In the early days of Millbury a society existed for the promotion of agriculture and had in its possession a small library. Meetings were held for a time at the Armory Village but other societies came into existence and it finally went the way of many other early organizations.

Many years later, a similar society was formed at West Millbury, called "The West Millbury Lyceum." Agricultural talks, debates, and an occasional exhibition, consisting of declamations, etc., made many an evening pass pleasantly.

MILLBURY ATHENEUM

In 1832, this organization possessed a library. Its meetings were held at Armory Village. From one of the volumes once in the Society's library, we extract the following information:

"Rules of The Millbury Atheneum, or Social Library

"1. The Library will be opened on every Saturday, from 2 to 9 P. M.

"2. Each share draws two volumes.

"3. No books can be retained more than three weeks, unless on penalty of one cent a volume per day.

"4. The holders of books are not permitted to loan them to others.

"5. When different applications are made for the same book, it shall go to the highest bidder.

"6. For defacing, mutilating, or otherwise injuring a book damages will be assessed by the Librarian.

"7. No proprietor will be permitted to draw books while fines or taxes remain against him unpaid.

"8. Shares, Three dollars each.—Transferrable at the Library room."

The books belonging to this society, as well as those which belonged to the Agricultural Society previously in existence, were donated to the "Society of Social Friends."

MATERNAL ASSOCIATION

As early as 1834, the above organization which was connected with the First Congregational Church was in existence, as its records show. Meetings were held once a month. The object of the society was to bring children up to become useful men and women. Article 7 of the by-laws was as follows: "It shall be the duty of this association to provoke one another unto love and good works, and to defend each other's religious character from all unjust aspersions and surmises, whenever thus assailed."

The officers were:

President, Emily W. Herrick

Vice Presidents, Rebeckah March and Experience T. Holman.

Members:

Mrs. Bancroft	Emily W. Herrick
Rebeckah P. March	Experience T. Holman
Rebeckah Goddard	Eunice D. Goulding
Angeline Goodell	Betsey Blanchard
Harriet Putnam	Sarah Wood
Sarah W. Godell	Clara Hall
Lydia W. Woodward	Mrs. A. Gleason
Eliphah Lovell	Mrs. H. Tainter

The president of the association was the wife of the Rev. Osgood Herrick, pastor of the First Congregational Church.

ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY

A society of this name was in existence in 1835, instituted to resist the aggressions of the slave-power, and the organization had much to do with changing the sentiment of the townspeople on the question of human slavery. Sterry S. Kegwin was secretary, and on the executive committee were Samuel Waters, Dea. Tyrus March, Alexander Hamilton, John Morse, and Capt. Joseph Griggs. An active member of the society at this time was Orra Goodell, who hated slavery as much as he did the liquor business. The following extract from the work of "Garrison and his Times" shows the state of feeling, in Worcester county, against anti-slavery societies in the same year. "On the 10th of August, 1835, at Worcester, Mass., the Rev. Orange Scott, a Methodist clergyman of high standing, while delivering an anti-slavery lecture, was assailed by a son of Ex-Governor Lincoln, who with the assistance of another man tore up his notes and offered him personal violence." (He was the clergyman who delivered the sermon at the dedication of the Methodist Church of Millbury in 1840.)

FEMALE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY

On Friday, Sept. 9, 1838, some ladies of West Millbury met at the home of Alfred Torrey and formed a society with the above name. The Society did much good in its day, helping needy ones at home and abroad. The list of members included many of the early prominent families.

MORAL REFORM SOCIETY

A society called "The East Millbury Female Moral Reform Society" formerly existed in town. Its purpose was, as its title implies, the moral and religious improvement of the community. The "East Millbury" referred to was more commonly called Armory Village, i. e., Millbury Center.

SOCIETY OF SOCIAL FRIENDS

In the '50's and '60's literary and social interests were fostered among the faculty, pupils, and local friends of Millbury Academy (as the High School continued to be frequently called) by the "Society of Social Friends." Meetings were held at various houses, a library was maintained, and for some time a paper called "The Port Folio" was edited by a committee from the society.

PHILODOXIAN DEBATING CLUB

In the number of "The Port Folio," for Jan. 24, 1853, the following notice is given: "Debating Club. A large number of people connected with the Academy, and many others, have formed a society called the Philodoxian Club. The Club hold regular meetings for debate at the Academy, on Monday evening of each week. The meetings and debates are open to all . . .” At a meeting of the club held at the time the perennial interests of mankind are shown in the choice of a subject which was, “Are the Abilities of the Sexes Equal?” O. H. Waters was appointed to uphold the affirmative and H. A. Gale the negative. The secretary of the club at the time was A. Armsby.

LADIES' UNION ENTERTAINMENT SOCIETY

Just before the erection of Union Chapel at West Millbury, in 1888, and for some time later, an organization bearing this name flourished in the village. Its work was similar to that now fostered by the present society into which it was merged. The members accomplished a work of lasting importance in giving to the village the present Union Chapel, for with them originated the idea of the structure and, with the help of others, the work was carried along until the building was completed. (See chapter on “Churches.”)

MILLBURY CATHOLIC TOTAL ABSTINENCE SOCIETY

This society was organized largely through the influence of William A. Walsh, Jan. 6, 1904, and was a factor for good from the time of its organization. It was required of all members that the pledge be taken, on the first Sunday of each year, to abstain from all intoxicating drinks. Its first officers were:

Spiritual Director	Father Conlon
President	William A. Walsh
Vice President	Robert F. Brown
Rec. Sec.	William R. Power
Finan. Sec.	Farnum Stevens
Treasurer	Daniel F. Donovan

Board of Directors:—D. F. Kinnery, George F. Jaffery, Frank Flood, Charles A. Kennedy, James L. Ivory.

CHAPTER XIV

1891

March 16. The town voted to adopt an act of the Legislature relating to public cemeteries.

It was voted to accept the cistern on the common and to settle with Mrs. Harrington for the same.

One hundred dollars were voted to furnish guide-boards through the town.

Osgood H. Waters, George F. Chase, and Amos Armsby were appointed as a committee to confer with the school committee and report plans for a new school house at Bramanville.

1892

March 21. The report of the committee appointed at the preceding annual town-meeting to report plans for a new school house at Bramanville was accepted.

The treasurer, with the approval of the selectmen, was authorized to borrow money to the amount of $12,000 with which to build and furnish a schoolhouse at Bramanville and to issue several notes of the Town for $1200, one being paid each year for ten years.

Evening schools were established and two hundred dollars were appropriated for their maintenance.

Two hundred and twenty-five dollars were appropriated for headstones at the graves of deceased soldiers.

One hundred dollars were appropriated for shade trees to be set on the highways and public grounds.

Five hundred dollars were appropriated for the construction of a sidewalk from Wheeler's Village to West Millbury.

One thousand dollars were appropriated to widen West Main Street, Bramanville, from the house of William Shannahan to that of Mr. Merrigan and from Rhode's Street to the site of the Walling Mill.

June 14. At a special meeting the town voted two thousand dollars to complete and furnish the new school-house at Bramanville.

Oct. 10. L. L. Whitney, J. W. Sheehan, David Atwood, Ira N. Goddard, Charles D. Morse, F. A. Lapham, George F. Chase, Osgood H. Waters, and E. A. Grosvenor were chosen to act in conjunction with the selectmen to see what action the town would take in regard to abolishing the grade crossing of the Providence and Worcester Railroad over Elm Street near Gowing Bridge.

March 20. The town adopted by-laws providing for the detention, care, and instruction of truants. All previous by-laws, conflicting with the new code, were rescinded.

Twenty-three hundred dollars were appropriated for street lights.

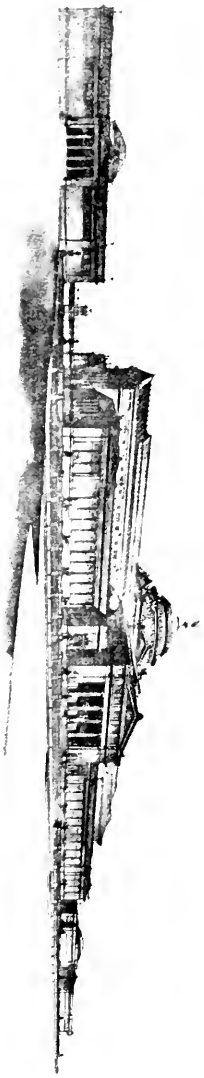

June 1. It was voted to accept Howe Avenue, as laid out by the selectmen, and to appropriate the sum of three thousand dollars to build the same.

The selectmen were authorized to contract with the Millbury Water Company for a supply of water for fire purposes and for public use, on terms to be mutually agreed upon, for a period of ten years.

June 19. It was voted to construct a concrete walk from Gould Street to the West End Flax Mill.

January 27. It was voted as the sense of the town-meeting that the town should acquire as a state highway the county road leading from the Worcester line, on Main Street in Millbury, to the Sutton line in Millbury on the road to Wilkinsonville; and that the selectmen petition the highway commission that the Commonwealth acquire this road as a state highway; also the selectmen were authorized and instructed to co-operate with the authorities in Sutton and Grafton to have this road extended to the Northbridge line.

THE FINE ARTS BUILDING, COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION, 1893, CHICAGO

March 19. It was "voted that an appropriation of two hundred and fifty dollars be made for constructing a sidewalk on the westerly side of Maple street, and five hundred dollars for the continuation of the sidewalk from West Millbury to the house of W. A. Harris, or as far as this appropriation will permit."

The thanks of the town were extended to Dr. George C. Webber for his twelve years' faithful service as a member of the school committee.

It was voted to enter into an agreement with the Millbury Water Company for sixty hydrants, to be used as protection against fire.

West Main Street, Bramanville, was widened from L. L. Whitney's to Burbank Square.

Five hundred dollars were voted for maintaining evening schools.

September 21. The town voted to appropriate three thousand dollars for altering, straightening and deepening the channel of the Blackstone River.

The selectmen were instructed to take action in compelling Worcester to purify its sewerage before emptying it into the Blackstone River. (See Annals, April 8, 1913.)

March 18. It was "voted that the marking of the graves of the Revolutionary soldiers and sailors buried in this town be referred to the commissioners of cemeteries with power to act." One hundred dollars were appropriated for this work.

It was voted that the town reorganize a company of twenty men as Lion Engine Company, No. 5, at West Millbury.

Eleven thousand dollars were appropriated for schools.

A loan of five thousand dollars was authorized with which to pay for abolishing the grade crossing at Gowing Bridge.

The genuineness of the Indian relics which have been found in Millbury and Sutton from time to time in years past was settled today beyond question. At least, Prof. Frederick W. Putnam of Peabody Institute, Cambridge, is satisfied that the bowls, fancy cut stones, arrow heads, and picks, are the handiwork of the Indians. With Professor Putnam, were his assistants in the museum, George A. Dorsey and C. C. Willoughby, also Professor Putnam's class of four young men.

The company went out on Soapstone Hill, to the rear of W. E. Horne's store, just off High street. Some of Mr. Horne's men were put to work digging under the shadow of the big ledge which hangs from the hillside. At a depth of about three feet, seven or eight Indian bowls were dug up. Most of these were broken. The broken ones were about six inches in diameter. One perfect bowl found was oval shaped, about nine inches long and six inches wide, with knobs on the ends to do service as handles.

Two stone picks were also found. Professor Putnam stated that the genuineness of one of the picks cannot be questioned, while the second one was probably the handiwork of the Indians as well. One of the picks was made of quartzite and was about eight inches long and two inches thick. The quartzite is a mixture of quartz and mica. The second one was much smaller, being about four inches long and an inch thick. This was of pure quartz and was very hard.

Professor Putnam said that he should subject the quartzite pick to a water cleansing, this being the only way to preserve the natural surfaces. He said rubbing it with the hand would be very injurious, while, by allowing a stream of water to run on the pick, he should expect to find particles of soapstone on the end where the pick had been used in shaping the rudely made implements and dishes made by the Indians.

The bowls found were made of steatite, or soapstone.

The floor of the cave under the big ledge was dug up to a considerable depth, but nothing more than some curious rock specimens were found.

Following dinner, the relics found were discussed, and some of the other relics found in this vicinity recently were exhibited.

George Burton Stowe showed a bowl of soapstone, about 8 inches deep and 20 inches in diameter. The bowl was found on the Freeman farm at West Millbury, and for forty years had been used for watering hens and chickens. The bowl weighed about 100 pounds. Professor Putnam said that the bowl was the work of the Indians.

Mr. Rockwood showed a fishhook, a number of bones of fowls and animals, fancy cut stones and several bowls, all of soapstone, found near Soapstone hill, some of them within two weeks.

Mr. Crane showed a gouge 4 inches long and 2 inches wide, made from stone, found by him near Ramshorn pond last fall.

All these relics were, in the opinion of Professor Putnam, the work of the Nipmuc Indians.

During the afternoon a number of bowls and picks were dug up, similar to those found in the morning. Mr. Willoughby exposed a number of plates for making some pictures of the locality. The students took the relics with them to be placed in the museum at the Peabody Institute.

Ten men were added to Lion Engine Co. at West Millbury and one hundred dollars were appropriated with which to pay them.

It was voted that the selectmen be a committee to confer with the Millbury Water Company and to require it to make a report according to law.

The naming of the streets was left with the selectmen with power to act.

June 9. It was voted to accept the location of a portion of the highway near the mill of Edwin Hoyle, in West Millbury, provided that it be of no expense to the town.

It was voted to pay one hundred and fifty dollars to the Second Congregational Church for damages to its bell and for the use of the new bell under the same guarantee as the town voted March 6, 1885.

The Millbury Electric Company was authorized to light the streets with thirty-two arc and six incandescent lights for one year for the sum of two thousand dollars.

March 15. The town "voted to appropriate twenty dollars for a storm flag to be used to indicate changes in the weather."

Park Street as laid out by the selectmen was accepted as a public way.

Sec. 6 of Article I. of the by-laws of the town were amended by striking out the words "first day of March," and inserting in place thereof "third Wednesday of February," so that the article will read "The fiscal year as far as the accounts of the several town officers are concerned shall close on the third Wednesday of February, and all accounts be made up to that time."

Three thousand dollars were appropriated for expenses in the lawsuit against the city of Worcester.

March 21. It was voted "that the town adopt the provisions of Chap. 331 of the acts of the Legislature of 1888, relating to taking or catching pickerel in Singletary Lake or any of the ponds within the Town of Millbury."

The town voted "No" on licensing the sale of intoxicating liquor.

One hundred and sixty dollars were appropriated for the purchase of headstones for the graves of deceased soldiers.

1900

The town accepted the extension of Orchard Street, two hundred feet to the north.

A committee of four, consisting of H. W. Aiken, Esq., George F. Chase, J. H. Ferguson and Charles B. Perry, Esq., was appointed to act with the school board in considering the building of a new school house, and to report at a future meeting.

April 16. The committee appointed to consider and report on building a new school house submitted two reports: one, that a new building be erected; the other, that the Union School house be repaired and altered to meet the present exigency.

May 16. The selectmen appointed Thomas A. Winter as burial agent.

In accordance with the report of the committee on appropriations, the town voted that Union School building be repaired, that rooms be added, that a good heating and ventilating plant be installed and that ten thousand dollars be appropriated for the purpose.

On page 326 of the town records for the year 1900 appears for the first time the Town Seal. The committee chosen at a former meeting reported as follows:

"Having considered the matter referred to them, the committee caused to be engraved a seal, the device of which has for a central figure a mill, to represent industries from which the town received its name, Millbury, and two crossed muskets, a product of the town, used in three of our country's wars. By virtue of the authority reposed in us under the aforesaid vote, the seal, an impression of which is hereupon affixed, is made and established the Town Seal of Millbury."

March 18. The town "voted that in addition to the dog fund seven hundred dollars be appropriated for the Town Library."

Three hundred dollars were appropriated to aid needy soldiers or their widows.

Four hundred dollars were appropriated for buying from the heirs of A. H. Waters a tract of land adjoining the High School and Union School buildings.

October 27. The first car on the Blackstone Valley trolley line ran into Worcester a few minutes after two o'clock. It was crowded to its utmost capacity. The road soon afterward started on a regular schedule.

March 17. One hundred and twenty-five dollars were voted, as the town's share, to be contributed toward the erection of a monument to the men of Worcester County who enlisted in the War of the Rebellion.

May 23. At a special meeting the town voted to accept a contract with the Massachusetts Highway Commission for the construction of a section of state highway beginning at the Worcester line and extending to or toward the Grafton line.

March 16. The treasurer was instructed to pay no money, except upon a duly appointed bill or voucher, and to the party to whom it is due.

The committee appointed to investigate the conduct of the poor department was authorized to place in the hands of all liquor sellers in town a list of all persons whose names are, or have been within one year, on the books of the overseers and to report to the overseers the names of any persons known to give or sell liquor to the same, together with names of the purchasers.

Article 16 in the Warrant read, "to see if the town would vote to raise annually the sum of one thousand dollars, if Andrew Carnegie would give a Library Building and Miss Delia C. Torrey give the land upon which to erect it." A committee was appointed to consider the matter.

The town voted to accept nine hours as a day's work by its employees.

A committee was appointed to investigate the accounts of the various town officers and to report a uniform system of accounts.

May 11. The committee appointed to consider the proposition to accept a lot for a library building, which was understood to be offered by Mr. Carnegie, if the town complied with his conditions, reported that thanks be given for the offer made, but the committee thought that the town could not afford to raise annually the amount required. The report of the committee was accepted.

A reference section was established in the town library.

June 15. The selectmen were authorized to contract with the Massachusetts Highway Commission for the construction of a section of state road in town as proposed by the commission. Accordingly, the selectmen made a contract with the State Highway Commissioners to build a section of state road beginning where the first section ended (built from the city line on the Worcester road towards the town) and continuing to a point a few rods north of Greenwood street.

March 21. The town voted "that whenever any money is payable by the town of Millbury to any person whose taxes are then due and wholly or partly unpaid, the collector of taxes shall request the town treasurer to withhold payment of said money to an amount not to exceed the unpaid tax with interest and costs."

The town accepted the invitation of the town of Sutton to participate in its bi-centennial celebration. Millbury was represented by the selectmen.

May 26. At a special meeting it was voted that the selectmen contract with the Massachusetts Highway Commission for the construction of a section of state road on North Main Street to a point near Martin Street.

July 26. The selectmen were authorized to sign an agreement to indemnify the commonwealth against all claims for land and grade damage caused by the construction of North Main Street (near Martin Street) as a state road.

March 20. It was voted that a committee of five be appointed by the chair to consider Millbury's past history with its industries and to report at some future meeting, to the end that such an account be preserved in book form. The chair appointed George F. Chase, the Rev. George A. Putnam, Ira N. Goddard, John C. Crane, and George W. Mallalieu as that committee.

1906

March 19. It was voted that the town concur with the board of harbor and land commissioners in a proposed change in the boundary line between Millbury and Oxford (see town records for 1906, pp. 474-478); also that the town concur with the same commission as to the boundary lines between Millbury and Sutton (see town records for 1906, p. 478).

It was voted that the selectmen be a committee to take action to force the city of Worcester to purify its sewerage, as decreed by the court, and that counsel be employed.

June 12. The selectmen were authorized to contract with the Massachusetts Highway commission for the construction of a section of state road in Millbury, from the Sutton line, on the Sutton Road, to Beach Street. Millbury people were to be given the preference in subletting the contract.

March 18. Two hundred and twenty-five dollars were appropriated for parks.

The road near the premises of J. W. Pope was macadamized.

It was voted that the selectmen be authorized, with the commissioners of cemeteries, to sell a parcel of land to the Worcester and Blackstone Valley Street Railway Co.

August 19. Thirty-five hundred dollars were appropriated to construct a re-enforced concrete bridge over the Blackstone River on South Main Street.

September 24. David Atwood, first treasurer of the Millbury Savings Bank and prominent in town affairs for many years, died at the home of his daughter in Los Angeles, Cal. (See independent sketch.)

March 16. Two hundred dollars were appropriated for a school physician.

June 1. At an adjourned meeting it was voted that suitable persons be licensed to buy, sell, and barter in junk, and that books be kept by persons so licensed.

November 19. At an adjourned town meeting two hundred dollars were voted to experiment in exterminating gipsy moths.

March 15. The town voted "No" on licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors.

March 27. A committee, appointed to consider the purchase of the plant of the Millbury Water Co., reported that the company's price was $242,000.00. Three propositions were embodied in the report of the committee: 1st, to let conditions remain as they are; 2d, to have the selectmen apply to the court to fix the water rates for five years; 3d, to purchase the water works if they could be bought at a fair price. The report was accepted.

April 10. It was voted that the selectmen and ten citizens be chosen as a committee to employ counsel and to consider the entire relations and rights of the town and the water company and to report at a later meeting.

May 1. The selectmen made a contract with the Millbury Electric Company.

It was voted to appropriate four thousand dollars which the selectmen might use to make a contract with the Water company.

1910

March 21. It was voted "to lease for one dollar the room now used as a Post Office to the George A. Custer Post, G. A. R., for ten years, reserving the vault in the said room."

It was "voted to appropriate two thousand dollars to macadamize West Main Street from the Sutton Road, near the West End Thread Mill, to Mayo Mill, No. 2."

It was voted that the moderator appoint two persons to fill vacancies on the committee on town history. Henry A. Phillips and Henry W. Carter were appointed.

June 18. At a meeting of the selectmen and two remaining assessors William A. Walsh was elected assessor to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Charles H. Shaw.

October 6. At a meeting of the selectmen and the school committee James M. Cronin was chosen a member of the school committee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. Robert Booth.

There is published in the Town Records for 1910 a copy of "An Act to provide a water supply for the Town of Millbury." A special meeting was called for July 16, 1910, when the Legislative act of 1910 was accepted, and, in accordance with this act, on August 12, 1910, the Millbury Water Company filed with the Town Clerk a list of its property.

December 30. At a special meeting Charles B. Perry, Esq., was chosen as a member of the water committee in place of A. S. Winter, deceased.

RANDALL BLOCK, 1894

THE CUNNINGHAM BLOCK

1911

January 21. At a special meeting it was voted to proceed to vote on the water question, viz.: "Shall the Town of Millbury purchase the property of the Millbury Water Company?" The Town voted "No."

March 20. Seven hundred and fifty dollars were voted to exterminate the gipsy moths and the brown tail moths in town and two hundred dollars were voted to exterminate the elm beetles.

Three thousand dollars were voted for constructing a macadam road from the Town Hall toward Bramanville, the same to be used with the money to be furnished by the state.

June 20. It was voted "that the school committee be allowed to use temporarily such a portion of the Town Hall building as may be necessary for school purposes."

January 11. It was voted "that three thousand dollars become available when assurance is received from the (state) highway commission, that the sum of fifteen hundred dollars shall be appropriated (by the state) for the same purpose," i. e., to build a section of macadam road from the Town Hall on the southerly side of Elm Street to a spot near the bridge; and also a section of road on West Main Street from near Elmwood Street to Burbank Square.

March 18. The town voted to accept the following report:

"The committee that was appointed a few years ago to consider the subject of a Town History submits the following report: Two members of the original committee are gone, for the Rev. George A. Putnam has resigned, having removed from the town, and Mr. George W. Mallalieu has died. Those vacancies were subsequently filled by other persons and your committee is of the opinion that there is much material relating to the history of Millbury that should be preserved in book form.

The Committee therefore recommend that a history of Millbury be published.

Respectfully submitted,

George F. Chase
John C. Crane
Henry W. Aiken

Henry A. Philips
Henry W. Carter
Ira N. Goddard

Committee

It was voted that the town raise and appropriate the sum of one thousand dollars for the proper observance of the One Hundredth Anniversary of the incorporation of the town and that the historical committee have said sum for its use if needed.

It was also voted that the historical committee, now in office, act with the selectmen in carrying out the provisions of Article 36 (on celebrating the town's anniversary) and that it have power to add to its number so as to make six (on the committee) in addition to the selectmen.

The town accepted the laws which authorized certain towns to appropriate money for watering their public streets.

On the question of buying the property of the Millbury Water Company the town voted "No."

March 30. The town voted to discharge the water committee, with thanks.

It was voted that the selectmen enter into a contract with the Millbury Water Co. for hydrant service on the best terms to be had, the sum not to exceed fifty-five dollars per hydrant.

July 7. Peter E. Gover, son of Mr. and Mrs. Delos Gover, Railroad Avenue, 21 years of age, was drowned in Dorothy pond while swimming near the ice house. Mr. Gover was born in Millbury and had always lived here.

September 30. At a special meeting, the town passed the following vote: "Voted, that the town build a new High School Building, and that fifty thousand dollars be appropriated therefor; that for the purpose of providing the money for erecting said building and for furnishing the same, the town treasurer is hereby authorized, with the approval of the selectmen, to borrow the sum of $50,000, and to issue notes or bonds of the town therefor; such notes or bonds shall be payable in twenty annual payments of $2,500 each, the first payment to be made one year after the date of said loan. Said notes or bonds shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding four per cent per annum, and the amount required to pay the interest and the principal sums, as they become due, shall be raised by taxation, in the manner in which the other expenses of the town are met.

“Voted, that the Building Committee for the New High School consist of the School Committee and Damien Ducharme, Fred W. Moore, George F. Chase, and Fred H. Rice.”

December 27. Clara LeMay, fourteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Victoria LeMay, was shot dead at the Cordis mills at an early hour in the morning, just as the help were beginning to go in for the day's work, by Charles Adams, fifteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Adams, also of Millbury. She was a member of the Baptist Church.

March 17. It was voted to appropriate twenty-two hundred and fifty dollars for publishing a history of the town.

It was voted to sell the town farm and the personal property connected therewith.

It was voted to appropriate fifty-five hundred dollars to purchase a motor truck for the fire department.

April 8. Millbury's fight against Worcester over the pollution of the Blackstone river, begun almost eighteen years ago in the Supreme Court, and one of the most notable litigations in Worcester county in years, the title of the case being L. L. Whitney, et alii, selectmen of Millbury, vs. city of Worcester, was ordered by Supreme Court Justice Henry K. Braley to be dismissed without prejudice, no move in it having been made for a long time.

It involved the claim that the city of Worcester had polluted the Blackstone river. It was filed in the Supreme Court, Sept. 26, 1895.

The selectmen claimed that the city had failed so to remove from its sewage, before it was discharged into the river, the offensive and polluting properties and substances, and asked that an injunction be issued ordering the city to remove from its sewage, before it was discharged into the river, the polluting properties. Robert M. Morse, Boston, one of the most widely known attorneys in New England, was counsel for the town. Five years ago the case was referred to James A. Stiles as auditor. Thomas H. Sullivan was also counsel for the town, and Worcester's interests were looked after by its law department. The case was the first on the general docket of the Supreme Court which was called before Justice Braley and there was no objection to the dismissal of the case.

CHAPTER XV
CENTENNIAL

The centennial of the incorporation of Millbury as a town was celebrated by exercises extending over four days and culminating on Wednesday, June 11, 1913, the one hundredth anniversary of the town's separation from Sutton. In the previous year the board of selectmen, consisting of Mr. William W. Windle, Mr. Fred H. Rice, and Mr. Peter C. Paradis, together with the History committee, consisting of Mr. George F. Chase, Henry W. Aiken, Esq., Mr. Henry W. Carter, Mr. John C. Crane, Mr. Ira N. Goddard and Mr. Henry A. Phillips, constituted a committee to make and carry out plans for a suitable celebration of the Centennial of the Town. This committee organized with Mr. Windle as chairman and Mr. Phillips as secretary. For this celebration the town appropriated thirty-two hundred dollars to which the committee added over four hundred dollars that was received from various sources. This general committee was assisted in the arrangement of details by the following Auxiliary Committees, although the executive responsibilities remained centered in the general committee.

The program of the Centennial prepared by the publicity committee had on its front cover a picture of the Torrey House, which has been the Millbury place of abode for ex-President William Howard Taft during his visits to the town. The pages of the program, fourteen in number, were devoted to the names of committees, Historic Facts, a notice of the Historic Exhibit, a list of eighty-eight historic spots, and the order of events to be followed in the celebration.

Before the time of the celebration had arrived the town was prettily decorated on its main streets with bunting by day and with electric lights by night. The committee on historic spots had put placards on notable buildings and locations in all parts of the town.

The celebration of the Centennial began on Sunday morning, June 8, with special services in all the churches of the town.

At the First Congregational Church the service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. William C. Martyn, and the sermon was delivered by the pastor-emeritus, the Rev. George A. Putnam, whose subject was, "What the passing Years have Contributed to the Christian Unity among the Churches."

At the Second Congregational Church, the pastor, the Rev. Robert W. Dunbar, gave a short history of the church, taking as his text, "The Lord, our God, be with us, as he was with our fathers, let him not leave us nor forsake us."

At the Baptist Church, the pastor, the Rev. Hamilton E. Chapman, gave a history of the Baptists in Millbury.

At the Methodist Episcopal Church, the pastor, the Rev. Norman H. Flickinger, spoke upon, "Fraternalism and the Centennial Celebration."

At St. Bridget's Church, the Rev. John F. Griffin gave special sermons at the morning masses.

At the Church of the Assumption, the Rev. Louis E. Barry was assisted by the Very Rev. Alexis R. Grolleau, of Spencer, who delivered the sermon, the French societies of the town attending in a body.

At the Unitarian Church, the pastor, the Rev. William T. Hutchins was assisted by the Rev. Lewis G. Wilson of Boston, who delivered the sermon.

At all churches in the morning unusual numbers were in attendance, both of townspeople and visitors, and special music in each church added enrichment to the services.

The out-door exercises of the celebration began at four o'clock Sunday afternoon with a band concert given on the grounds of the First Congregational Church in Bramanville by the American Brass Band of Providence. Sacred, historic, and patriotic music was rendered to a throng of five thousand people. Beautiful weather favored the observance of the day in all its features and, indeed, throughout the celebration nature favored the townspeople and visitors with days rarely beautiful even for June.

Monday, June 9, had no official provision for celebration in the daytime but the hours were spent in visiting friends, in renewing old acquaintances, and in visiting the scenes of former association. Finishing touches were given the decorations and other last things to be done were completed in getting ready for the two following days.

During this day opportunity was given parents, friends, and visitors, to see exhibits of school work in the different school buildings. These exhibits ranked well in practical value with other features of the celebration. Work was shown in each exhibit which illustrated the accomplishments of the pupils in all grades. These displays were arranged under the direction of the superintendent of schools, Mr. Chauncey C. Ferguson, but each separate exhibit was given under the immediate supervision of the principal in charge of the building. Some of the departments more recently introduced attracted special attention, such as sewing and manual training in the elementary grades and commercial work in the high school. A good attendance at all the schools showed the interest that was taken in the exhibitions.

On Monday evening, a Centennial ball was given in the town hall which was decorated and illuminated for the occasion. At eight o'clock a concert, which was given for an hour by Chaffin's orchestra of Worcester, was greatly enjoyed by many music lovers. At nine o'clock the grand march started, led by Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Perry. Dancing followed through the evening.

Tuesday, June 10, marked the completion of all preparations and the opening of the town to neighboring inhabitants who came in by the thousands. A registration bureau was maintained by the hospitality committee, assisted by pupils from the high school. In two days about seventy-five hundred registered, including many former residents of the town, but the number of people attending the Centennial exercises exceeded this many times.

On Tuesday morning, at nine o'clock, the Historic Exhibit in Blanchard Hall was opened to the public. The committee had diligently scoured the region for articles illustrative of the times when the town was first set off and of the important developments in its history. The walls of the room were covered with burlap and partitions were erected, dividing the space into sections; festoons were hung about the walls and portraits of many makers of Millbury were hung on all sides.

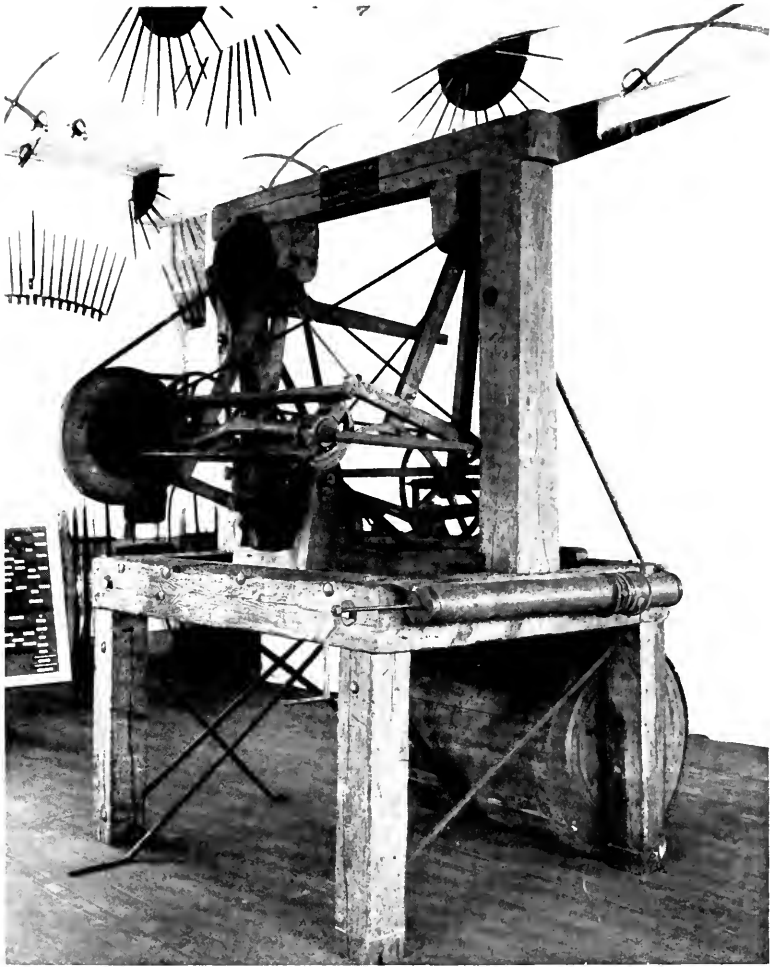

Over a thousand articles altogether made up the exhibit. Samplers and other examples of needle-work, some of it of rarely fine texture and handiwork, were displayed in considerable numbers. Rare articles, prized as family heirlooms, were brought together in rich profusion. In protecting cases there were many rare exhibits, among them being original signatures of George Washington, John Hancock, President James Munroe, and President Andrew Jackson.

The general arrangement of the exhibit brought together articles of common association as much as practicable. On the left, an old fashioned kitchen was set off with its massive brick fire-place, old fashioned dining table, high-back settles, churns, old-fashioned chairs, warming-pans, spinning-wheels, and other articles suggestive of the solid comfort of the old New England kitchen.

Across the room, articles used in the parlor were seen including the piano, brought into Millbury in 1833 by Asa Waters (2d), and believed to be the first piano brought into the county.

In an ante-room, the evolution of the bureau was shown, including a chest of drawers, built in 1750, and later modifications in the patterns of 1800 and 1840. On the walls of this room were old maps of the town and pictures of former industrial plants.

On a platform at one end of the hall, an eccentric lathe was installed which was the modern form of the old Blanchard lathe that was perfected in Millbury and has revolutionized many industries because of its ability to turn irregular forms. This lathe was driven by electricity and several gun-stocks were turned out during the two days of the exhibition. It was especially appropriate that a gun stock be turned out as it was for this purpose that the lathe was invented by Mr. Blanchard, who put it into use in the Millbury Armory and in the United States armory at Springfield, soon after the completion of the first machines.

THE ORIGINAL BLANCHARD LATHE

Along the wall at the right of the entrance was an exhibit of relics from the wars in which Millbury has been represented, including a list and many pictures of those who served in the War of the Rebellion. Uniforms of the Mexican war were illustrated from parts of militia equipment used in that period. The revolution was made real by some cartridge boxes like those carried by the patriot soldiers of '76 and by some flint-lock arms of the period.

A collection of likenesses that attracted special attention was one that was grouped about the picture of ex-President Taft. This included, also, a bust of Judge Taft, father of the ex-president; a picture of his grandfather, Samuel D. Torrey; and a picture of Mrs. Taft, mother of the ex-president, and a daughter of Mr. Torrey.

Over the door, as one entered, was a large portrait of Peter Willard, colored, who was a Revolutionary soldier; next on the wall were portraits of Gen. Caleb Burbank and his wife. He is reputed to have selected the name "Millbury" for the town. The portrait of the Rev. Joseph Goffe hung next, then that of Elijah Brigham of Westborough, and his wife. He was the first congressman from this district. Next came the portrait of Thomas Blanchard, inventor, after whom the hall was named. The next portraits were those of Dr. and Mrs. William Bowen Moore. He practiced medicine here from 1829 until 1843. On the further wall from the entrance on the left were the portraits of Col. Jonathan Holman, of Revolutionary fame, and of his wife, Susan, daughter of Captain Trask. Next was the portrait of Asa Waters (1st), and his wife. He was an extensive land owner and early manufacturer. Next came his son, Asa Waters (2d), and his wife. He was an inventor, a land owner, and manufacturer, who maintained and developed water privileges on the Blackstone river. Next hung a portrait of Col. Asa Holman Waters, land owner and manufacturer, and one of his sister, Miss Sarafina Waters. Beside these there was a portrait of Mrs. Susan Hovey, mother of Mrs. Waters. Next was a portrait of Mrs. Adeline Hume Ryan, wife of William Ryan. The next in line was a portrait of Capt. Charles Hale, manufacturer. Next were portraits of Mr. John Ryan and of Caroline Ryan, his wife. On the extreme right in this line of portraits were those of David B. Harrington and his wife, Amy Sophia, former residents of the town.

The hall was continually thronged with visitors, many of whom recognized some family heirloom and illustrated by story the uses and occasions for which the various articles were intended.

At ten o'clock, Tuesday forenoon, a football game (association) together with a band concert at Riverside Park, opposite the Providence Street schoolhouse, drew a large crowd. For its opponents the Millbury players had a team from Whitinsville.

One of the prettiest and most enlivening sights seen in Millbury during the Centennial was the spectacle of children at their games, sports, and play, on the Torrey lot, Tuesday afternoon. A flag drill, a Scotch reel, "Green Sleeves" dance, swing song drill, German clap song, shoemaker's dance, minuet, and folk dances, were given. Then came a half-hour's sleight-of-hand performance, after which followed a flag drill, "Reap the flax" drill, and wand drill. Following these there were races for the different grades, including relay-races of much interest between teams from different schools.

At half-past seven Tuesday evening a band concert was given at Bramanville by the Battery B band of Worcester and at its close a mammoth bonfire blazed up from the top of Burbank Hill, closing the events of the day.

Wednesday, June 13, the great day of the celebration, dawned fair and mild, adding another to the beautiful days marked for the Centennial. Salutes from a six-inch gun, brought from the Watertown arsenal through the intervention of congressman Samuel E. Winslow, greeted the townspeople in the early morning. Bells were rung in the churches and from the factories the whistles were sounded at intervals.

At seven in the morning, athletic sports were held on the common and an exhibition in fancy bicycle riding was given by Mr. William W. Windle.

At nine o'clock, a Trades and Historic Parade started from Burbank Square and marched through West Main, Elm, Canal, Providence, Maple, and South Main Streets to Central Square, thence through North Main, West, and Water Streets to the High School grounds. Thomas H. Sullivan, Esq., was marshal, who was assisted by Harry M. Goddard, assistant marshal, and the following aids: Frank Horne, William H. Brown, Hervey C. Pierce, Oscar H. Stowe, Joseph Jacques, Joseph Beasley, Charles H. Burbank, Albert F. Despard, Arthur Bellville, Arthur Bourbeau, Joseph Bois, S. Edgar Benjamin, Leo Paradis, Richard W. Proctor, Arthur H. Sullivan, Harry W. Thomson, Harry Horne, William D. Horne.

The parade was in three divisions and prizes were awarded in each, a silver loving cup being given for first prizes and gold medals for second. In the division of marching organizations, Court Millbury Foresters of America won the first prize and St. Jean Baptiste Society won the second. In the division composed of Society and Lodge floats, the float of the Woman's Relief Corps was awarded the first prize and that of the Millbury Grange the second. In the division composed of the floats of manufacturers, the float of the Cordis Mill won first prize and that of the Mayo Woolen Co. the second. In the merchants' division, the L. S. Waters Market float won the first prize and the Thibeault Bakery the second. In this parade the Salem Cadet Band, the Worcester Brass Band, and the Millbury Cadet Band marched and furnished music.

During the early part of Wednesday afternoon, many citizens who owned automobiles offered them to any who wished to go to places of interest about the town, especially to the historic spots marked by the committee appointed to designate these and many availed themselves of the opportunity thus presented. At the same time the special guests of the day were escorted about the town. No procession was formed but single automobile parties were driven over interesting routes.

At two o'clock Wednesday afternoon, athletic sports were held at Riverside Park, with a concert by the Worcester Brass Band.

At half-past three o'clock, a band concert was given in Central square by the Salem Cadet Band. This was the beginning of the climax of the entire celebration, for at the close of this concert the honored guests were gathered on a specially built platform in front of Town Hall and addresses were made by Col. Samuel E. Winslow, congressman from the district, by Governor Pothier of Rhode Island, and by ex-President William H. Taft.

Soon after the conclusion of the afternoon exercises, the Centennial Banquet was held in the Town Hall at which Henry W. Aiken, Esq., was toastmaster. After dinner addresses were given by ex-President Taft, by Colonel Winslow, by Governor Pothier of Rhode Island, and by Mayor George M. Wright of Worcester.

After the banquet the company went to Riverside Park where the concluding exercises of all, the fireworks, were held. The Salem Cadet Band gave a concert during the early evening and at nine o'clock the pyrotechnic display began. Brilliant set-pieces were ablaze with light. Rockets pierced the air and colored lights illuminated the scene. Several persons who had travelled widely pronounced the fire-works to be the best that they had ever seen and none present was able to recall any other display that had been equal to this one in brilliancy and general effectiveness. It seemed as if the best and most brilliant pieces for pyrotechnic display that could be procured were set off in a dazzling sequence and the many thousands present were thrilled with amazement and awe as they saw the succession of thrilling spectacular productions. The climax came when the seal of the town was made to appear in a large set-piece and it was saluted by bombs of unusually sharp noise accompanied by bursting lights of dazzling brightness.

From the beginning of the celebration on Sunday forenoon, with services in the churches, until its close on Wednesday evening, the streets of the town were thronged with people. The numbers grew in volume until the closing evening when there were fully thirty thousand in attendance. From the very first the crowds were orderly and appreciative of the superior attractions which the Centennial presented and the serious, wholesome spirit in which all was given. There was an utter absence of roughness and rowdyism. In fact, there was not even any undue excitement or noisy demonstration. On every hand were heard words of unstinted praise for the committee having the celebration in charge, for the balance and wide distribution of the attractions, and for the efficient and effective work of the sub-committees. Among the townspeople each seemed to vie with the other in helping to create an atmosphere that revealed an excellent spirit in the people of Millbury.

CHAPTER XVI

INDUSTRIES ON SINGLETARY STREAM

Within the present bounds of the town of Millbury the first industry to be established was a grist-mill, which was evidently located on Singletary stream within fifty feet of the edge of the pond. The stream was soon afterward called Mill brook and it left the pond at a point about seventy-five yards to the southeast (in the direction of Sutton) from the present outlet. The pond at that time was several feet higher than it is, ordinarily, at present, for there were no mills on the stream to draw down its level.

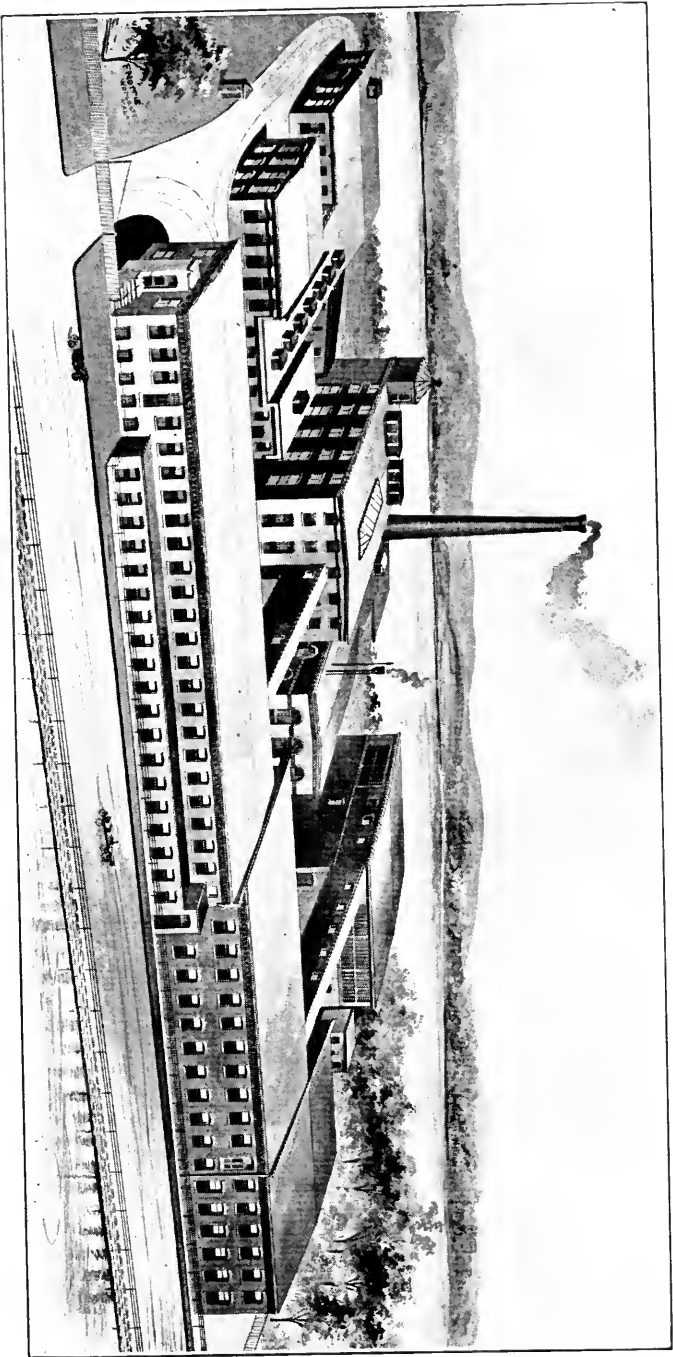

The first right to establish an industry within the present bounds of Millbury was given by the proprietors of Sutton to Ebenezer Daggett and was worded as follows:

“Ebenezer Daggett has the mile (mill) lot with ye priviledge of the stream to the lower falls upon condition that the sd Dagget or his heirs keep a grist mile for the use of ye town and if the sd Dagget neglect or refused to keep a mill for the use of ye town he shall return the Stream to the town again.”

In the Sutton Proprietors' records, dated Nov. 23, 1717, there is a more detailed description of this mill lot. The land was distributed by the proprietors among themselves in one hundred acre lots, each proprietor being entitled altogether to a propriety of five hundred acres.

A record, or return of this “mill lot” was as follows:

“the Northwest corner being a white oak tree on the west side of the mill brook, it being the Northwest corner thence running East, 30 degrees North, 85 rods to a heap of stones, being the north-west corner (northeast), thence running south 21 degrees East 184 rods to land already laid out, a white oak tree marked near the south-east corner, thence running west 30 degrees south 68 rods to a whitewood tree being the corner of Sible's lot thence running South 30 degrees east to a white oak tree marked being a corner, thence running west 30 degrees South to the pond, west partly on the pond part on undivided land to the Northwest corner, the whole containing 116 acres, 16 acres allowed for the mill way and bad land laid out by Mr. Thom. White, surveyor, and Draper and Mr. William King, committee."

In 1720, John Singletary, a cooper by trade, moved to Sutton from Framingham and purchased land around the outlet of Crooked Pond, securing eight acres of Caleb Bigsby, ten acres of Samuel Parker, two acres of William Larned, and, possibly, other small lots. Feb. 7, 1720, he purchased from Ebenezer Daggett the tract secured by Daggett from the Proprietors which included the mill privileges and obligations. As it was many years before the rights on this stream for some distance below the pond passed into other hands, the early development of the grist-mill has been associated with the name of Singletary, father and sons. The description of this property is of interest not only for what it says, but also for what it does not say. . . . It reads, "together with one Gristmle & stream thereto belonging, And one Dwelling house standing and being on the Tract aforesaid." (See Suffolk Co. Deeds, Vol. 36, p. 114.) This informs us that the mill was built and was a "going concern" in 1720, having been erected while the property was in the possession of Mr. Daggett. It is also noteworthy that there is no mention of a dam and this is, apparently, for the reason that there was none to mention. Crooked Pond itself was, evidently, the mill pond for this first grist-mill and the water was conducted through a sluiceway about thirty feet to the mill wheel which, very likely, was an under-shot wheel placed in the sluiceway. We are further led to this conclusion by a provision which John Singletary put in a deed signifying the transfer of four acres, bordering on Crooked Pond, to John Moore in which he stipulated that he reserved "the priviledge of flowing such part as the said pond (Crooked Pond) shall flow." It is only an artificially raised pond, as Crooked Pond was raised to husband the water for his grist-mill, that needs to have legal reservations for overflowing its usual limits.

The probable foundations of this first grist-mill may still be seen on the easterly side of the road which runs close beside the pond directly opposite the old outlet. Stones are in place which show the probable outlines and the sluiceway may be traced.

As the first provision of the proprietors of the mother town was for a grist-mill, the second need was for a saw-mill, for we presume that houses and other buildings were to be erected from the timber that was growing on the land which the settlers occupied. There was not much power derived from the first water wheel placed in the stream, as the fall of the water from the pond was not great. Accordingly, a dam was built running easterly and westerly between two prominent ledges, forming a pond which was used to furnish water for the second industry, a saw-mill, below the supposed site of the first grist-mill. This dam raised the stream so that a pond was formed that overflowed the location of the present road that runs from Sutton center along the shore of the pond and straight toward the corner by Mr. Warren A. Harris's home. This saw-mill pond, as it was called, was about six feet deep but it led the water to a place below which the land is much lower. The probable old foundations of the saw-mill were to the north of the sluiceway in the saw-mill dam and on a lower level, so that there could have been either an over-shot wheel or an under-shot wheel, for the lower level below the foundations give ample room for taking away the water from the wheel. This is the location known later as that of the Marble scythe shop.

We find in the proprietors' book (May 29, 1721), a mention of saw-mill pond, so that, probably, soon after he purchased the stream rights, the grist-mill, and land there-about, John Singletary erected the dam and the saw-mill. This saw-mill pond immediately became a landmark by which the road and meadows in that section of the town were located in descriptions of them. In 1735, this pond, dam, and saw-mill went into the possession of Richard Singletary, a son of John, and he kept it through his lifetime for, in the will by which he conveys half of his property to his son-in-law to recompense him for taking care of himself and his wife, mention is made of the mill, and a provision that half the revenue derived from it be given to Mr. Singletary.

In the deeds by which this property is transferred to the sons of John Singletary we find evidence that at the time there was no mill below the saw-mill, for in the deed to Richard Singletary he stated:

“Excepting and reserving . . . a priviledge of maintaining a dam where it now stands for a priviledge to my other sons and also a liberty of flowing and also a convenience of passing and re-passing with carts and Teemes with Gravel and Stones and Other materials for buildings and maintaining Sd Damm with a convenient way to & from sd damm to draw the gate as occasion shall serve.”

This deed was given July 9, 1735, twenty-one years after John Singletary had purchased the grist-mill and stream rights, as far as “the lower falls,” from Ebenezer Daggett. By this time the saw-mill had surpassed the grist-mill in importance, for the power derived immediately at the outlet of the pond was not adequate for all purposes, and plans were in his mind to build another grist-mill farther down the stream at a place which furnished greater water power. Provision for this lower privilege is made, in the reservation just mentioned, by which he could “draw the gate as occasion shall serve.”

In a deed given to his other son, Joseph Singletary, on the same day, conveying a tract of land bordering on the stream and just below the site of the saw-mill, he reserved the “priviledge of flowing so much of said land as shall be necessary for raising a pond for a corn mill which may be hereafter built upon my other land adjoining said land."

The mill that was erected by John Singletary in 1735, or soon after, remained in his possession until Mar. 21, 1753, eighteen years later, when it passed into the possession of Richard Singletary. Meanwhile, Richard Singletary had purchased of others property adjoining the stream, so that he was in possession of all the mill privileges and the land adjoining on the Singletary Stream from the pond, down, over a quarter of a mile. He sold land, however, to the south of the saw-mill pond "reserving a right to improve that part of the premises flowed by the mill Dam for ye use of the mill" (saw-mill). This saw-mill pond is further verified from the location of the road which is used as a boundary of a plot of land which was sold when the mill was in operation. On one side it ran "south thirty-two degrees east on or by the Country road," starting "near sawmill pond."

That the first mills were on the old channel of the Singletary and above the present location of Mayo Mill No. 2, where it has previously been supposed that they were located, is further established by reference to a deed given to Abraham Waters, June 14, 1779, by Reuben Barton who received the property from Richard Singletary. In this deed there was conveyed:

"the sole command of the water in the old Ditch so-called to maintain a floom there and to draw or stop the water at pleasure . . . further the said Abraham, his Heirs, or assigns, have hereby granted to them the right or priviledge of setting up any mill that he or they shall see cause on the old Saw Mill spot or anywhere on said old Ditch he or they shall choose, &c."

Twenty-nine years after Richard Singletary had secured the grist-mill erected by his father, John Singletary, he sold the property to his younger brother Amos. This included "thirty acres be the same more or less with a dwelling house and Barn & Grist mill thereon standing." This is the first time that a Singletary has owned a water privilege and mill that had any intervening proprietor between him and the pond itself, so we find the following:

“Memorandum it is always to be remembered that ye sd Amos Singletary is to have ye Priviledge of Raising ye water up to a Certain mark made in a Rock upon the Right hand of ye Bridge on ye southerly side of the Premises.”

It is this grist-mill that has been of such importance to the town for upon its door was displayed the warrant for the meeting which marked the separation of North Parish as a precinct. The building stood on the privilege known as the Wheeler, or Mayo Mill No. 2, location. It was later used as a saw-mill as well as a grist-mill, or there were two mills together, and men now living can remember when they were kept in operation by the successors of the Singletarys.

Amos Singletary operated the mill from 1764, when it was purchased from his brother Richard, until 1777, when he sold it to Abraham Waters. In the meantime, he had erected another grist-mill on the premises, for in a deed the property is described as

“The Farm on which I now live being about 30 acres—containing 2 Dwelling Houses, two Grist mills, and a barn & is bounded and butted as followeth. &c.”

In 1782, Abraham Waters sold the property to Judah Swift of New York State, and he, in 1790, sold it to Andrew Eliot. It remained in his hands until 1812, when it was sold at auction to Caleb Burbank.

Caleb Burbank, who had previously acquired from his father property which adjoined this mill site, also purchased the water rights to all the stream that flowed out of Singletary Lake. He built a dam along the shore of the pond near the outlet which enabled him to raise the water several feet higher than it had previously been possible for it to reach. At the same time he secured from several who owned property bordering on the pond the right to overflow their land by raising the water of the pond “to an Iron pin or bolt inserted in a large rock at the northwesterly end of the dam lately erected by said Burbank on the road leading from the North to the South Parish in said Sutton &c." It is from conditions unified by Burbank's complete control of the waters of Singletary stream that rights and privileges are held by manufacturers on the stream today.

Another mill location that is above the Wheeler, or Mayo No. 2, privilege, though of much later origin, is the location on the present water course of the Harris saw-mill which stood near Singletary street just as the water emerges from under the knoll through which the underground water-course runs. This mill was built about 1850, by Henry W. Harris, who soon afterward was associated with Marius M. Hovey in its operation. No other industry has ever occupied this site. Foundation stones of the structure may readily be seen.

MAYO MILL No. 2

On the present water privileges occupied on the Singletary, that of the Wheeler, or Mayo No. 2, mill is first on the stream. Although the present buildings are further from the road than the early mills built by the Singletarys, the privilege is the same.

In 1828 or 1830, buildings on the privilege were fitted up for the manufacture of cotton batting, under the direction of Deacon Henry Mills. After his occupancy the mill was operated by Isaac Hayden in making cotton prints.

Just previous to 1835, a Boston company manufactured woolen goods here, but after continuing for a few years, its affairs became straitened and the creditors formed the Singletary Manufacturing Company, for securing debts due to some of its members from the Boston concern. In their aims, however, they were partially disappointed and after a few years the company was discontinued. Capt. Amasa Wood was president of the Singletary company and he, with Samuel Davis (one of the earliest lessees of the Court Mills of Worcester), A. G. Stiles, Horace Waters, and Asa Hunting were directors.

Following the Singletary Mills, a concern called the "Boston and Millbury Co." occupied the site, but their mill was burned in 1843. Farnum and Jenks succeeded them and their mill was burned April 5, 1846. Indeed, the number of fires that have occurred here is noticeable. Then followed Mowry Farnum and, after him, Farnum and Wheeler. Jonathan D. Wheeler was next in possession and he operated the mill for many years. Later, the "Wheeler Cotton Mills Company" was incorporated with the following officers, W. H. Wheeler, president, and F. H. Wing, treasurer. The capital was stated to have been eighty thousand dollars. The company was practically owned by Jonathan D. Wheeler, but on account of his ill health it was carried on in his interest for a comparatively short time after which the building stood idle for some years.

April 20, 1894, the mill, tenement-houses, land, and rights were sold to Samuel E. Hull, Augustus S. Winter, and Thomas Windle. Later on, in 1899, they undertook the manufacture of linen goods, the first venture in manufacturing that kind of goods in Millbury. J. C. Hall of Boston was superintendent. His plan was to incorporate the Union Linen Co. (a Maine concern) and to manufacture bleached linen cloth through a patent process for extracting the gum from the flax. A considerable quantity of goods were made, but the attempt was finally abandoned.

The Mayo Woolen Company was incorporated Oct. 30, 1897, and on Sept. 23, 1910, this company bought the mill of S. E. Hull, A. S. Winter, and Thomas Windle, and the mill was called Mayo Mill No. 2. The purchase included the mill, mill-privilege, and tenements, without any machinery, together with some of the product of the linen company. The Mayo Company thoroughly repaired the building.

This mill has twenty-six feet head of water, the most of any mill on Singletary stream, so that the location is a valuable one on this account, as well as because of the purity of its water, which comes directly from the lake. Connected with the mill are fifty-five acres of land and seven houses containing eleven tenements.

WEST END THREAD COMPANY

General Burbank at one time owned a shop located on the present site of the West End Thread Co's plant. In early days, Samuel Marble also had a scythe-shop here. About 1828, a machine shop was built on the spot by Harvey Waters. Previous to 1837, the Woodward Bros. operated a small woolen mill which was Mr. Waters' machine shop enlarged, and shortly afterward Woodward & Gorton, who manufactured woolen and cotton goods, were located here until about 1842, when they were succeeded by Abijah Larned. He was followed by Jonas A. Hovey & Co. From them it passed to Jonathan A. Pope and from him to James Brierly & Co. Jonathan A. Pope again was located here, in 1851. Later on, Emerson & Brierly followed him. Some time later, Crane & Waters purchased the privilege which they sold, in 1877, to L. L. Whitney, who manufactured yarns until 1884, when the mill was burned. In 1886, Mr. Whitney built a brick machine shop on the old site, which he leased to the Stonemetz Printers' Machine Co., of which Mr. Whitney was president. This company later removed from town. In 1892, Whitney and McDuff began the manufacture of linen thread at this place and continued the business for some years.

Jan. 1, 1903, the West End Thread Co., a Boston concern, bought the property. The Boston Agents are Dean, Chase Company. The resident manager is Frederick W. Hooper and the superintendent is William Bright. The business of this company is the manufacture of linen shoe thread, carpet thread, and book-binders' thread. Since boot and shoe manufacturers require a thread that will last as long as the other parts of the shoe, the high standard of work done by this company is evident. Beside spinning from the flax, this company also does its own bleaching and dyeing.

The capacity of the plant has been many times enlarged by the addition of several fine brick structures where, at the birth of our town, only a little one-story shop marked the place. Improved machinery and new steam facilities have been added; a new water-way has been constructed from a good sized pond; and, in 1911 and 1912, five additional comfortable houses were erected on the company's land. This concern is taking a foremost rank among the industries of Millbury and it pays the second largest tax in town.

MAYO MILL No. 1

The privilege now occupied by Mayo Mill No. 1 is the one that has been most closely associated with the Burbanks, although the Burbank paper mill stood over one hundred feet farther up the stream. It was at this privilege that, in 1776, Abijah Burbank, in response to a request voiced at a county convention, held May 31, 1775, began the manufacture of paper. After the paper mill had become well established, five men and twelve women were employed. By operating the two engines to their full capacity for the accustomed fifteen hours a day, about fifteen hundred pounds of paper were produced in a week. It was hand labor, however, that was chiefly instrumental in producing the writing paper in this mill. Each sheet of paper was treated separately five or six times before it was ready for the market and three months were required in making the paper from the time that the rags were received until the finished product was ready for the market.

As stated above, about 1812, the Burbanks controlled the water on Singletary stream and, as they apparently decided to give special attention to the manufacture of paper, they either took others into partnership with them at the other privileges or sold the rights entirely. In view of this retention of the paper-mill, other water rights were sold in terms of water sufficient to run two paper machines in the Burbank paper mill, so that enough water was granted to the privilege, now occupied by the West End Thread Co. and to the privilege now occupied by the Mayo Mill No. 3, sufficient to keep the two paper machines running in the Burbank paper mill within certain working hours.

Caleb Burbank continued to operate the mill until the latter part of June, 1836, and, as there was need of having a definition of the amount of water required to run the paper machines, a legal deposition was given by him which declared that, though more machines were used in the mill at that time, than formerly, the amount of water required to operate them was no more than had previously been necessary to run two machines. Similar depositions were given by Gardiner S. Burbank, by Isaac Goddard who had "the general superintendence of the business," by Abial Jacques, a hydraulic expert, by Benjamin F. Martin, an engineer, and by William Hall, a mill-wright.

The two engines which have meant so much in the water rights on the stream were estimated to have a capacity of six horsepower each. In the summer of 1831 two larger ones were installed and, in 1833, a third engine was put in. At this time an apron was put under the water-wheel to save water which wasted from the bucket and with this apron in place the three engines could be carried as well as the two could previously. Thus it is established that water rights granted in terms of the two former engines would mean that the whole amount that was needed to carry more engines at a later date, because of the improvement secured by the addition of an apron at the water wheel, was needed to carry the two engines when the water privileges were sold.

THE MAYO WOOLEN COMPANY, MILL NO. 1

The following deposition by Mr. Jaques, the millwright, gives us an accurate description of the water-wheel of those days. He stated as follows:

"measured the main water wheel and found it 20 ft. in diameter and about 6 ft. wide including the rims and the top of the wheel which is on a level with the top of the permanent flash boards of the Dam . . . Flume is in two sections. The larger part next below the Pond is 30 ft. 7 in. long and 5 ft. 8½ in. wide inside and 4 ft. high to the top of the flash boards measuring inside the flume. The lower section next to the wheel is 8 ft. long, same width as the first section and the bottom of it is 20 in. below the top of said flash boards. . . Gate hole for main wheel is in bottom of lower end of the lower section of the flume and is 5 ft. 2½ in. long and 4½ in. wide. The water is let on to the wheel 20 in. below the top of the wheel. The actual head under which the water operates upon the wheel with a full pond is 22 in. as the narrowest part of the gate hole is 2 in. below the bottom of the flume."

The deposition of General Burbank is in part as follows:

"I have occupied the Paper Mill which I formerly owned in Millbury up to about a week ago. I put what is called the Cylinder machine into that Mill about eight years ago. I had then but two engines in the Mill. I had also a duster which was carried as it is now by a small Tub-Wheel. The Cylinder machine was carried as it is now by a breast wheel of the diameter of eleven feet. The two engines were carried also by the Maine wheel just as they are now with the same gearing and the same pitch of water but there was no Apron. . . . Those two Engines continued in until about six years ago when I took them out and put in two new ones that are longer. The old engines were of two feet rolls and the new ones were of 30 inches rolls the diameter of the rolls the same. . . . About two years after that a Rag Cutter was put in which was carried by the same wheel as the Duster. A third engine was put in about the first of October, 1833. I tried to operate the three engines without an Apron to the wheel and found they would not operate. This was while I was preparing the Apron. I then put in the Apron and they operated well. The same head of water which would not carry the three Engines without the Apron carried them with full speed with the Apron. My opinion is that the Apron made one thirds difference in the power . . . The pond has always been kept about full ever since previous to 1828, because I was able to supply it from a reservoir above . . . I added a Dryer about a year ago . . . The head and fall at the Mill was twenty feet."

In 1834, Caleb Burbank became financially involved with his brother Elijah at Quinsigamond village, Worcester, and the Millbury business passed into the hands of Silas Goddard, who had been his superintendent. Later, the industry was carried on by Brierly and Co. who maintained a paper mill here until 1857. F. H. Richmond of Providence, R. I., next became owner of the privilege. In 1863, a company composed of Mowry A. and Smith Lapham bought the mill rights but after the death of Smith Lapham the business was continued under the name of Mowry A. Lapham. A mill was erected which was burned in 1876. In 1879, the present structure was erected. During the rebuilding of the mill a chimney one hundred and fifty feet high had been completed and to celebrate the completion of the work an oyster supper was served to several at the top of the chimney. A short time afterward, however, the chimney pushed out at the base and the entire pile fell into the mill yard; fortunately, only one man was injured and he but slightly. Additions were made to the mill from time to time and Mr. Lapham continued a successful business in the manufacture of fine woolen goods.

In 1897, Josiah B. Mayo, Thomas P. Curtis, and Edward J. Mayo bought the buildings and the water rights and, later in the year, the Mayo Woolen Co. purchased the property of these men and rebuilt the mill. Under the supervision of John R. Greenwood the remodelled mill started in operation in January, 1898. Improved machinery has steadily been added to the equipment of the plant which has contributed substantially to the prosperity of the town.

OIL MILL

The water privilege next below the old paper mill of the Burbanks was first used in the manufacture of linseed oil and was situated where the store of W.E. Horne stands. An indenture, given Mar. 1, 1770, explains the beginnings of this enterprise. It is as follows:

“Abijah Burbank, clothier, and Jonathan Holman, Jonathan Waters, Andrew Eliot. Whereas the sd Abijah Burbank, &c., have erected in Sutton aforesaid on the land of the said Abijah Burbank a Mill and Dam for the making of Linseed Oyl which Mill and Dam was erected at the joint lot of the said Abijah Burbank, &c., and they have agreed to carry on the Business of making Linseed Oyl at the Mill aforesd in equal parts. Now therefore these presents witness that the sd Abijah Burbank in consideration that the sd Jonathan Holman, &c., have been at the charge and expense of building three-quarters of said Mill and Dam and in consideration of his partnership for carrying on the said Business he doth by these presents give and grant unto the said Jonathan his heirs & assigns forever one-fourth part of this Mill and Dam and the land on which they stand with the privilege of Passing and repassing as may be necessary round about said Mill and Dam and privilege of the Water in the upper dam so as not to damage the fulling mill below and to the said Jonathan Waters and Andrew Eliot same priviledges as to Holman."

In a deed by which Elijah Holman transferred one-fourth part of this oil mill to Caleb Burbank, Apr. 28, 1817, the stream is called "Millbrook River." The price paid, $250.00, gives us some idea of mill values in those days.

Below the "Oyl" mill, but built previously to it, stood a Fulling Mill erected, about 1750, by John Wait who operated the mill in partnership with his son Nathaniel. In 1757, Nathaniel Wait sold his half of the property to John Hazeltine and, in 1759, John Wait sold the remainder to him. With the fulling mill there was a clothier's shop. The property is described as follows: "half the fulling Mill and half the shop thereon standing with half the Clothiers Tools vizt: half the shears half the Copers half the Press half the Press papers with every other thing belonging to the clothiers trade &c." The deed from the other Wait conveys the other half of the property. In 1761, John Hazeltine sold the "fulling mill dams and shops" to Abijah Burbank. This was before Burbank had started his paper mill.

Probably the oil mill dam was torn away to give more head of water to the fulling mill pond next below it for, in 1825, Caleb Burbank sold to Braman and Benedict the right to twenty feet head of water on Mill Brook from Crooked Pond, when "water shall be raised to the top of an Iron pin which is inserted into a rock lying in the 'by-wash' canal leading from the paper mill dam to the fulling mill pond and about four rods below the road above the top of which pin the water is never to be raised" by grantees . . . "also with the right to the Grantees their heirs and assigns, when necessary to drive their works, to hoist the gate at said Crooked Pond so as to let as much water run as shall be equivalent to carrying two engines in the Grantor's paper mill when the Grantor does not suffer so much to pass at his paper mill &c." $2500.00 was paid for land, buildings, privilege.

MAYO MILL No. 3

John Waters and Simeon Waters were in the clothier's business here before Braman and Benedict built their mill.

From a letter of Mr. Charles Munroe who lived opposite the paper mill from 1828 until 1832 we learn that "the Braman factory was next below the paper mill." At various times the mill has been operated by Jonathan A. Pope, Smith and Pratt, Emerson and Brierly, and J. M. Mason, & Co. After the death of Mr. Mason, John Rhodes took the mill, about 1872, and operated it in the manufacture of cotton warp. Later, the machinery in the mill was sent south. June 4, 1904, the building and privilege was purchased by the Mayo Woolen Co. and it has since been known as Mayo Mill No. 3. The building was renovated and it has been used as a stock preparing mill for the other mills of the company.

POWDER MILL

Below the fulling mill site was the old powder mill of Revolutionary days, operated at least part of the time by Asa Waters, senior. This building stood back from the road on the stream by the store of A. S. Winter and extended over what is now part of the W. W. Windle Co's pond. Abijah Burbank conveyed to the Colony of Massachusetts Bay the privilege of a powder mill at this place. Nov. 23, 1779, a committee, appointed by the General Court, consisting of Amos Singletary, Seth Washburn, and Edward Davis, Esqrs., made sale of the powder mill "with all the Appurtenances & Priviledges thereto belonging" and gave a quit-claim deed to Samuel Waters. (At the time he offered ten dollars a pound for salt-petre.) March 11, 1782, he, in turn, sold the powder mill "together with all the out Buildings and property of the Stream of water and all other of the appurtenances & priviledges thereto belonging" to Abraham Waters for one hundred and twenty pounds.

It has been stated that the building was blown up.

On this powder mill site, or near it, Asa Waters maintained some sort of works for, Feb. 18, 1788, for seven pounds, ten shillings, he secured from Abijah Burbank a "right to erect floom and take water out of Mill Brook between the Oyl mill and fulling Mill & to make a ditch from sd floom across Burbank's land to Waters' land."

THE W. W. WINDLE CO.

The next privilege on this stream is that now held by the W. W. Windle Co. The earliest mill erected here was used for the manufacture of linseed oil. At one time, paper making of a coarse kind was done on the site. In 1836, we have record of a building on the spot which was used as late as 1851 by Leland & Sabin for machine work in the manufacture of looms and other machinery. Later, Benchley & Jackson occupied the site. About 1854, a mill was erected which was operated by J. C. Howe & Co. For a long time afterward Nelson Walling occupied the mill in the manufacture of fancy cassimeres. After Mr. Walling's death, and until the building was burned, another company operated the mill when it was known as the Iona Woolen Mill. In the spring of 1904, the privilege was purchased by William W. Windle who erected a new mill. A company was formed, known as the W. W. Windle Co., and in the fall of that year his business at West Millbury was removed to this location. Power is furnished by water, steam, and electricity. Three large storehouses stand in the rear of the main building. This company deals in wool, waste, and material for other fabrics. The mill is used for scouring, dusting, carbonizing, and otherwise fitting wool and waste for manufacturers' use and it is equipped with improved machinery for this purpose.

In 1911, Mr. Windle visited England and other parts of Europe for the purpose of looking over similar establishments and gaining new ideas of the business. By order of President Taft, through the State Department, he was furnished with documents which caused these places to open their doors freely to him.

MAYO MILL, No. 4

This privilege was first developed in 1825 by the Longley brothers who built a dam here and a small mill. In 1831, Waters and Goodell made broadcloth at this privilege. The next in possession were Hosea Crane and Horace Waters who under the firm name of "Crane and Waters" for many years manufactured hosiery and knit underwear. During the years following the Civil War this mill was one of the most successful in the entire region and became specially famous for its manufacture of men's ribbed blue woolen underwear which had an unusual reputation on the market, not only in this country but also abroad.

In 1885, Osgood H. Waters, a son, and Royal Thayer, a son-in-law, of Horace Waters, formed a corporation and operated the mill, as successors to Crane and Waters.

Later names in connection with this privilege were "The Koted Silk Co.," "The Portsmouth Mill," and "The Worcester Knitting Mill." The mill with its rights was bought by the Mayo Woolen Company, Feb. 20, 1912, and became Mayo Mill No. 4, thus making four mills owned by this company on Singletary stream.

The location is one of the best in town. The mill-yard contains two acres of excellent land. In addition to the improvements already made by the new occupants, still more are intended. The growth of the Mayo Woolen Co. is shown by the following figures: One year after it took possession of No. 1 mill, in 1898, the number employed was seventy, the production was one hundred seventy-five thousand yards of cloth, and the pay-roll of the company amounted to thirty-four thousand dollars. For the year 1912, in all the mills of the company, the number employed was two hundred twenty-five, the production was six hundred thousand yards of cloth, and the pay-roll amounted to one hundred twenty-five thousand dollars. The capital stock of the company is one hundred thousand dollars, and the officers are: President, Thomas P. Curtis; treasurer, Edward J. Mayo.

Mr. John R. Greenwood is resident agent of all the company's mills.

REVOLUTIONARY ARMORY

Just in front of the dam at the stone mill of Edward F. Rice & Co. on Singletary stream, was situated the trip-hammer building connected with the armory of Asa Waters, senior, in Revolutionary days. Mr. George W. McCracken, at the age of eighty-seven, definitely located the old structure and stated that the timbers on the old trip-hammer shop were the largest that he ever saw in any building. Shortly before his death, Colonel Waters spoke of seeing, when young, ruins of other buildings still farther down the stream. The region about the stone-mill and the Crane & Waters privilege has changed in the location of dams and trenches since the existence of the old armory, where Asa and his brother Andrus established their early gun-works. The latter lost his life in the iron mines of Connecticut from which metal was procured for the works on Singletary stream. At the first armory in Millbury muskets were made for the soldiers of '76. Flint-lock guns made at this armory compared favorably with those produced at the same time in England.

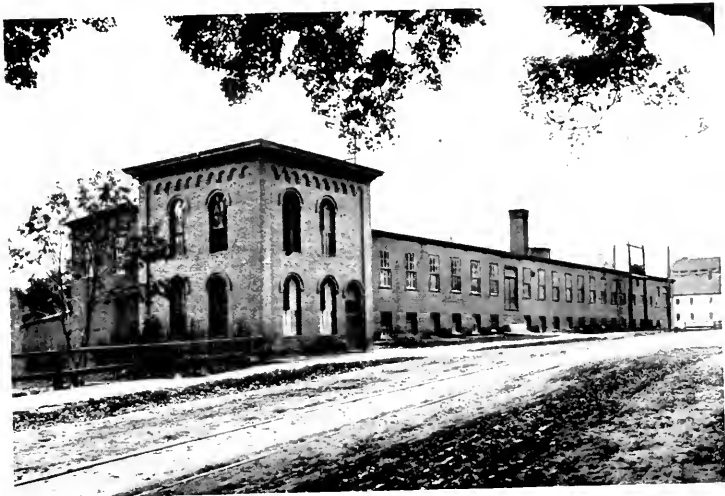

EDWARD F. RICE & Co. (sixth privilege)

Edward F. Rice & Co. now occupy the last water-power site on the Singletary Stream. The property, together with the Crane & Waters privilege, was for many years in the hands of the Waters family. About 1827, an old building stood near-by in which Timothy Longley manufactured hoes and scythes. The stone mill now owned by the Rice company was built by Elder Samuel Waters, in 1828, who installed machinery for the manufacture of cotton thread. In 1833, Jonathan A. Pope was agent at the mill. On this spot, in 1850, Russell Phelps & Co., of which Horatio Phelps, the old loom manufacturer of Worcester, was a silent partner, manufactured hosiery. The next one to operate here was Jonas A. Hovey. It was next occupied, in 1854, by Rhodes & Murray and later in the manufacture of cotton warp by John Rhodes, who carried on business here for many years. After his decease, the mill was operated for some years by his son-in-law, Henry M. Wilcox, who built the wooden addition to the stone mill. In the spring of 1892, the John Rhodes Warp Co. sold the property to the Holbrook Mfg. Co., which operated the mill for a year. In 1904, the Holbrook Mfg. Co. sold the privilege to the present owners, Edward F. Rice & Co., who manufacture cotton napkins. Business has so increased that now, instead of the twelve Jacquard looms with which the company started, one hundred are in operation. In 1911, the company introduced electricity in addition to water power. The goods made by this firm are of beautiful patterns designed by the firm and they find a ready market. Mr. Edward F. Rice is general manager.

This old stone mill built by Elder Waters is almost as old as the town itself, but from all appearance seems capable of witnessing not only the first, but the bi-centennial of Millbury.

CHAPTER XVII

INDUSTRIES ON RAMSHORN STREAM

The first water privilege on Ramshorn Stream is at an old dam over which a discontinued road once ran and is situated three-quarters of a mile from the pond. This is the third dam on the stream. The first, or upper, dam holds back the water at the pond and maintains a reservoir for equalizing the amount of water flowing in the stream and therefore also regulates the volume of water in the Blackstone River. Below this, at a distance of half a mile, is a coffee dam that was erected to assist in reserving the rainfall of the basin below the large pond. This third dam, site of the upper privilege, is not used at present but the water courses through it. At this place stood the old scythe shop of Follansbee and Chase, erected many years ago. The privilege next passed into the hands of Noah Crossman who carried on the same business and operated in addition trip-hammers, so that the place was known as "the upper trip-hammer shop."

Associated with Mr. Follansbee at one time was Mr. Phelps. Later, at this location Perley Whipple erected a small building which he leased to Bigelow & Mann, for making stocking yarn, though Mr. Whipple also worked here as a scythe maker. The mill was burnt in 1839. From an old deed we learn that Peter Trask and Jonathan Holman at one time were both interested here. It would now be considered a small affair.

The second privilege is located where the Hoyle mill now stands. At this place a mill was erected by Mr. Whipple which was used by Amos Eddy and others as a grist-mill. The property later passed to Elisha Jacobs from whom it went to Simeon S. Waters, who was followed by H. D. Tripp. He was succeeded by Charles and William Lombard. Upon the retirement of William Lombard it continued to be used by his brother Charles until the Ramshorn dam gave way, in 1873. In 1877, the privilege was bought by Charles Buckley for Hoyle & Windle (Edwin Hoyle and Thomas Windle) who rebuilt the old mill, which had been badly wrecked, and used it for wool-scouring. After the retirement of Mr. Windle in 1879, Mr. Hoyle, in 1880, erected a brick mill and later a storehouse for his increasing business in wool and, in 1884, another story in which yarn was made was added to the building. Mr. Hoyle manufactured hosiery for about two years, after which he began making mackintoshes, but changed to the manufacture of woolen goods. Later, the mill was leased to E. E. Hoyle and Mr. Ramseyer, who operated it for a short time. Wm. Lowenthal then occupied the place for about one year. The next occupants were Edwin Hoyle and Thomas Windle, manufacturers of woolens, but this partnership was brief, Mr. Hoyle retiring in 1903 and Mr. Windle operating the mill until January, 1904, when it was partly destroyed by fire. Shortly afterward, the mill was rebuilt and Mr. Hoyle manufactured woolen yarns. In 1905, the mill was operated for a brief period by the Arconia Company in making worsteds. The next firm to operate here was the Millbury Mills Co., A. C. Neff, superintendent, a branch of the C. A. Root Co. of Uxbridge, who leased some looms, though the upper story of the mill was still run by Mr. Hoyle. Since his death, in 1910, the plant has been operated for the manufacture of woolen goods by his estate, under the direction of Charles F. Day, a son-in-law, who is superintendent and general manager. In 1912, the Millbury Mills Co. removed its operations to Millbury Center.

The next privilege, the third, on this stream was the old scythe-shop of Amos Eddy. Here, Noah Crossman operated "the lower trip-hammer shop." Capt. Joseph Griggs next occupied the place and operated a fulling-mill for leather and tanned sheepskins. Across the way he had a shop for stripping bindings for the tops of shoes. From Mr. Griggs the Eddy privilege passed to Bainbridge Morris who had a wood-working shop. Again it passed to the Griggs heirs and from them to Stephen A. Savary, who was a blacksmith. He built the present brick block, the lower story of which was used for blacksmith work and the upper story as a planing mill and for other wood-working machinery. During his proprietorship, the upper story was for a time operated by Warren Glover. On the death of Mr. Savary the privilege went into the hands of Henry Glover. The small shop opposite was for some years owned and occupied by Hiram Kenney for wood-work, especially in the manufacture of carts and wheels of superior merit.

The fourth privilege is located on the southerly side of the road which runs from Bramanville to West Millbury where the Stream crosses the road. The beginning of this privilege is indicated as follows:

"This indenture, made the Fifth day of June, 1812, by and between Jonathan Holman, Esq., and Elijah Holman, Yeoman, both of Sutton, in the county of Worcester, of the one part, and Stephen Blanchard, Carter Elliot, David Elliot and Asa Kenney, all of the same Sutton, Yeomen, of the other parts, witnesseth,—that in consideration of acts and Covenants hereafter expressed and by the said (persons named above) do hereby give and grant unto said Stephen Blanchard, Carter Elliot, David Elliot and Asa Kenney, their heirs and assigns, the privilege of making and continuing a Dam across the brook, on our lot, near our saw-mill, and to cut a Canal for the purpose of conveying water for working a mill . . . To have and to hold the same for the purpose aforesaid, on this condition—that is to say—they shall, in the course of the present year deliver a sufficient quantity of Black lead to paint the said Johathan Holman's house, properly ground and fitted for use, and each and every year shall pay to the said Jonathan and Elijah, seven dollars by the year, so long as they shall use the privilege aforesaid."

Stephen Blanchard and the others above named promised to comply with the conditions and signed accordingly.

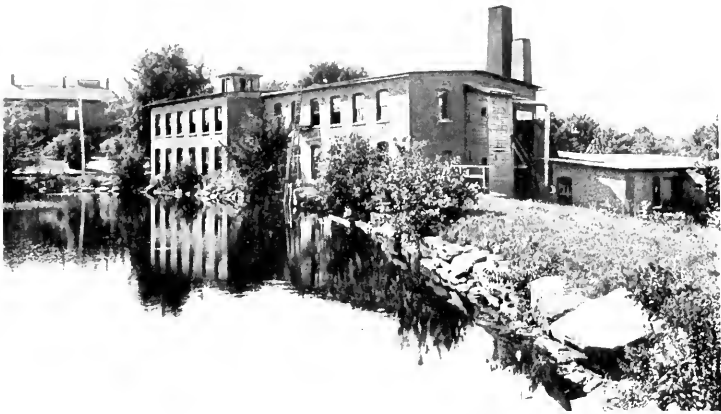

In 1828, Elijah Holman (Jonathan having died in 1814) transferred and assigned the above indenture to Joseph Griggs & Co. (Joseph Griggs, Benjamin Abbot and Benjamin Whitney). In 1830, Joseph Griggs & Co. conveyed all their interest in the above premises back to Elijah Holman.

The building at this privilege was used by the Elliots for many years in grinding black lead or graphite which was brought here and ground. They were interested in what was called "Elliot's Worcester Coal Mine." Thomas Blanchard had a machine for wood-working in a portion of the building and worked here on his eccentric lathe. In this place, too, he perfected one of the early machines for shearing cloth. Later, the building was owned by Abijah Gleason who continued the grinding of black lead which was put up in packages and was used for polishing stoves and also for painting the hulls of vessels.

The Hon. Charles G. Washburn in his business history of Worcester, published in 1888, presented five different views of this historic old building, one of which appears in this work. The place next passed into the hands of Buckley W. Snow and from him to his son, Birney W., who manufactured hubs and spokes. In 1873, the place was bought by James A. Dike, who turned chisel-handles. In 1888, Mr. Dike sold the privilege to Henry W. Glover, the present owner who manufactures wooden handles for edge tools.

The old building was used until 1889 when it was torn down to make way for a larger one. In 1900, this latter structure was destroyed by fire and soon afterward the present mill, two and a half stories in height, was erected on the old site. Nearby a storehouse has also been erected.

The fifth privilege was owned in 1744 by Nathaniel Waters, the first settler on the farm now occupied by Charles F. Soule. Mr. Waters deeded as follows: "A certain brook or stream commonly called Rams Horn

THE HOYLE MILL

THE MANUFACTURERS WOOL STOCK COMPANY

Brook, with yard room and all other privileges necessary for a Saw-mill or mills on the said brook or stream." This was granted to Solomon Holman "for twenty-six pounds lawful money." Previous to 1800, Jonathan Holman, a son of Solomon, in addition to a saw-mill had here a linseed oil mill.

Up to the time of the breaking away of the Ramshorn dam in 1873, below these mills extensive tanning and currying works stood. Among the earliest tanners was Joseph Waters. Soon after 1800, a stock company was formed, composed of Benjamin Abbot, Benjamin Whitney, Lieut. John Jacobs, Colonel Fay, and other Millbury (Sutton) people. Some of these withdrew, and a company was formed, known as Griggs, Abbot, & Whitney. Later, Capt. Joseph Griggs carried on the industry. Capt. Amasa Wood was at one time interested here and later the place came into the hands of Salem Griggs, a nephew, with whom David Marble was at one time associated in the currying part of the industry. These tanning and currying works were destroyed, in 1873, by the Ramshorn disaster.

In 1879, Warren Glover secured a lease of the place for three years. About 1880, Thomas Windle bought the privilege, including the old saw-mill and the ruins of the tannery, and, immediately after the expiration of Mr. Glover's lease, he erected a mill for wool-scouring and later built an addition for the manufacture of cloth-folding machines, but after a year or two this business, which was carried on by J. E. Windle, was removed to Worcester. The mill was afterward nearly destroyed by fire, but it was soon rebuilt. The wool-scouring business was continued by Thomas Windle under the name of the Millbury Scouring Co. In June, 1898, the mill was totally destroyed by fire, but a new one was soon built on the site.

In the same year Thomas Windle leased his mill to his sons, W. W. and A. D. Windle. After the dissolution of this partnership, William W. Windle took one part of the mill and A. D. Windle the other. In 1904, W. W. Windle removed his business to Bramanville and A. D. Windle occupied the mill until it was again burnt in 1905. Soon a small mill was built on the site and he continued the industry under the name of the Millbury Scouring Co. In 1911, A. D. Windle became connected with the Manufacturers Wool Stock Co., of Sutton, which took over his business at West Millbury. Upon the destruction of the Sutton Mill by fire the same year, the business was removed from Sutton to this location, a new office was built, and some additions were made to the mill which had been previously rebuilt. The company carried on a considerable business in wool-scouring and carbonizing and also dealt in wool and wool waste. Electric power was installed in addition to water power and improved machinery was introduced. The company scoured about three million pounds of wool a year. The officers were: Arthur D. Windle, president and general manager; Henry O. Sutcliffe, treasurer; Harry W. Thomson, clerk. In 1914, Mr. Sutcliffe withdrew from the company and the name was changed again to the "Millbury Scouring Co."

The sixth privilege on this stream was in early times used as a scythe shop by Noah Crossman. About 1873, John G. Wood bought the water rights and rebuilt the dam which had been nearly destroyed by the Ramshorn disaster. He removed hither the West Congregational Church building which he had bought and to it was added the Union Hall building of West Millbury. These were converted into a cotton factory and were so used until 1876, when the mill was burnt. Some time later, John S. Rich purchased the privilege and erected a grist and shingle mill. Afterwards, he built a shoddy mill which he still operates, doing a steady and lucrative business.

CHAPTER XVIII

INDUSTRIES ON THE BLACKSTONE RIVER

Millbury lies wholly within the water-shed of the Blackstone and the river has so greatly affected its industries and prosperity that we quote the following brief description:

“Investigation by engineering shows that it is the busiest river in the United States, and probably the busiest in the world. The result of a recent investigation by experts, according to the “Technical World Magazine,” shows that:—

“The hardest working river, the one most thoroughly harnessed to the mill wheels of labor in the United States, probably the busiest in the world, is the Blackstone. It is not a large river either. Its drainage area is only about 458 square miles, and in its power producing section it is only forty three miles long—a very Tom Thumb of a river as rivers go in America.

“Yet the doughty little stream produces twenty-three thousand horse-power, fifty for every square mile of its drainage area. If you will figure out this amount of horse-power in terms of coal, you will find that the busy little stream represents a capitalization of about twenty-five million dollars. . . . Almost a hundred mills, catching with their whirling turbines its water almost from the very source line its banks and grow in size and importance till in Woonsocket and in Pawtucket, R. I., you have some of the largest mills of their kind in the country.”

BURLING MILLS

The first, or upper, privilege on the Blackstone River is located a few rods below the Greenwood Street bridge and was formerly occupied by the Burling Mills (where cloth was put through the process of burling). In 1850, Michael Coogan built a small mill on this site and operated it alone at first, but later Henry H. Chamberlain & Co., of Worcester, became interested in the mill with him.

William H. Harrington & Co. next operated the mill which had been used chiefly in the manufacture of woolen goods. When the electric railway from Worcester to Millbury (now the Bramanville line of the Worcester Consolidated Street Railway Co.) was built, this privilege was purchased and a power station and car barn were erected. The water, however, was only used to condense the steam. When power was taken elsewhere the station was closed.

The second privilege on the Blackstone river was developed and put to use by Asa Waters, Junior. Before 1841 he had here located flannel mills which he operated until their destruction by fire. The map of 1851 shows the three buildings of the Stillwater Mill which Col. Asa H. Waters had then built on the west end of the mill lot, that is, on the east side of the present Waters street where it crosses the river. The mill was described as the finest in the town. In 1868 this, too, was burned and was not rebuilt. A canal carried water from the dam to a point near the present location of the Providence and Worcester R. R. station, following what is now River Street on which remains of the embankment can still be seen along the west side of the street. In 1834, Allen and Rice occupied a two-story building at the lower end of this canal for the manufacture of sash and blinds. Allen and Coombs succeeded them in the same business. The successors of the latter firm, J. Coombs & Co., removed about 1847 to the east or upper end of the Stillwater Mill lot. Later (1852), T. S. Fullam, C. D. Morse, E. M. Park, and E. A. Small formed a partnership, under the firm name of Fullam, Morse, & Co., to continue the business. The same year Mr. Small withdrew and the next year Mr. Fullam sold his interest to Horace Armsby. The firm then became Armsby & Morse. About 1856, Mr. Park left the company. In 1871, Mr. Morse purchased the interest of Mr. Armsby and the concern took the name of C. D. Morse & Co. and so continued until the death of Mr. Morse, in 1895. For years the company did an extensive business in the manufacture of sash and blinds, the product going to all parts of the country. Just before the death of Mr. Morse, street cars were manufactured, but this venture was not of long duration. After the close of the long and useful career of Charles D. Morse, the business was conducted under the management of his son, Charles H. Morse, until February, 1898, when the plant was practically destroyed by fire. After the fire the heirs built a substantial brick mill.

C. D. MORSE & CO. SHOP, 1871

In 1898, the property and rights to the water privilege were sold to H. L. Bowden, a member of the firm of H. L. Bowden & Co., and a company, known as "The Bowden Felting Mills Company," with a capital of fifty thousand dollars, was incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts. In 1904, the officers of the company were: John R. Farnum, president, and Herbert L. Bowden, treasurer. For ten years Henry O. Sutcliffe was superintendent. At first the company manufactured boot felt, but later it produced felt for hats. March 4, 1910, "The Bowden Felting Mills Co." was merged with others into "The Felters Co." having a capital of two million dollars, fully paid in. The officers were: F. H. Brown, president, F. P. Bowden, vice president, H. L. Bowden, treasurer, F. Dolge, secretary and assistant treasurer. Many improvements and additions have been made about the plant. The Felters Company also owns and operates mills at Middleville, N. Y., and at Leicestershire, N. Y. Since the formation of the Felters Company, the output of the Millbury plant has been increased thirty-three per cent. This company makes all kinds of felt, chiefly of the higher grades. The total value of the product of the three mills operated by the company for a year is from one million and a half to two million dollars. Besides water, six boilers are used to generate power and recently one of the finest chimneys in town has been erected.

MILLBURY MACHINE COMPANY

Machine Work and General Repairing

The Millbury Machine Company was owned and operated by C. D. Morse and E. J. Humphries for thirty years. In 1907, shortly before the death of E. J. Humphries, this business was purchased from him by Warren B. Harris, who is a native of Millbury and a graduate of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

The plant is situated just west of the works of the Felters Co., from which its power is obtained, in a two-story building ninety feet long and forty feet wide with an ell forty feet long and thirty feet wide. The lower floor is fitted with machines for general machine work and contains a forge shop with two forges for oxy-acetylene welding, and cutting. The upper floor is used for pattern making. The company manufactures "The Enterprise Pulley Mortiser," "The Pioneer Moulding Sander" and "The Enterprise Pocket Cutter," an invention of the proprietor which has met with a good reception among sash manufacturers.

In December, 1911, the building was partially destroyed by fire, but it was soon rebuilt and again put in operation.

In 1914, the business of Henry F. Rice of Sutton for the manufacture of dobbey chains was consolidated with the work of the Millbury Machine Company and it has since that time greatly increased.

The original industry on the Blackstone River (then called "Half-way River") was an iron refinery located just above the South Main Street bridge on the bank of the river, although there was neither bridge nor road there at the time. Dec. 3, 1740, Benjamin Gowing sold to Perez Rice, Francis Dudley, Samuel Barton, Samuel Chase, and Benjamin Morse, for one hundred pounds, five-sixths (presumably each taking a sixth) of five acres "upon the North side of Half-way River adjoining homestead, privilege of adjoining river for building Dams and following (flowing) as they shall see fit." That a refinery was erected we learn from deeds of transfer dated two years later. That the concern was a growing one we infer from the price of one-sixth of the refinery which Benjamin Gowing received in 1744 when he sold his interest to John Haseltine for two hundred pounds. That the refinery was an iron refinery we learn from a sale made in 1744 by John Hazeltine to Samuel Chase of two-sixths part of "iron works." That the refinery was on the tract of land later occupied by the armory is confirmed by a note made by the late Colonel Waters on the copy of a deed which was in his possession.

When one stands at the north end of the South Main Street bridge and looks westward, it is now difficult to realize that the present deserted tangle of bushes and old foundations was the scene of the most important of Millbury's early industries and for many years the busiest part of the town. Elijah Waters and his younger brother, Asa, Jr., for several years previous to the erection of the 1808 Armory, had blacksmith and scythe shops beside the river immediately west of South Main Street. Here were forges, trip hammers, rolling and slitting mills, a saw and mill iron factory and a steel furnace. They built a dam where ledges of rock on both sides of the stream offered natural abutments for the structure at the fall of water immediately below the railroad bridge. The elder brother, after a long illness, died in 1814 and the surviving brother, Asa, continued and enlarged the business.

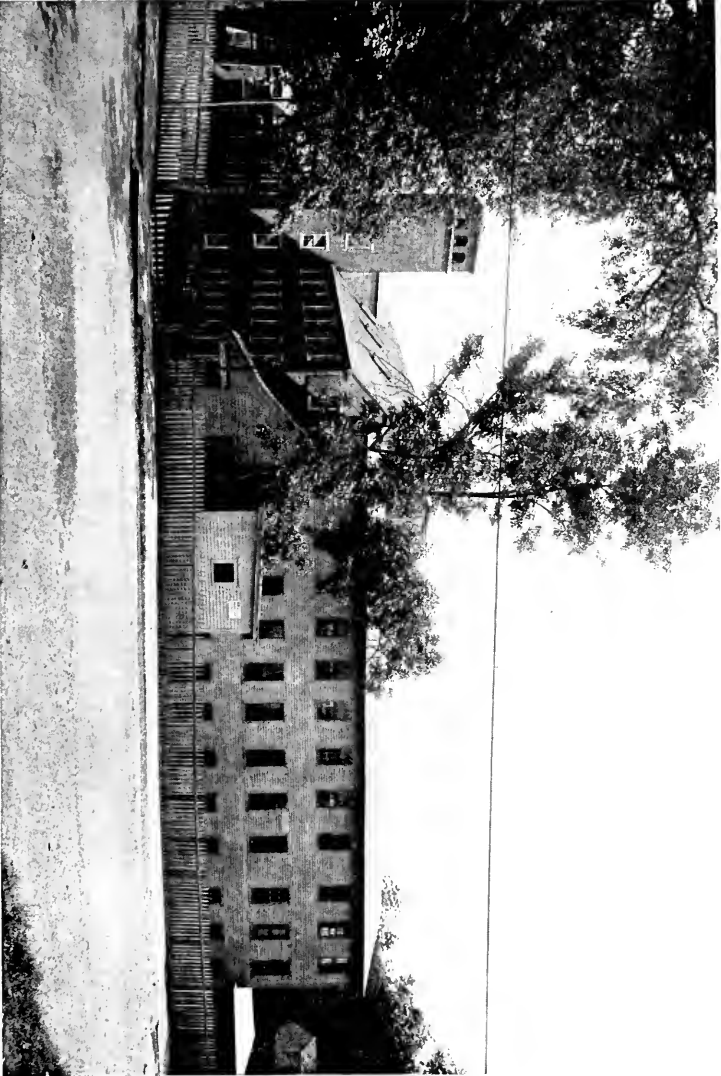

The lines of the old Armory driveway can be seen running out at right angles from the street, the surface of the road broken at places where the covering of former raceways have dropped in. It bisected a narrow area about four hundred feet long, bounded on its south side by the river and enclosed on its north side by walls and embankments supporting a long and narrow mill pond, now empty, from which water was drawn to drive the two or more wheels which furnished power for the armory and adjacent shops. At one time or another between the river and the Armory drive stood a forging shop built of stone, a foundry, a boiler house, an office and other buildings. The buildings on the opposite side of the driveway, between it and the mill pond, made, altogether, a block about three hundred feet long and from thirty to ninety feet wide. Some of the buildings were built of stone and cement. The original armory, built of brick, formed the west end of this line of buildings. Its pit for wheel and trip hammers can still be identified. West of the armory was sufficient space where the guns and pistols were tested by firing them, before acceptance by the government officials sent at intervals to Millbury for that duty.

The increased prosperity of the Armory, and consequently of Armory Village, dates from the first contract with the national government to furnish fire arms for the army, made in 1808 to cover a period of five years and renewed some six times for like periods, the last terminating in 1845. During times of financial distress which were frequent in New England during the first half of the last century, this work for the government furnished steady and lucrative employment for a little body of highly skilled gun makers, under the energetic management of the second Asa Waters and of his son, Col. Asa H. Waters, who after the former's death became senior partner of the firm of A. H. Waters & Co.

Adjacent to the armory proper, to the east, Hale and Whipple had a shop for the manufacture of scythes (1851, C. Hale & Son) and directly on the street T. H. Witherby & Co., (1851) had a manufactory of tools.

In 1862, a portion of the armory buildings was rented to Col. J. D. Greene who manufactured breech-loading rifles for the Russian government. At the outbreak of the Civil War, in 1861, Col. A. H. Waters was asked to again manufacture guns, but since much of the machinery had been sold, Colonel Waters declined the request, although he took contracts for supplying the government with ram-rods and bayonets which he made in large quantities.

Various industries were later carried on in these old armory buildings. At one time cotton machinery was manufactured here. Thompson, Skinner & Co. afterward occupied the building. Later on, Harrington & Heald here made tools and wrenches. In 1865, Colonel Waters, organized a company and operated the "Atlanta" mill at the old armory privilege. In 1871 and the following years, Wm. H. Harrington operated the mill in the manufacture of satinets.

On the eastern side of South Main Street the old grist-mill of Benjamin Gowing was located beside the river. This was also the site of the old spindle factory of Samuel Brown. On the site, shoe nails were once made.

In 1847, on this site, opposite the old armory, Colonel Waters erected a mill which was called the Millbury Cotton Mill. This was operated by the firm of Waters, Harrington, and Flagg after the close of the Civil War. In 1870, Colonel Waters retired from the firm and Flagg and Harrington continued to operate the mill. They were succeeded by J. H. Mason & Co., a Providence firm, that carried on an extensive business until 1898. Succeeding this firm, the United States Linen Co. occupied the site until 1907. In 1908 the National Crash Manufacturing Company was incorporated and manufactured linen goods here. The company perfected a process for the successful manufacture of linen cloth from flax noils. Mr. S. Edgar Benjamin was superintendent from the time of the organization of the corporation until 1914 when Mr. Anthony Dixon, Jr., succeeded him.

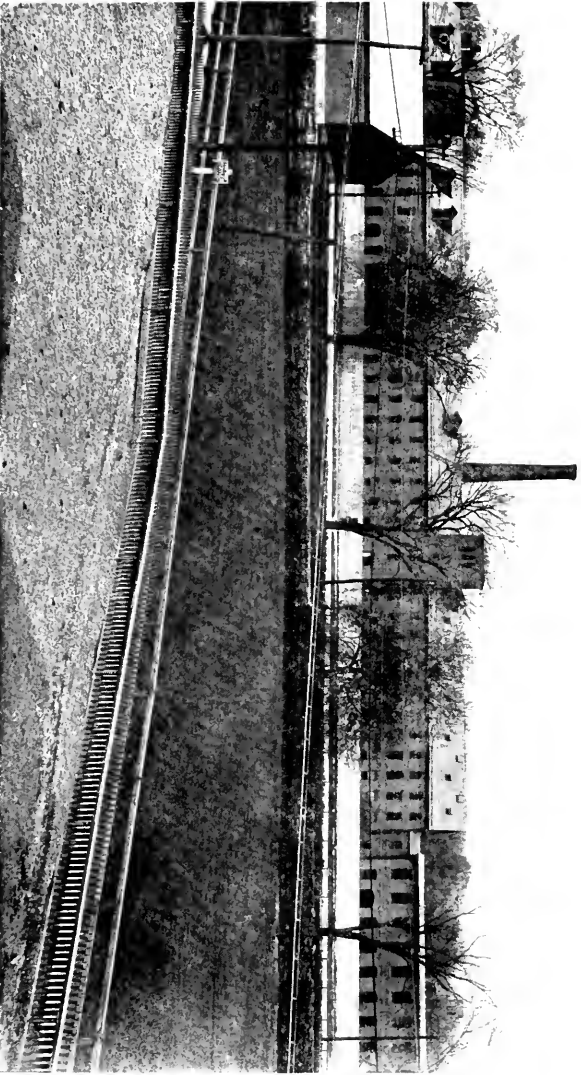

CORDIS MILLS. PRIVILEGE No. 5

The following abstract is believed to include the property which is now that of the Cordis Mill privilege as well as land at the old armory privilege.

Asa Waters to Asa Waters, Jr.,—Asa Waters, of Sutton, Gentleman, deeded to Asa Waters Jr., three parcels of land—
“Situatē lying in the easterly part of the second parish of Sutton, aforesaid—The first contains twenty-one acres one quarter and thirty-two rods, be the same more or less, bounded as followeth, viz.—beginning at the southernmost corner, it being a stake and stones at the northerly side of the road leading from said Asa Water’s to Grafton . . . Always reserving a privilege in a lane as it is now found.” The second piece, containing eight acres and sixteen rods, lay bounded,—“beginning at a northerly corner, it being a heap of stones by said road, thence extending south thirty degrees east fourteen rods by said Asa Waters, Jr., land to stones, thence south thirty-one degrees east twenty nine and a half rods to stones, thence West thirty degrees south thirty-one rods by Elijah Waters land to stones by the easterly bank of the Blackstone River, thence West fifteen degrees south, crossing said river, six and a fourth rods to a heap of stones, thence north one degree east twenty and a half rods by my own land to stones, thence north seventeen degrees west eight rods to a heap of stones by said road, thence northeasterly by said road crossing first mentioned.” “The third and last is a tract or piece of wood-land five acres and twelve rods I this day bought of Stephen March, and nine acres and three-quarters I bought of Edmund Andrews the twenty-sixth day of June, A. D. 1788, bounded as follows: beginning at the easterly corner of the five acre and twelve rod lot I bought of Stephen March. This piece partially bounded by land of John Waters.” (See Wor. Co. Deeds, Bk. 186, pp. 43-45.)

The Cordis property embraces land on which there was once a nail factory, a rolling and a slitting mill for iron work.

This privilege is the site of the Goodell broadcloth manufactory. On the land of the company near the old county bridge and the old burial-place on Providence Street, still stands one of the first school-houses used in Armory Village. Also, on the company’s land, in the rear of the office there is still to be seen an old store-house of the once important Blackstone canal, although the building is probably not on its original location. The Cordis Mills began the manufacture of cotton goods here April 1, 1844, when the present company was incorporated. In 1863, J. S. Wright operated the mill, although the place was still commonly known as the

THE CORDIS MILLS

Cordis Mills. The company was composed of John S., Eben, and John H. Wright. July 1, 1875, the company was again changed to the Cordis Mills, having been chartered June 25 of that year. The company manufactured ticking and operated seven thousand, four hundred eighty-eight spindles. In 1902, this company introduced the first automatic loom ever operated in town and since then it has replaced the ordinary looms with these. Steam and water power were used until 1915 when electricity was introduced. All the dyeing and finishing is done in the mill. The main mill is one hundred eighty-five feet long, thirty-eight feet wide, and four stories in height. Mill No. 2 is one hundred twenty-five feet long, forty-two feet wide, and two stories high. The picking house is sixty-eight feet long, forty-eight feet wide and two stories high. The dye-house is seventy-two feet long and fifty-eight feet wide. All goods produced by this company are sold by Briggs, Fabyan & Co., Boston, New York, and Chicago.

The officers of the company are: President, Charles H. Fiske, Boston; treasurer, F. W. Fabyan, Boston; resident agent, Frederick W. Moore, Millbury. Since the Cordis mills have been established in town, the following agents have been in charge: John E. Bacon, B. B. Howard, William H. Whiting, B. B. Howard (a second time), John Gegenheimer, and Frederick W. Moore.

A part of the land owned by this company was secured from the late Clough R. Miles and a portion of the land thus acquired was deeded to the Boston & Albany Railroad on condition that the railroad maintain a station on the property, but upon its failure to do this the land shall revert to the Cordis Company. In 1846, when a new schoolhouse in district No. 6 was built in Armory Village, the old one (mentioned in a deed dated Sept. 21, 1813), was sold to the Cordis Company two years after the company settled here and moved to the company's land.

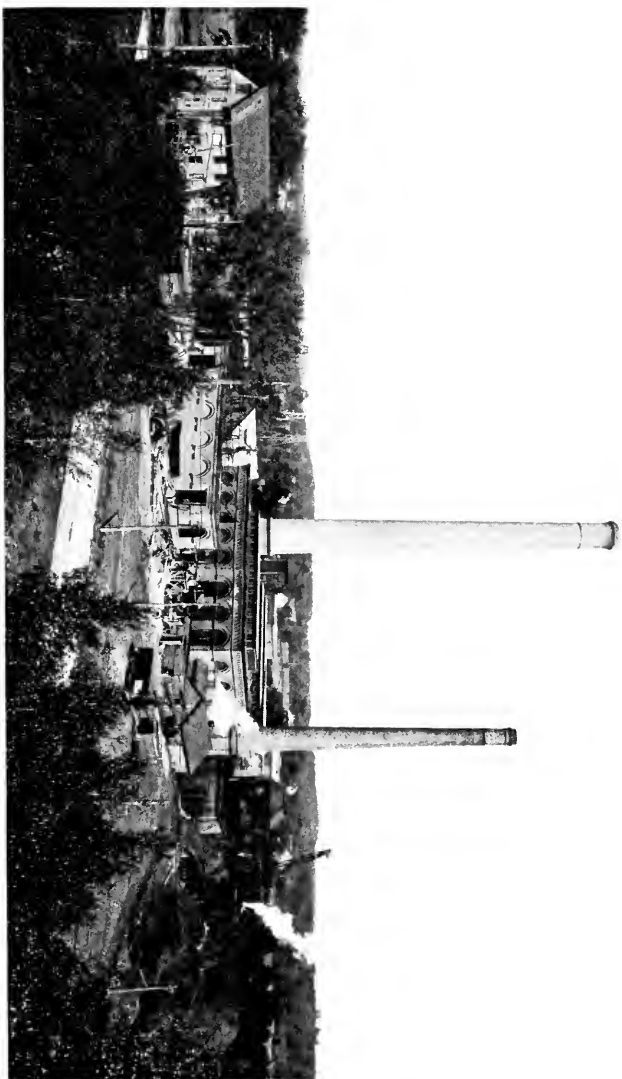

In 1914, the Cordis Company built a new mill to the south of the other buildings, in which automatic looms were set up, so that the production of the plant was doubled.

CONSOLIDATED POWER STATION

This manufacturing privilege is the sixth in town on the Blackstone River. A dam and mill here were begun in 1828 and finished in 1830 by Shepard & Ridgeway. After them Edward W. Ridgeway operated the mill under his own and other names until 1837. Trowbridge & Co. were afterward located here. Later companies have been Park & Wright, and Bellows, Baker & Co. William Crompton, the loom inventor, operated this mill for some time, making broadcloth, and it was while engaged here that he was at work perfecting the world-famous Crompton Loom. Near this privilege he also had a foundry and a loom manufactory. In 1847, he advertised as follows: "Being about to make woolen and cotton goods entirely, will sell out tools used in the manufacture of machinery at Millbury, the 22nd of April, 1848." This included eight large engines. At the time Mr. Crompton was here, sixty horse-power is said to have been developed. The machine shop, foundry, and blacksmith shop were to be let by applying to the agent of the Cordis Company. Following William Crompton, came David F. Wood and after him Merriam, Simpson and Rays. Mr. Merriam and the Rays withdrew, and the factory was owned and operated for a number of years by Capt. Peter Simpson in the manufacture of satinets. This mill was sold in 1890, by the Millbury National Bank, to Mr. Capen, who sold in turn to Charles T. Aldrich. Mr. Aldrich operated the mill for several years, doing a prosperous business on a low-priced grade of goods but, in 1897, a fire occurred that stopped all operations.

Early in 1898 the Blackstone Valley Street Railway came into possession of the property. It is now used as a power station for the Worcester Consolidated Street Railway Co. The plant has been rebuilt and has been thoroughly equipped for generating electricity by steam power, so that well-nigh the entire system of the Worcester Consolidated Street Railway Co. receives its power from this station.

Situated on the Blackstone river, but receiving its power from a brook that is tributary to the river, stands the Rice saw-mill which has been operated extensively in times past.

CHAPTER XIX

INDUSTRIES ON DOROTHY STREAM

BUCK BROTHERS

The first water privilege on Dorothy Stream is occupied by the Buck Brothers' works. This privilege has three ponds connected with it, viz.—Dorothy, and two others, one formed in 1868. On this site some years ago, Deacon T. H. Witherby ground chisels made at his other works. Skates were made here afterward. Later, tools were manufactured by Mr. Williams. Following him, Dennis Fisher made cut-nippers. Charles Hale succeeded him in the same line of work. Harrington & Heald followed on tool-work. Later A. H. Waters used the place in connection with his business.

Buck Brothers, manufacturers of chisels, gouges, plane irons, machinists' punches, cold chisels, nail sets, reamers, and countersinks, commenced business in Worcester, in 1853. Although started in a small way, the business gradually increased under the practical and skilful management of the Buck Brothers and, in the summer of 1864, it was removed to Millbury at this mill privilege, then owned by Dennis Fisher and known as the Andrus March privilege. A Buck's head is the trade mark. In 1873 Charles Buck withdrew from the firm. (see Chap. xx.)

The product of these works has become well-known, not only in the United States but also abroad, for the excellent quality of the edge-tools produced. Wherever the product of these works has been exhibited in competition with similar products the edge-tools from these works have in every instance secured the first prize for quality and style. The leading exhibitions in which displays have been made are the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, in 1876; the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago, in 1893; and the Buffalo Exposition, in 1901.

Gold medals were received from the Centennial and the Chicago Expositions, and a diploma from the one at Buffalo.

In 1878, Richard Buck added to the plant a handsome faced-brick structure, two stories high, one hundred twenty feet long, and thirty-five feet wide. He also erected, for the accommodation of his employees, twenty tenement houses, all so arranged as to form an attractive hamlet, known as "Buck's Village."

After Mr. Richard Buck died, Jan. 12, 1893, the business was continued by the sons-in-law, E. M. Wood and William L. Proctor, and it was purchased by them in 1894. In 1905, Mr. Proctor purchased Mr. Wood's interest, thus gaining possession of the entire plant. This is one of the oldest industries owned by a resident citizen and it is one of the leading manufacturing plants in the town. Mr. Proctor's sons, Richard W. Proctor and Harold B. Proctor, have taken an active part in the management of the business. Fifty persons are employed.

In 1913, a warehouse and a storehouse, with modern equipment, were added to the establishment. In addition to a commodious room for handling the edge-tools the warehouse contained a general and a private office. To the rear of the warehouse, a storehouse, forty feet square, has been built in which goods are stored, ready for shipment.

MOLT BROTHERS

The second privilege on Dorothy Brook was originally utilized by Chester Hastings on wood-work. After him H. H. Ward operated a grist-mill here. It then passed into the hands of G. C. Molt, the patentee of the celebrated indigo blue dye. Later, Jerome Marble, of Worcester, became a partner with Mr. Molt and, after Mr. Marble's retirement, L. L. Whitney became Mr. Molt's partner. After the death of Mr. G. C. Molt, Mr. Whitney and the sons of Mr. Molt constituted the firm. In 1896, L. L. Whitney retired, and the business was continued by A. C., Herman J., and William Molt. The Molt Brothers also did work in scouring, carding, picking and dyeing wool.

Formerly at this location, Dr. Heywood of Worcester and the Waits of Millbury maintained a grindstone ready to operate in order to hold their rights in the water privilege.

BENJAMIN O. PAINE

Originally a saw-mill occupied the third privilege on this stream. On this location at an early date Wilcox & Tuft made excelsior for mattresses. Afterward a grist-mill was maintained by Mr. Goodell, and after him by Mr. Marble. Later Jabez Ellis used the building as a carpenter-shop. After him, it was occupied by James E. Taylor, agent for the Ohio Mowing-Machine Co., who assembled the parts of mowing machines here. The privilege was later used by Peter Simpson as a flock-mill and after his occupancy W. A. Farnsworth used the building for carding and scouring wool, and for picking shoddy. The building was later destroyed by fire, and the dam was washed away. Nov. 10, 1905, Benjamin O. Paine, who was formerly located at Bramanville, bought the privilege, rebuilt the dam, moved a large storehouse on the site of the old mill, and equipped the place for the manufacture of edge tools. He also installed a steam plant to supplement the water power, which failed occasionally in dry seasons. In 1912, electricity took the place of steam.

CHAPTER XX

INDUSTRIES NOT AT A WATER PRIVILEGE

WIRE MAKING

Charles G. Washburn, in his work entitled "Manufacturing and Mechanical Industries of Worcester," states that, in 1831, Ichabod Washburn whose inventions have revolutionized the manufacture of wire products, began the manufacture of wire in an old woolen factory at Northville, Worcester. In company with Mr. Washburn at that time was Benjamin Goddard. It has been ascertained, however, that previous to this, on a road leading from the Old Common to Auburn and in a blacksmith shop, then belonging to Elias Richardson, Ichabod Washburn experimented in wire making and it was no doubt his first attempt in this line of manufacture. The foundation outline of this old shop can be seen today on the right hand side of the road leading from the Old Common to Auburn, near the Auburn line. From Ichabod Washburn himself we learn the process that was first used and the improvement that he made. The work was previously done by using self-acting pincers, drawing out about a foot of wire, then passing back and drawing another foot. With this crude machine a man could draw about fifty pounds of wire in a day. In place of this process, Mr. Washburn substituted a wire-block which was used by drawing a coarse wire through a steel plate, having a hole with less diameter than that of the rod, thus stretching the wire. We are unable to learn the exact nature of Mr. Washburn's experiments at the old smithy, but the work put forth, along with that of many other early toilers, stimulated efforts that resulted in improved processes of manufacture. Thus we may say that in Millbury began that development in the process of wire-making which has resulted in the development of the American Steel and Wire Corporation, founded by Mr. Washburn, and the greatest in the world.

HAND LOOMS

One industry, long past away, that had its day in Millbury was carpet making on the old hand-loom. In 1832, Francis McCracken, father of George W. McCracken, operated eight of these hand-loom in the old building first used as a house of worship in the North Parish of Sutton, after its removal to make way for a more imposing structure. These looms were about six feet square and were heavily constructed. Since the Old Common was not a place devoted to much business, Mr. McCracken must have had a monopoly in noise with the clattering and thundering of these giant looms of early days. One of the old machines ready for operation, though probably not one of those used in Millbury, may be seen at the museum of the Worcester Society of Antiquity.

When broadcloth was being manufactured in Millbury, and when machines were installed in some of the mills for its production, Mr. McCracken was employed in setting up the machinery.

POTASH

An early industry in Millbury was potash making. England then offered a good market for the commodity and the early settlers had plenty of material for furnishing the product. On the farm now owned by G. Burton Stowe, at West Millbury, the site of one of the old potash works can still be seen. The place is located on the shore of Ramshorn Pond, once a farm originally settled by Stephen Small.

On the farm formerly occupied by Rufus Carter at the northern end of the Old Common, potash was formerly made. At the corner of Elmwood and Beach Streets there are still evidences of other potash works and the grass grows greener where the potash was once left on the ground. In fact, it was not an uncommon task for the early New England farmers to spend part of the year in the manufacture of this product both for home use and for shipping away for it was very remunerative at that time.

TOBACCO RAISING

An attempt at tobacco raising was made by John Hovey on the plot of meadow land north of West Main street and extending from the residence of Henry F. Hobart to the Blackstone River. Tobacco was successfully raised by Mr. Hovey on the Waters farm, dried in a barn now standing on Waters Street, near Grove, and made into cigars in the Arcade building.

BRASS WORKS

When Thomas Blanchard was busy in his shop at West Millbury, Asa Kenney had a small brass foundry opposite, in which, years before, he had started the first brass foundry in central Massachusetts. After the brass foundry of Asa Kenney had closed up, Hiram, his son, erected a small building, and developed quite an industry in brass work, supplying gun-shops and other manufactories. He afterward closed out the work in brass and engaged in cabinet making and wood-work.

CURRYING

At West Millbury, in 1854, and for some years later, T. W. Childs and also John G. Wood were engaged in the currying business.

TILE MAKING

In the West Village there were formerly two brick yards, both of which are now discontinued. One of these stood on the road which runs toward the house of Patrick McGrath and, in addition to brick of the common size, the old-time tiles such as were used by our fathers for the flooring and for the side-walls of fire-places were made. Two of these old tiles, which are in the possession of John C. Crane, measure seven and one-half inches square and two inches thick. They are in a good state of preservation and constitute a reminder of days long since past. An immense brick, equal in size to four common ones, was taken from an old house at West Millbury and was doubtless made at this yard.

CARRIAGE MAKING

Among the former industries of the town, was the carriage manufactory of S. R. Parker & Co., in which for a time a considerable business was done. The Parker building, now owned by The Millbury Mills Company, was erected about 1858. The Parkers also had a blacksmith shop connected for their iron work. During 1888, nearly one hundred carriages and wagons of superior workmanship were made here, and many of these are still in use. The name of "Parker" on a carriage was a guarantee of its strength and durability.

SHUTTLE-EYES AND THREAD-COMPRESSORS

At his home on the road running from the Old Common to Tainter Hill, Moses D. Garfield, from 1864 until his death, manufactured the shuttle-eye which he invented, having a monopoly in its production. To one who has witnessed Mr. Garfield at his labor and has seen him preparing the substance and baking the product, it seemed marvelous that such a small thing should require such painstaking care and judgment in its production.

For many years, in addition to the manufacture of shuttle-eyes, Mr. Garfield made, also, thread-compressors of the same material that he used in the manufacture of shuttle-eyes. When finished, these rival steel in hardness and smoothness. Great accuracy is required in making the holes in these compressors since the sizes vary only one-thousandth of an inch. Not only in this country are these used but they have found their way abroad.

Thread guides were also made and these were used widely.

The industry is continued by Miss Elizabeth M., daughter of Moses D. Garfield.

Charles H. Marble, son of the late Henry Marble, manufactures porcelain shuttle-eyes and thread-guides for textile work. He resides in the house formerly occupied by Dr. Amasa Braman at the Old Common and in a shop at this place conducts his business. He was formerly employed by the late Moses D. Garfield in the same industry. This business and that carried on by Miss Garfield are the only establishments of the kind in the country and the processes which they employ are of great value. (See independent sketch of Moses D. Garfield.)

MILLBURY FOUNDRY COMPANY

This company was begun by Bradway Felton & Co. and later passed to John Martin, who was succeeded by Martin and Sweetser. The business was located for a time on the Armory site on South Main Street, but later it was moved to the southwest corner of Waters Street, opposite the present location of the Millbury Machine Co's works. Afterward, John Martin and Winthrop R. Cunningham were in partnership. Then Mr. Cunningham conducted the business alone, but later sold one-half interest to Mr. Martin. Mr. Cunningham afterward retired and left Mr. Martin in full possession. Mr. Martin was succeeded by Mr. Colvin, but the business again passed to Mr. Martin, who sold it to H. T. Merriam in 1886. Mr. Merriam re-located the foundry near the Boston and Albany R. R. tracks, on the site now occupied by the Millbury Steel Foundry. He manufactured wrought iron work, bridges, iron fronts, and many kinds of structural iron work. He also erected some of the buildings now occupied by the Millbury Steel Foundry Company. Mr. Merriam was succeeded by the Oakley Foundry Company which carried on iron and steel work for some time. The works are now in possession of the Millbury Steel Foundry.

MILLBURY STEEL FOUNDRY COMPANY

The Millbury Steel Foundry Company was incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts, Aug. 31, 1908, as the "Oakley Steel Foundry Company." July 1, 1910, the name of the company was changed to "The Millbury Steel Foundry Company." It is capitalized at fifty thousand dollars. Seventy persons are employed. The plant was changed so that electric power is used for operating, and fuel oil for melting. The company manufactures crucible steel and monel metal castings, which are claimed to be equal to machine steel forgings, because of proper annealing by a Rockwell annealing furnace. This develops the molecular structure of the metal and makes it homogeneous. This product has shown a tensile strength of seventy-five thousand pounds per square inch, an elastic limit of thirty-eight thousand pounds per square inch, and a reduction in area of forty per cent. All the company's castings are made under the supervision of an experienced metallurgist.

Monel metal is a natural alloy of nickel and copper, composed approximately of sixty-eight per cent nickel, thirty per cent copper and the remainder iron. This wonderful metal is as strong as steel and non-susceptible to the action of sulphuric acid, muriatic acid or salt water. Besides being non-corrosive and rust proof, it will take a high polish and when buffed resembles nickel plate. It will not peel and tarnish, but always retains its bright lustre.

This company makes castings in carbon steel, nickel steel, nickel chrome, and nickel vanadium. The following are the present officers of the company: President, Frederick W. Moore, Millbury; vice president, Henry H. Merriam, Worcester; general manager, William W. Brierly, Millbury.

MILLBURY MILLS (UXBRIDGE WORSTED COMPANY)

In 1907, this company began the manufacture of worsted goods at West Millbury in the Edwin Hoyle Mill, operating eighteen looms. A short time afterward it commenced manufacturing the same kind of goods in the Armsby laundry building at Millbury Centre and, in the spring of 1912, the West Millbury business was removed to this building. In the summer of 1912, the company purchased the old Parker carriage shop, remodeling and repairing it. Here the spinning and some of the weaving is done and, although the company formerly bought its yarn, it now spins all that it uses.

At the beginning, the company employed thirty-eight; but now over one hundred hands are engaged in the business. This company has the honor of being the first in town to use electricity for power. Fifty-eight looms are now in operation, besides other machinery, and from eight the power used has now increased to one hundred and thirty horse-power. C. A. Root, of Uxbridge, is proprietor, and Augustus C. Neff is the local superintendent.

CHARLES BUCK EDGE TOOL COMPANY

Charles Buck, the originator of this company, started in business for himself, in 1873, having separated from the firm of Buck Brothers, of which he had been a member with the late Richard T. Buck. The company manufactures chisels, gouges, plane irons, reamers, punches, and other edge tools. Its product is of great merit and has been awarded medals and diplomas for excellence at the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, in 1876, and at The World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago, in 1893. The works are located on the Grafton Road.

This company enjoys the continued patronage of discriminating dealers in edge tools. The officers in 1914 were, president, James C. Ryder, and treasurer, Robert T. Pollock. In 1915, the works were purchased by W. L. Proctor, proprietor of Buck Bros. Edge Tool Works.

H. W. HAKES MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Prominent among the industries of Millbury is The H. W. Hakes Manufacturing Company. In 1879, this business was started by H. W. Hakes in a shop of C. D. Morse & Co., which was destroyed by fire in 1881. Mr. Hakes then erected a small structure to the south of that location on the site of the present establishment, where the business was conducted for ten years under his own name. In 1891, the concern became "The H. W. Hakes Manufacturing Company." In 1900, a building two stories high, one hundred forty feet long, and forty feet wide was erected. In 1909, under one management, the business of the J. H. Williams Co. was added to that of the H. W. Hakes Manufacturing Company and an addition was built to the main structure, one hundred twenty feet long, forty-five feet wide, and two stories high. The Hakes Manufacturing Company manufactures wire heddle frames and mill wire goods. It gives constant employment to thirty men at good wages. The J. H. Williams Company manufactures shuttles for all kinds of looms, as well as the German and native styles of wire heddles for plain and fancy weaving. The buildings are equipped with the latest improved machinery and the product of these companies is widely used. The officers of the Hakes Manufacturing Company are: Edwin L. Watson, president; Walter C. Watson, secretary and treasurer; and Hudson W. Hakes, manager. Mr. Hakes is also vice president and manager of the J. S. Williams Company.

The pay-roll of this establishment is the second largest in town.

SAMUEL E. HULL COMPANY

Near the junction of Canal and Elm streets is located the warehouse of the Samuel E. Hull Co., which deals in cotton and cotton waste. This business was established by J. H. Merry and next passed into the hands of Briggs & Co. They were followed, in 1883, by Samuel E. Hull who, beside carrying on the business here, also conducted for years an extensive business in wool and wool waste in Worcester, where the office for both departments is now located. Since Mr. Hull's death in 1911, both places have been continued by the sons, Edward F. and Harry C. Hull.

WATER WORKS

In 1888, a committee on water-works was chosen by the town and in its report it made the following recommendation: "First,—The Committee believes that the best interests of our town demand a public water supply, and recommends that this enterprise be undertaken at no distant time. Second,—We recommend the adoption of the plan referred to in the engineer's report as the Local Pumping Plan, so far as the construction of a well near the Boston and Albany Railroad, and the necessary pumping station, the laying of mains in our streets, with the necessary gates, hydrants, etc., and the building of the necessary reservoir upon Burbank Hill." This report of the committee was signed by John Gegenheimer, Levi L. Whitney, Irving B. Sayles, and Dr. George C. Webber. Percy M. Blake was employed to make a survey and the following places were examined,—Singletary Pond and its watershed, Ramshorn Pond and Brook, Hull Brook, Garfield Pond at the Old Common, Hathaway Brook, the springs east of the Lovell place in the southerly part of the town, the springs adjoining the branch of the Boston and Albany R. R., the water-shed above these springs including the Lincoln meadow and the adjoining watershed, Dorothy Pond, and, finally, the securing of a supply from the city of Worcester.

The following letter was received from the State Board of Health in regard to the location finally accepted:—

“Office of State Board of Health.
13 Beacon Street,
Boston, July, 1888.

“TO GEORGE F. CHASE, Chairman of Selectmen, Millbury, Mass.

Dear Sir—

“After careful examination of the different sources of water supply for the town of Millbury, the State Board of Health finds that the site selected for a ground water supply has advantages which make it the most appropriate source for the town.

“Analysis of water from the flowing well showed it to be very soft and of excellent quality. By order of the Board,

(signed) Samuel W. Abbott, Secretary.”

After the report of Mr. Blake and the report of the water committee to the town the subject seems to have been dropped, and the interest had apparently died out. Some time later, however, Henry W. Aiken, Esq., took steps to renew the matter and a company was incorporated including with him Charles D. Morse, Samuel E. Hull, Damien Ducharme, Samuel N. Rogers and George F. Chase.

The success of the company was due to the knowledge, enthusiasm, vision, and financial judgment of J. Herbert Shedd, hydraulic expert. He assisted the members of the corporation in planning and financing the enterprise and inspired their confidence in the undertaking, for he saw in his own mind the completed system before a start was made. With them he took up the matter and carried it through, establishing the well and pumping station beside the B. & A. R. R. tracks on the old road to Worcester.

The charter of the Millbury Water Co. was granted by the Legislature, Apr. 19, 1893, to Charles D. Morse, Henry W. Aiken, Esq., Samuel N. Rogers, Samuel E. Hull, Damien Ducharme, and George F. Chase. After a long and wearisome struggle, this company succeeded in opening its works to the public, Nov. 16, 1895, when the system was put to a public test in town hall square, amid the rejoicing of those who had labored long and hard to secure an adequate supply of water. The annals of the town show that much opposition was shown the enterprise until the final result was achieved. At the time of the opening, eleven miles of pipe, six to sixteen inches in diameter, had been laid, sixty-five gates were put in, and sixty-three hydrants set up, with specifications for forty-seven extra hydrants. The capacity of the reservoir on Burbank Hill is one million, five hundred thousand gallons.

The first officers and builders of the Millbury Water Co's works were the following:—J. Herbert Shedd, president, S. E. Hull, Geo. F. Chase, Herbert A. Ryan, treasurer, Lewis A. Clark, Sylvester M. Snow, J. William Patston, H. N. Wilson. The consulting engineer was J. Herbert Shedd. The engineers were Shedd & Sarle of Worcester, the mechanical engineer was Sylvester M. Snow, the architect was J. William Patston, the contractors were the Worcester Engineering Company, which included E. W. Shedd, president, George G. Hunt, secretary, and George H. Sawin. The sub-contractors were: for pipe laying, Lucian A. Taylor; for pumping station, Jas. S. Miles & Sons, Worcester; for reservoir roof, Geo. F. Chase; for collecting well, Timothy Lyons, Leicester.

The present officers of the company are: President, Lucian A. Taylor; clerk and treasurer, Herbert A. Ryan; directors, Lucian A. Taylor, Matthew J. Whittall, Alfred Thomas, Harry C. Hull, and Herbert A. Ryan; superintendent, L. Clarence Rice.

Since its establishment, additional sources for water have been added from nearby land.

Ephraim Goulding, or "Squire Goulding," was noted for having well-nigh any article that could possibly be called for among his various commodities. A stranger came along one day and said to him, after looking over the place, "I see that you have almost everything anyone needs, but I think I can tell of one thing you haven't got, and that is a second-hand pulpit." "My dear sir," said the "Squire," "Please come up stairs," leading the way and sure enough, before the astonished visitor, there stood an old pulpit.

PROTECTIVE UNION STORES.

A Protective Union store flourished here, as in many other towns, sixty years ago. It was located on South Main street, near the crossing of the Providence & Worcester R. R. and was in charge of Charles Hitchcock. A little pamphlet then issued had on its cover the following:—"Constitution of The New England Protective Union, and By-Laws of Millbury Division No. 290, State of Massachusetts—Instituted Sept. 2, 1851." Another of these stores was located at Bramanville on the site now occupied by the general store of Alvan J. Winter.

CHAPTER XXII

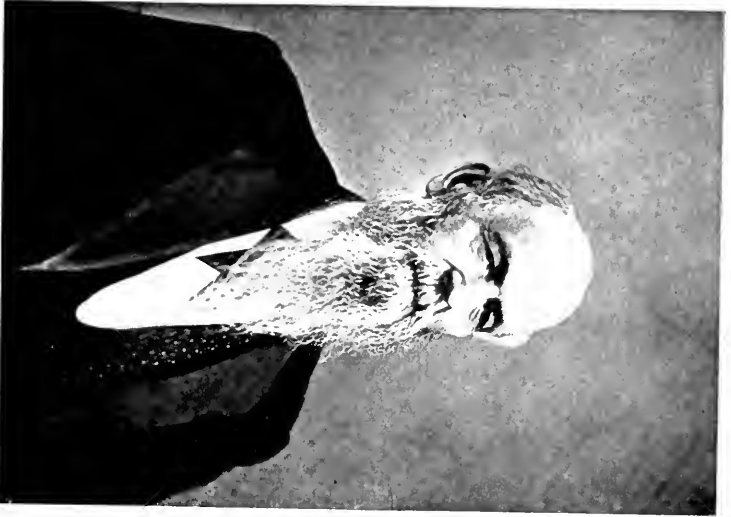

BANKS

THE MILLBURY BANK

In 1825, it seemed most desirable that the town have a banking institution. Accordingly, through the efforts and influence of a number of prominent public-spirited citizens, "The Millbury Bank" was established by an act to incorporate the president, directors, and company of the Millbury Bank. Having been passed by the Legislature, this act was approved in June, 1825, by Governor Lincoln.

Seventy-three persons subscribed to the capital stock of $100,000 and on August 11, 1825, the first meeting of the stock holders was held at the home of Simon Farnsworth, Jr. Asa Waters was chosen moderator and Dr. William W. Benedict clerk of the meeting. The directors elected were Asa Waters, Simon Farnsworth, Jr., Gen. Caleb Burbank, Dr. Wm. W. Benedict, Elijah Waters, Jonas L. Sibley, of Sutton, Samuel Wood, of Grafton, Sylvanus Holbrook, of Northbridge, and Austin Denny, of Worcester. The directors were instructed to make all necessary arrangements for putting the bank in operation.

At a subsequent meeting held on the first Monday in October, 1825, Hervey Hartshorn, of Sutton, was chosen as a director and Stephen Blanchard was made clerk of the corporation. Asa Waters was chosen president; Louis Mills, cashier; and Austin Denny, solicitor. The banking room was established in the Farnsworth block. In those days the annual meetings were so largely attended that it was necessary to adjourn to some hall for the transaction of business. This institution from the start filled an important place as an aid to the business men of the community.

Simon Farnsworth, Jr., was chosen president in October, 1829, and he served for ten years. Col. Asa H. Waters was chosen president in 1840 serving for three years. R. D. Chapman succeeded Louis Mills as cashier, in 1839. Jonathan Cary became cashier, in 1843; John Printess, in 1844; Joseph S. Farnum in 1852; and David Atwood in 1853, serving until 1872.

ROBBERY

On the night of Aug. 15, 1843, a package of money, containing about twenty-two thousand dollars, in some mysterious way disappeared from the vault of the bank, for when the cashier opened the safe on the following morning he looked in vain for the amount in the place in which he had left it on the previous evening, but in its place there was a bundle of brown paper resembling a package of money. The package lost came from the Suffolk Bank of Boston at which the money of the Millbury Bank was redeemed at the time. As soon as the loss was discovered, the bank officials were notified. The cashier, R. B. Chapman, had been confined to his home for several days by illness and another had been working in his place. Mr. Chapman had been in communication with his substitute, so that he had known of the arrival of the package of money from Boston, but he had not had the handling of it on the night before. Consequently, he was not sure that the exchange had been made after its arrival in Millbury. He at once sent for his substitute who was positive that the package was not the same as that which he had placed in the vault the night previous. As the bank in Boston would be able to give the Millbury bank a full description of the bills contained in the package there would be sufficient incentive for those who had taken the valuable package to make an exchange of the bills at once. Col. Asa H. Waters, a wide-awake member of the board of directors, looked into the affairs of the men connected with the bank to find out whether by any chance some trusted official could have had a hand in the removal of the money.

There was more than one key to the bank, but there was supposed to be only one to the vault, so it did not seem possible that the safe could have been opened, the money removed, the safe locked again and the robbers vanish into the night, leaving no trace behind them, without the aid of some confederate who had supplied a key. The directors decided that any man who had the audacity to plan so bold a robbery would know that the longer he held the money in his possession, the more difficult it would be to get rid of it. Detectives were sent out from an agency in Boston which made a special line of bank work and it was learned that a young, well-dressed man had passed a considerable amount of the Millbury bills in Leicester and Spencer. He was unknown to any of those who had conversed with him and his one distinguishing feature was colored glasses, supposed to be worn to protect weak eyes. The detective at once concluded that his stronghold was to seek some young man in Millbury who was known to have unusually strong eyes and who would be most easily disguised by so simple a device as colored glasses. Again, the man with the colored glasses was heard of with his face pointing to New York. He had repeatedly passed some of the stolen money, but in none of the places had he been suspected for the reasons, first, that the news of the robbery had not been spread abroad and, secondly, that the ways of the young stranger were pleasing and refined. With all this in his favor it was weeks before the right man was discovered.

The first arrest for the robbery was made at Millbury Center. The detectives had been drawing in their nets until one evening when two widely known young men were arrested at the American Temperance house, a famous hostelry of those times, (the Sweetser house on Elm Street) and not far from the Savings Bank. One of these was employed in a woolen mill which stood where the West End Thread Co's works are located. One of the men was entirely innocent, and was later released. Our venerable fellow citizen, Silas Dunton, guarded one of the prisoners over that night, when much excitement was aroused through the town. The arrest of this young man, detained under the charge of Mr. Dunton, had given the bank people a further clue to work upon, for they concluded that, if this young man would deprive the bank of some of its cash, it was quite likely that his cousin, who worked in the mill with him, would bear watching.

These men had as good a driving horse as there was in this section at the time, and it was stabled in a small barn that stood at the north end of the present thread mill but, although the officers searched this barn many times in an effort to locate some of the money, nothing was found. At this time, however, a man named Frank Darling was employed by Woodward & Gorton as one of the outside men about the mill. His duties, which were varied, sometimes took him into the barn, and one night, after the first arrest in connection with the bank robbery, he had occasion to go there late at night. As he was turning to leave the building his attention was attracted by a place in the side of the hay mow, for it appeared as if the hay had been pulled out for some reason and then put back. Upon investigating he discovered a hole there which contained more money than he had ever seen before in all his life.

Wild with the delirium which money often causes in those who have never had the possession of large sums, for a few moments he was tempted strongly, but he went to his little home nearby and told his faithful wife of the immense pile of money that he had found. He told her that he was going to bring it into the house before some other man got it and that later they would see what would be done with it. She was a good New England woman whose heart was in the right place. She had retired for the night and, rising from her bed, with snapping eyes she pointed her finger at her tempted spouse and said to him, "Frank Darling, if you ever bring one cent of that money into this house, I go out of it and I stay out of it. That money must belong to the bank, and we have not even the right to place our hands on it until the men to whom it belongs have been notified. Don't you come near me again until you have gone down to the village and told Colonel Waters about it." Darling argued that it was too late to disturb Colonel Waters, but the wife replied, "If you are too timid to do it yourself, I will go and I will tell him it is not safe a minute in your hands."

So Darling walked down to the village, roused Colonel Waters, and told him of the discovery. The Colonel was very willing to go to the rescue of the bank's funds, so he accompanied Darling to the barn where a good part of the money was found, but before removing it to his home Colonel Waters examined the money and found that most of it had been exchanged, so that he had no lawful right to take it away, because of his inability to prove the bank's right to it, and he inadvertently expressed himself to this effect in the presence of Darling. He made up his mind, however, that there was no moral doubt that the money all belonged to the bank, as some of the bills were of the kinds known to have been exchanged for those stolen, so he took the funds to his home and early in the morning informed the other officials. Employment was found for Darling far from Millbury and all his cost of moving was paid.

Three other men, all of the same name as the one arrested, were brought before Justice Green at Millbury on the first of September and, after an examination occupying part of two days, they were bound over to appear at the next term of the criminal court in Worcester. About three thousand dollars were found on the prisoners when arrested.

Hiram Kenney who had a small brass foundry at West Millbury was well acquainted with all three of the robbers and the principal one, for whom he often did work in brass, was a favorite with him. This man once wanted some keys made in brass, a request which Mr. Kenney thought strange, as the man was a machinist himself, but the desire was explained to his satisfaction, so that Mr. Kenney did the work required. As a result of this work Mr. Kenney died thinking that he had innocently furnished the key by which the Millbury bank had been robbed, and that perhaps he had furnished keys to other safes.

The three men were convicted of the robbery of the bank and they served various terms of imprisonment. One of them, however, afterwards reformed and became a highly respected citizen and a leading business man of the county.

Simon Farnsworth, Jr., became president of the bank for a second time, in 1843, and served sixteen years, declining to serve longer. He was succeeded by Jonathan Warren of Grafton, in 1860, who had been a director since 1838. On Dec. 15, 1863, he resigned and was succeeded by the Hon. Hosea Crane of Millbury, who had been a director since 1856.

MILLBURY NATIONAL BANK.

In 1864, the Millbury Bank came to a close when it was authorized by the stockholders and empowered by the directors to change and convert the Millbury Bank into the Millbury National Bank in order that the Millbury Bank and the Stockholders might avail themselves of the advantages presented by the General Banking Law passed by Congress, June 3, 1864, entitled "An Act to provide a National currency and provide for the Circulation and Redemption thereof, etc." The Articles of Association were adopted Oct. 25, 1864. The Capital remained the same, $100,000. The number of stockholders was ninety-three. The directors were Hon. Hosea Crane, John C. Bacon, Horace S. Warren, John G. Wood, Chas. D. Morse, Thos. J. Harrington. Mr. Crane continued as president and David Atwood as cashier. The new Bank was authorized by the comptroller of the currency to commence business Nov. 6 and the bank commissioners of Massachusetts authorized the change on Nov. 17, but the bank did not actually commence business as a national bank until Dec. 1, 1864.

On Dec. 9, 1864, the capital stock was increased to $150,000 and, in 1872, it was again increased to $200,000 with a surplus of $35,000. In 1875, the bank had a surplus of $40,000. Substantial dividends were always paid to the stockholders and the sound judgment and business sagacity of the officers and directors soon put the Millbury National Bank among the foremost banking institutions in the state.

The Hon. Hosea Crane who served as president for sixteen years died, in 1879, and was succeeded by Charles D. Morse. Frank C. Miles succeeded David Atwood as cashier and Amos Armsby entered the bank as a clerk, in 1872. Mr. Armsby was elected cashier, in 1875. Horace S. Warren of Grafton was chosen president, in 1896, and Henry T. Maxwell was made cashier in 1897.

In 1881, after occupying the old quarters for more than a half century, the Bank was moved to the Millbury Savings Bank building nearly opposite, on Elm Street, with the National Bank occupying one side of the big banking room and the Savings Bank the other. In 1904, to conform with the law requiring national and savings banks to be entirely separate from each other, extensive improvements were made in the bank building. A glass partition was put through the center of the main floor, new fire and burglar proof vaults were built, steel safe deposit boxes were installed, and a spacious directors' room was added in the rear.

In 1899, the Hon. Samuel E. Hull became president and served until his death, in 1911. He was succeeded by Henry W. Aiken, Esq. Arthur W. Snow, who entered the bank as a bookkeeper, was cashier from 1909 to 1911. In December, 1911, he was succeeded by Leon Rice Partridge of Worcester. In 1915, Mr. Partridge was succeeded by R. W. Brigham.

The capital stock has been reduced to $100,000 and again to $50,000.

Since 1864, the following gentlemen, in addition to those previously named, served on the board of directors: William H. Harrington, 1865; David Atwood, 1868; John Rhodes, 1872; Peter Simpson, 1872; L. L. Whitney, Chas. D. Morse, 1879; Bion B. Howard, 1879; F. E. Lancaster, 1882; the Hon. Irving B. Sayles, 1882; Amos Armsby, 1883; D. N. Gibbs, of Grafton, 1889; the Hon. Samuel E. Hull, 1896; Augustus S. Winter, 1897; Leander F. Herrick, 1897; Frank E. Powers, 1897; Edward F. Rice, 1907; Henry W. Aiken, Esq., 1909; Frank A. Drury, of Worcester, 1910; Edwin W. Jenkins, of Worcester, 1911; Edward F. Hull, 1912; Alvan J. Winter, 1913.

On May 20, 1913, the bank issued the following statement of condition:

The bank is a sound financial institution and stands among the best in the state as the statement given above shows. By judicious management on the part of its officers and directors the stock has paid better returns than at any time in its history. With modern methods of doing business and uniform courtesy extended to all its patrons, this institution commands the attention and respect of Millbury and the neighboring towns along the valley.

The bank has now gone into the Federal Reserve Fund.

MILLBURY SAVINGS BANK

The Millbury Savings Bank was incorporated April 10, 1854. The first meeting was held in the officers' room of the Millbury Bank, May 27, of that year, at which Jonathan A. Pope was chosen chairman and David Atwood, secretary. The first permanent officers, elected May 31, 1854, were Jonathan A. Pope, president; Simon Farnsworth, C. R. Miles, J. A. Hovey, and E. W. Goffe, vice-presidents; David Atwood, secretary; and John E. Bacon, Asa H. Waters, Benjamin Flagg, Simon Dudley, Amasa Wood, Mowry Farnum, Thomas H. Witherby, D. B. Sibley, Hosea Crane, Asa Woodbury, L. I. Woodbury, Seth Hartwell, Harvey Dodge, Jonathan Warren, Ezekiel Saunders, and I. S. Farnum, trustees.

Books for deposit were first opened June 17, 1854. A few days later, June 28, David Atwood was chosen to be the first treasurer. His bond was placed at $1,500.00. Two years later, July 12, 1856, the treasurer was allowed fifty dollars a year for salary.

On July 9, 1859, regular semi-annual dividends were declared of two and one-half per cent and twenty-five per cent of the dividend was paid in addition. In the next year, May 25, 1860, a six per cent dividend for the year was paid. At that time the by-laws were changed. On July 9, 1864, an extra dividend of twenty-five per cent of the dividend declared was voted. In the next year, July 6, 1869, an extra dividend of forty per cent of the regular dividend was declared with the provision that it should be fifty per cent if the reserved profits should warrant it. On Dec. 29, 1876, the semi-annual dividend was reduced to two and one-half per cent.

In 1881, the bank built and moved into the present bank block, providing better accommodations for the bank and better safe and vault security for its funds. The two banks, savings and national, continued in operation as separate institutions, but in the same rooms until April 1, 1904. At this time a partition, largely of glass, was put in which divided the banking rooms into two separate banking establishments. A double vault was built with safety deposit boxes on the national bank side. An electric alarm was installed which gives warning of any attempt to molest the safe. The savings bank occupies the upper, or westerly, side of the banking rooms and the national bank occupies the lower, or easterly side.

On July 3, 1879, the semi-annual dividend of the bank was made two per cent and in all its career it has never paid less than this rate on its deposits. Sums are received from twenty-five cents up, but the smallest amount that can draw interest is three dollars and the largest deposit that can draw interest is sixteen hundred dollars. This may increase, however, until it becomes two thousand dollars. A new set of by-laws was adopted May 25, 1906.

The following is a list of the presidents of the bank with the dates of their election:

Jonathan A. Pope	May 31, 1854
C. R. Miles	June 9, 1856
Thomas Harrington	May 30, 1865
Horace Armsby	March 29, 1878
William R. Hill	May 2, 1879
Levi L. Whitney	March 31, 1888
Ira N. Goddard	April 2, 1897
George J. Dudley	April, 1914

The following is a list of the treasurers of the bank with the dates of their election:

David Atwood, June 28, 1854, resigned March 20, 1872.
F. C. Miles, March 20, 1872, resigned July 12, 1874.

David Atwood, July 12, 1874, resigned Oct. 22, 1897 (on account of ill health).

Amos Armsby, October 22, 1897, died 1906.

George J. Dudley, June 21, 1906 (declined to serve).

Irving B. Sayles, June 28, 1906, died November, 1909.

Ernest L. Smith, December 31, 1909.

The present investment committee consists of George J. Dudley, ex-officio, Henry W. Carter, Damien Ducharme, Dr. Jacob R. Lincoln, and George I. Stowe.

CHAPTER XXIII

CHURCHES

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

In the early days of New England the church, the parish, and the town were intertwined in their administrative affairs. The clergy had a legal claim on the town for support and the inhabitants were assessed for the maintenance of sanctuary privileges as much as for other expenses, although these were kept as a separate account. Accordingly, when, in 1742, the first steps were taken, which resulted seventy-one years later in the establishment of Millbury as a separate town, an effort was made to form a separate parish in Sutton (see Chapter III. p. 34), it was also the first attempt to establish the present First Congregational Church in Millbury or, as then known, the Second Congregational Church in Sutton.

A later attempt to form the new parish was successful and the following is a copy of the warrant for the first meeting in the Second, or North, Parish of Sutton:

“Worcester, ss. To Jeremiah Buckman, Jr., of Sutton in ye county of Worcester, Greeting:—You are hereby required in his majesties name to warn and give notice to ye freeholders and others, inhabitants in ye second parish, in Sutton aforesaid, qualified to vote in Town affairs, that they must meet at the house of Mr. Richard Singletary, in said Sutton, in said precinct, on Monday, the twenty-sixth day of December, instant, at nine of ye clock in ye forenoon, then and there to act on each of ye particulars expressed in above request.

(petition for meeting)

By posting a copy of the request and this warrant at such public places* in said precinct, hereof fail not and make return hereof and of your doings hearin at or before ye said twenty-six day of December instant at nine o'clock in the morning. Given under my hand and seal at Oxford, this Eighth Day of December A. D., 1743, Richard Moore, Justice of the Peace.”

*It was posted at the mill door of John Singletary.

Accordingly, on the twenty-sixth day of December, 1743, as we learn from the church records, the first meeting of the parish was held at the house of Richard Singletary, which was situated at the outlet of "Crooked Pond," now called Singletary Lake. The moderator was Capt. Timothy Carter, and Robert Goddard was the clerk. The parish continued to hold meetings at this house until May, 1745, and religious services also were held here for some time. On April 29, the Rev. Matthew Bridge was called to the pastorate but he declined to accept. The church next called the Rev. Josiah Dunster, who also refused. A third call was extended to the Rev. James Wellman, and he accepted the charge. The church was organized Dec. 10, 1747, and adopted the Cambridge platform. Ruling elders were chosen at the time but the church has always been continued under the Congregational system. The following named persons were dismissed from the First Church in Sutton to form this Second Congregational Church of Sutton, now Millbury.

The first meeting-house of the Second, or North, Parish was situated on the Old Common and it was erected in 1744. One account stated that "it stood about two rodes north-east of a large elm tree." The building had "no steeple, and in form was like a barn." In fact the old structure was given the name of "The Lord's Barn." It was forty feet long and thirty-five feet wide. After having been in use for nearly sixty years this first building was moved across the road four or five rods and, after it ceased to be used for religious purposes, it was used in connection with a public house. Herewith we give a floor-plan of this structure. (See opposite page.)

The present church building, which was begun in 1802, was first situated on the eastern side of the present road running on the eastern side of the Old Common. The building faced the Old Common but was not on it as the bounds run at present. It stood between the present corner house (now occupied by Mr. Marble) and the next house to the north.

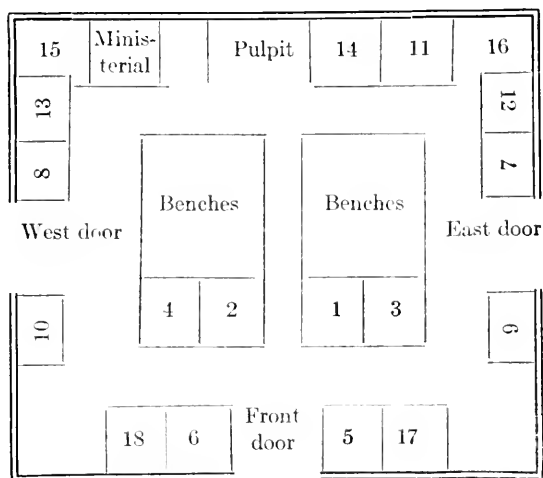

The building was dedicated Nov. 27, 1804. On June 17, 1828, the first meeting of "The Harmony Conference," now known as "The Worcester South Association of Congregational Churches," was held here. Some time after the year 1827, it was proposed that the new building be removed to Bramanville and this question was afterward discussed at parish meetings. As opinions were divergent, the decision was finally left to a board of referees, composed of members from other churches, and this board decided that it would be best to move the edifice. The parish accepted the report to move and the building was accordingly taken down at the Old Common, in 1835, GROUND PLAN OF THE CHURCH BUILT IN 1747.

“The Lord’s Barn.”

The above is a pretty exact delineation of the ground floor of the first church edifice erected within the limits of the town, kindly furnished by the late Dr. Spaulding of Bramanville. The pews are numbered in the plan as in the church, and we give below the names of the first owners and cost of the ground—for each individual bought the ground and then built his own pew. The cost is in pounds and shillings.

The pulpit was high, and had a large sounding-board over it. The central portion was filled with benches. The galleries were reached by stairways at the front corners.

moved in pieces, and again erected on its present site at Bramanville. It was rededicated Jan. 14, 1836.

The following quotation, in the handwriting of Asa Waters, 2d, was taken from a paper in the possession of Miss Mary Goodell, of Whitinsville. (No heat had been furnished in the church building previously.)

“It has been found by experience that stoves in meeting houses are very useful through (the) winter adding greatly to the Comfort and health of those who attend through the inclemency of the weather. A stove set (at) the bend of the aisle next to the wall pews to the right and left of the Pulpit having the pipes ascending to the Gallery & then taking a horizontal direction along by the Gallery to the front & then ascending out of the house, produces a degree of warmth through the house. The expense is supposed not much to exceed one hundred dollars. We the subscribers having a desire of procuring them for our meeting house, do severally engage to pay the sum affixed to our names for the purposes of defraying the expenses thereof.

Millbury, Dec. 18, 1819.”

The Rev. Mr. Goffe, who for a long time had been pastor of the church at the Old Common felt, apparently, that the removal of the building affected the spiritual interests of that section of the town adversely, for he was a subscriber to the building fund of the Union or West Congregational Church, and his son, E. W. Goffe, was at one time clerk of the Union Society.

The pastors who have served this church have been the Rev. James Wellman, ordained and installed, Oct. 7, 1747, dismissed, July 22, 1760; the Rev. Ebenezer Chaplin, ordained and installed, Nov. 14, 1764, dismissed, Mar. 22, 1792; the Rev. Joseph Goffe, ordained and installed, Sept. 10, 1794, dismissed, Dec. 9, 1830; the Rev. Osgood Herrick, ordained and installed, Dec. 9, 1830, died, Mar. 16, 1837; the Rev. Nathaniel Beach, ordained and installed Nov. 22, 1837, dismissed, May 11, 1857; the Rev. Edmund Y. Garrette, installed, Sept. 30, 1857, dismissed, Nov. 3, 1869; the Rev. George A. Putnam, installed, Apr. 11, 1872, pastor emeritus, in 1910; the Rev. William C. Martyn, installed, Nov. 16, 1911.

Among the early deacons in the church we find the names of Abel Chase, Thomas Gould, Daniel Greenwood, Ebenezer Pierce, Asa Waters, Aaron Pierce, and Jonathan Waters. The ruling elders were Daniel Greenwood, elected July 22, 1767; Amos Singletary, elected Feb. 4, 1768; Daniel Greenwood, elected January, 1776; Oliver Bond, elected Sept. 7, 1809; Elijah Waters, elected Jan. 5, 1815; Jonathan Waters, elected Feb. 12, 1829.

On the day preceding the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the church a county paper made the following comment: "The First Congregational Church which now occupies the well known edifice in 'Bramanville' has exerted a powerful influence on the community's development since its organization by a few Christian people, so many years ago. Generation after generation has grown up within it, and as the sons and daughters of the village have left for other homes, its teachings and its policy have been carried far and wide. In nothing perhaps has the Millbury parish been more fortunate than in the length of service of its pastors. Seven ministers in 150 years is a remarkable showing and one of which the church may well be proud. The average stay of a pastor has been over twenty years and the present head of the parish (the Rev. G. A. Putnam) has had a term now in its twenty-seventh year."

Deacon Elijah Waters, of West Millbury, who died, Dec. 16, 1846, at the age of seventy-three, bequeathed five thousand dollars to the First Congregational Society. He also had at the time a mortgage on the parsonage which, with the accrued interest, amounted to sixteen hundred dollars, but he gave this also to the society.

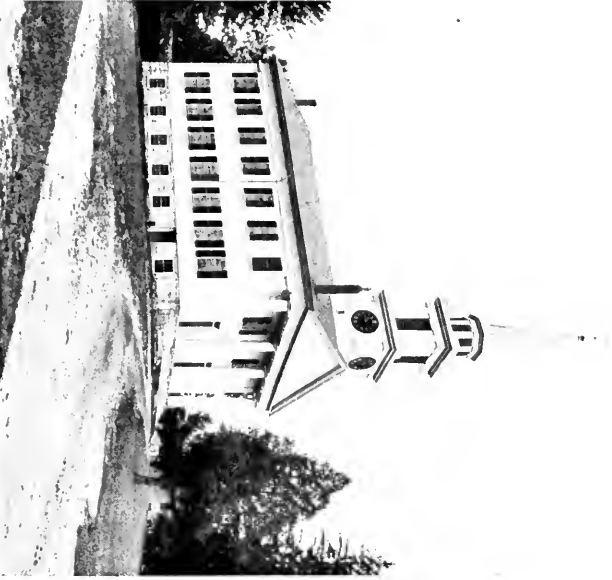

The one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization of this church was held on Thursday and Friday evenings, Sept. 9 and 10, 1897, with appropriate exercises. On the first evening from six to seven a reception was held in the church parlor, followed by a collation. At eight o'clock a public service was held in the main audience room.

On Friday evening at seven o'clock the Rev. George P. Eastman of Millbury, the Rev. John R. Thurston of Whitinsville, and the Rev. Henry A. Blake of Webster, assisted in the service. A historical sermon (which has since been printed) was delivered by the Rev. George A. Putnam, pastor of the church.

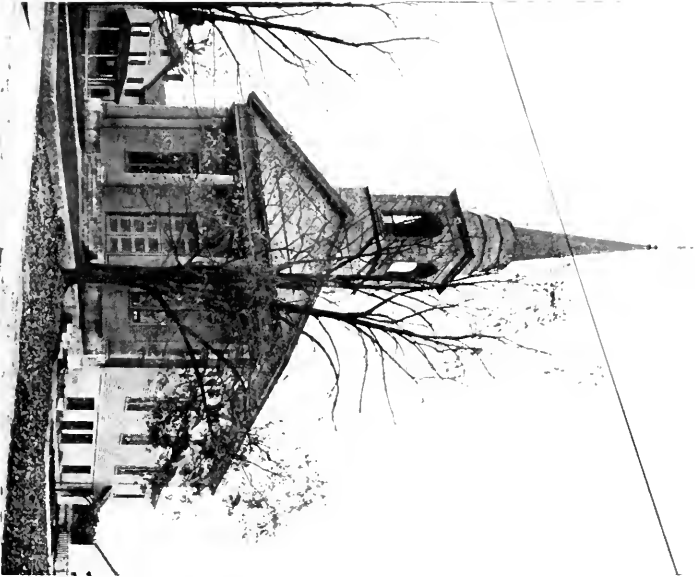

At the anniversary exercises a letter was read from a former pastor, the Rev. E. Y. Garrette, which was received with particular interest.

In 1909, the church was thoroughly renovated at a cost of three thousand dollars and, according to Mr. Putnam's statement, it was then in better condition than at any time during his pastorate which covered a period of forty years, lacking a few months, as his resignation took effect on the last Sunday in June, 1910. (See sketch of Rev. G. A. Putnam.)

The Rev. William C. Martyn, of the First Congregational Church, New Bedford, Mass., was called to fill the vacancy made by Mr. Putnam's resignation. He began his labors the first Sunday in September, 1910, and was formally installed Nov. 16, 1911. A Sunday School and the other usual church societies are regularly maintained, all working together for good. The present superintendent of the Sunday School is Mr. Frank E. Sanborn.

THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

THE SECOND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

THE SHAKERS

Previous to 1800, there existed in what is now the territory of Millbury a branch of the religious sect known as the "Shakers." Although little is known of them, Peter Whitney, who wrote the first history of the county, published in 1793, refers to them in his article on Sutton, locating them in the second parish of Sutton. A Shaker society also flourished at the time at Harvard, Mass. We find that David Dwinnel and his wife Deliverance joined this society and moved to Harvard. They had four children, none of whom, however, joined this sect.

SECOND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The Second Congregational Church is located at Millbury Center and except for the first year has maintained evangelical religious services in the present church building.

The founders exercised a scrupulous care to avoid possible dangers besetting them in the formation of the new enterprise and upon legal advice in the charter of the society there was inserted a clause, the first of its kind, we are told, admitting to membership only those who received a majority affirmative vote of the members. This gave to the body a security in the management of its affairs not possessed by others in which the voting qualifications were lax. Since every one in those days was taxed for the support of the church in some one of the different communions, the methods pursued by the charter members of the new ecclesiastical society protected them against all who might seek a vote in its affairs, only to divert the work from the purpose of the founders.

The charter given to the new religious society is dated February 10, 1827, and bears the names of Asa Waters, Elias Forbes, Joseph Torrey, Vernon Stiles, David Woodward, Calvin Barker, Simon Farnsworth, and Aaron Trask. The society thus chartered sought and secured the organization of a Presbyterian church, because they calculated on opposition which, happily, was not forthcoming.

At first the new church worshipped in a small school building on School street, though comparatively soon the present structure was erected and was dedicated, October 2, 1828, as a place of worship. In connection with the raising of the church it is worthy of note that no intoxicating liquors were served on the grounds at the time, quite an innovation for such occasions, although the custom of the day was observed by allowing those who so desired to secure grog at a nearby inn at the expense of the society.

Not until June 30, 1827, four months after the granting of the charter for the formation of the religious society, did forty members living in the Armory village (what is now known as the "Center") petition for a dismission from the First Congregational Church to form the new Presbyterian Church. On July 16 of the same year, the request was granted and, on August 23, they formed themselves into the Presbyterian Church of Millbury. The separation took place with cordial feelings on the part of the First Church.

Assembling in town, August 23, 1827, the presbytery of Newburyport met and heard the documents relative to the institution of a Presbyterian Society in Millbury, and also the petition of certain persons who wished to be organized as a Presbyterian Church. The presbytery voted to receive the petitioners under its care and the new church was started with the following members who severally signified their wish to be organized, namely: Elias Forbes, Elijah Torrey, Asa Andrews, Jonathan Grout, Elias Hull, Moses Dunton, Zadock Sibley, John F. Barton, Samuel Brown, Oliver Clapp, Joseph Hastings, Henry Goddard, Luther H. Trask, Vernon Titus, Stephen Harrington, Moses L. Morse, Henry Johnson, Francis McCracken, Mary Forbes, Annie Torrey, Vilinda Cutler, Lydia Waters, Eliza Waters, Lydia Goodell, Zoa Dunton, Rhoda Goddard, Lydia Sibley, Mary Barton, Lucy Brown, Sally Stockwell, Prudence Clapp, Mary A. Hunt, Addie B. Wright, Sarah Johnson, and Mrs. Hulda Morse. Others "who were confined by bodily indisposition" were waited on by a committee for examination and upon its report there were also admitted to membership in the church: Joanna Eaton, Lucy Eaton, Mrs. McCracken, Lucy Farnsworth, and Azuba Hastings. Elias Forbes and Joseph Torrey were elected elders and Moses L. Morse and Moses Dunton were elected deacons. Twenty-five more persons were admitted at the first communion and the next year thirty-nine united with the church.

Continuing for seven years with this form of church government, upon the repeal of the law compelling all citizens to pay taxes to the parish (Congregational) church unless connected with some other church, the church became Congregational in name and reality as it had all along been in spirit.

Like our Pilgrim forefathers who came over in the Mayflower, it was the laymen, the body of the church itself, who determined the policy and carried to a successful issue the formation of the society and the church, together with the erection of the house of worship. It was after a year and a half of pulpit supplying and candidating that the church called a pastor, the Rev. George Washington Campbell. He came at a time of anti-masonic feeling and, as he was a mason of high standing, he courteously withdrew after a successful pastorate of four years during which there was the largest single addition to the church, thirty-six in all, in its history.

In 1834, William A. Larned came to the church from Yale Divinity School, but on account of delicate health he remained but a year, being dismissed Oct. 19, 1835. He afterwards became professor of literature in Yale College.

May 24, 1837, the Rev. Samuel G. Buckingham was ordained and installed as pastor of the church. He was one of the "new lights" of that day, a good leader, a writer, a man of tact, of great ability and consecration, who had only one later pastorate, that of fifty years with the South Church of Springfield.

"This society in its earliest days depended largely and almost wholly for its church singing and leader of the music upon a young man by the name of Nathaniel Goddard, who for that time possessed a good knowledge of music and a voice of superior quality The introduction of musical instruments as a part of church service came early but was not reliable, owing to the fact that the performers were, to some extent, a transient class of citizens." The violoncello and the clarinet were the usual instruments then used in the production of music. Later a violin (on week-days, a fiddle) was added and at times other instruments appeared. After being reduced in musical instruments to one flute, played by Col. Asa H. Waters, during the winter of 1843-44, Mr. Charles Sibley purchased an organ which had been taken from the Union Church in Worcester, secretly transported to Millbury on Friday night and installed during Saturday, so that it stood with a bold front facing a surprised congregation on Sunday morning. There was opposition to the innovation, but it remained in its place to the enrichment of the service of worship.

In 1847, upon Mr. Buckingham's dismissal, the church turned to one whom it had endeavored to secure as its pastor at a previous pastoral interim, namely, the Rev. Leverett Griggs, D. D., who was installed September 22, of that year. The most notable occurrence during this pastorate was the remarkable revival of 1851 which greatly affected both the church and the town. Seventy-three, at least, have traced their union with the church, then or later, from the time of this great uplift. A dearth followed, as was inevitable, though efforts were made to keep up the stream of incomers. On Jan. 19, 1856, Dr. Griggs resigned, largely because he found himself unable to support his family of six children upon the salary of seven hundred and fifty dollars with no parsonage.

April 24, 1856, the Rev. Lewis Jessup was installed as pastor. This period in the country at large was one of sectional feeling. Civil war was impending and church matters received no special uplift. He was strict in his demands for discipline and the roll of the church was cleared. That the church prospered is seen in the fact that in 1858 twenty-four were added to its membership. He was dismissed March 29, 1860.

Two years after the dismissal of Mr. Jessup, the Rev. Charles H. Peirce was called to the pastorate of the church and was installed Oct. 22, 1862. During his pastorate the building was thoroughly remodelled. One of the most notable changes was the reversing of the pews so that they faced as they now do—a change that had been advocated for a quarter of a century. He was deeply beloved by the people, but his pastorate was a short one, through his lamented death, Oct. 5, 1865.

Dec. 6, 1866, the Rev. Stacy Fowler was installed to the pastorate of the church. While he was minister, the present comfortable parsonage was erected. He was a man of broad sympathies and under his leadership the church prospered. He was dismissed March 5, 1878.

In the same year, on April 16, the Rev. John L. Ewell was installed as pastor of the church. Many now active in the work of the church and elsewhere were roused to Christian service and directed in the path of a consecrated life under his ministry. In 1884, the building was thoroughly renovated. The organ, which had done service for over forty years, was removed and the present fine instrument was installed. Mr. Ewell was dismissed Jan. 5, 1891, to become dean of Howard University, Washington, D. C.

May 7, of the same year, the Rev. George P. Eastman was installed. His work is still so fresh in mind that it has hardly emerged from the field of current events into that of history. In 1891, the church was incorporated. In 1893, extensive repairs were made in the church building. Later, free pews and the pledge system of raising money were instituted. A new bell was hung in the belfry—the fourth in the history of the church. Beautiful memorial windows were purchased and put in place. An addition to the building was made which afforded greater facilities for social occasions. Sept. 7, 1902, the church celebrated the seventy-fifth anniversary of its organization with appropriate exercises. Peace, prosperity, and piety marked the life of the church during his even tempered and devoted ministry. Dec. 14, 1903, he was dismissed to accept the pastorate of the Congregational Church in Orange, New Jersey.

Dec. 6, 1904, the Rev. Grove F. Ekins was installed as pastor of the church. A vigorous men's organization and a boys' club flourished for a time during this period. March 25, 1909, Mr. Ekins was dismissed and became pastor of the church in Housatonic.

Oct. 19, 1909, the present pastor, the Rev. Robert W. Dunbar, was installed. During this time the church has twice been honored in having among its worshippers the President of the United States, the Hon. William Howard Taft, who visited his aunt, Miss Delia C. Torrey, at the time the senior member of the church.

BAPTIST CHURCH

The town records show that as early as 1814 several persons who belonged to the Baptist Church at Grafton resided in Millbury. In 1817, there was a Baptist Society in this town, and May 10, 1826, a more thorough organization was effected. The Rev. Christopher Hall, the Rev. Otis Converse, of Grafton, and Elder Harrington of Sutton, preached here.

In the year 1835, at the house of Abijah Gleason, in West Millbury, the Millbury Baptist Church was formed with eighteen constituent members. The first public meeting was held in the old schoolhouse on the site of Union Chapel, West Millbury. Upon the completion of the West Congregational Church, in 1837, the Baptists joined with others in Union services in that edifice for a time. In 1840, however, the Baptist Church moved to the Armory Village where distinctively Baptist services were held in the old Academy Hall. The first regularly settled pastor was the Rev. Hervey Fitts who ministered to the church from 1841-43. Other pastors were the Rev. James Upham, D. D., 1843-45; the Rev. S. J. Bronson, 1846-53; the Rev. Cyrus T. Tucker, 1853-56; Joseph Aldrich, Homer Sears, Joseph Smith, Mr. Chapman and S. A. Thomas, supplies, 1856-58; the Rev. S. A. Thomas, 1858-62; the Rev. J. E. Brown, 1864-67; the Rev. C. A. Skinner, 1867-68; the Rev. S. J. Bronson, 1870-74; the Rev. George B. Gow, 1874-80; the Rev. D. W. Hoyt, 1880-89; the Rev. A. M. Crane, 1889-91; the Rev. S. D. Ashley, 1891-98; the Rev. Geo. E. Lombard, 1898-1901; the Rev. Charles W. Park, 1901-06; the Rev. H. E. Chapman, 1906-.

The present brick building was occupied for the first time, Dec. 26, 1864. The superintendent of the Sunday School is Mr. Harry A. Nugent. The following societies are connected with the church in its various lines of work: a Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, a Ladies' Aid Society, and a Ladies' Missionary Society.

In 1914, the interior of the church edifice was thoroughly remodelled. The organ was moved to the front of the auditorium, new pews were provided, a new pulpit and baptistry were constructed, the walls were re-decorated, and ornamental stained glass windows were put in place.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

A Methodist class was formed in Millbury in 1825, by the Rev. William Archer, an English preacher, which flourished for a short time. In 1835, another class was formed by the Rev. Erastus Spaulding, well known as “Father Spaulding.” The church was organized in the same year under the circuit plan. The preachers on this circuit at that time were the Rev. M. P. Alderman and the Rev. William Heath. The Rev. Thomas Tucker served as pastor in 1836. He was succeeded by the Rev. W. S. Campbell who preached for a little more than a year. He was followed by the Rev. M. P. Alderman, a former pastor, who remained until 1840. In its early days the church met in the hall of the lower tavern. The present church building was dedicated Nov. 17, 1840, the sermon being delivered by the Rev. Orange Scott. Since the coming of Mr. Tucker, the church has been regularly supplied with ministers. Bishop W. F. Mallalieu, as a boy, attended this church and Millbury people are proud of having had such a devoted man among its early attendants.

The Rev. Homer W. Courtney kindly supplied the following later facts concerning the church:

“During the pastorate of the Rev. William Wignall, 1895-96, the church edifice was thoroughly repaired. New windows were put in, a new roof was put on, the main auditorium was repapered and the building was painted inside and outside. An addition was built at the rear for the organ and a platform was constructed in the main auditorium for the pulpit and choir. The total cost was about $2,000. During the pastorate of the Rev. Walter Healy in 1901-02, a beautiful site was purchased on Prospect Street, opposite Highland Street, on which a parsonage was erected.”

The following have served as pastors since 1840:

Rev. William P. White,	1840 to 1841
Rev. L. R. Thayer,	1841 to 1842
Rev. John Roper,	1842 to 1843
Rev. E. W. Jackson,	1843 to 1844
Rev. Phineas Crandell,	1844 to 1845
Rev. John T. Pettec,	1845 to 1847
Rev. George W. Bates,	1847 to 1848
Rev. Charles W. Ainsworth,	1848 to 1850

Rev. William A. Braman,	1850 to 1852

WEST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Upon the removal of the First Congregational Church meetinghouse from the Old Common to Bramanville in 1835, many residents near the old location were not reconciled to the change and they determined to have a church building at West Millbury. The first steps toward the accomplishment of this end are indicated in the preamble of a subscription paper, dated Oct. 18, 1836.

“We, the subscribers, believing that the public good and the happiness of ourselves and families requires that there should be a house built for a place of public worship on Grass Hill, so-called, in Millbury, by these presents bind ourselves, each to the other, to build a house . . . and will pay the sums affixed to our several names.”

By Oct. 22, 1836, more than the required two thousand dollars had been subscribed and at a meeting of the subscribers, held on the twenty-ninth, Mark Lothrop, Simon Tainter, and Abijah Gleason were chosen as a building committee. On the sixth of December they reported that a location had been secured and that the lowest proposal for building the meeting-house was $2,900.

The church building was accordingly erected on the main road in West Millbury, about two hundred yards from its intersection with the road leading from the Old Common (site of the John C. Crane house).

In May, 1837, The Union or, as it was called, The West Congregational Church, was organized with forty-five members, twenty-nine having withdrawn from the First Congregational Church, whose covenant and articles of faith were adopted, with a change in the names.

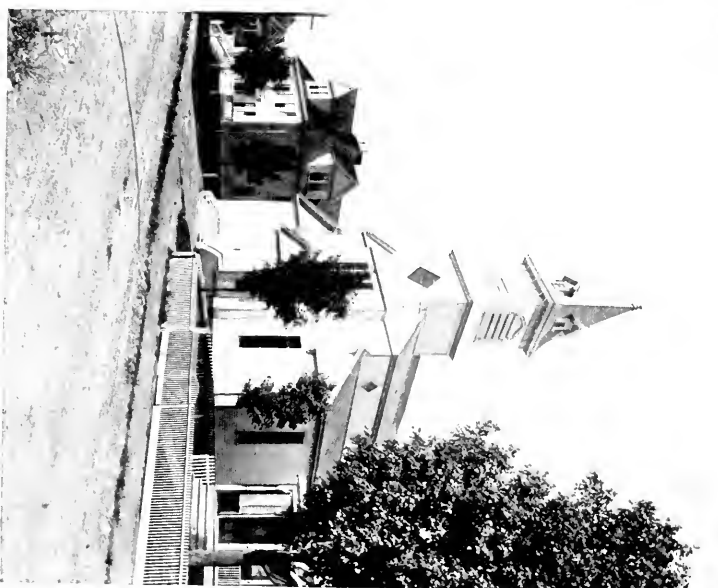

Among the early ministers over this church were the Rev. Caleb Burbank Elliot, who was educated for the ministry by Gen. Caleb Burbank, and the Rev. A. Phillips. In 1840, the Rev. Sidney Holman was installed as pastor and remained with the church until 1851. Services were afterward held until December, 1857, when the church disbanded.

The church building was re-opened after some years and preachers were sent to the pulpit from the Methodist Conference. During this period the Rev. Jefferson Hascall, presiding elder of the Conference and author of the hymn entitled “The Land of Beulah,” occasionally occupied the pulpit. In 1861, the Rev. Joseph J. Woodbury supplied the pulpit and resided in the vicinity.

Occasionally Baptist clergymen and lay preachers have held services in the building.

ST. BRIDGET'S CATHOLIC CHURCH

CHURCH OF THE ASSUMPTION, CATHOLIC. (1914)

By consent of the Legislature, in 1871, Simeon S. Waters, E. W. Goffe, and Nymphas Longley sold the land and meeting-house in the name of the Union or West Church Society and distributed the proceeds of the sale among its members. The church building, the bell, the stone steps, the land, the stoves, and the furnishings were sold separately and brought altogether seven hundred and sixteen dollars. The communion set used by the church was given to the First Congregational Church of Kellogg, Iowa, of which the Rev. Richard Hassell was pastor.

ST. BRIDGET'S ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

A Roman Catholic mission was established in Millbury in 1850, and the first clergyman to officiate here was the Rev. James Fitton, first pastor of St. John's Roman Catholic Church of Worcester.

Previously, services had been held in the Town Hall, in the "Arcade" building and at the home of James Campbell, who then resided opposite the upper end of Brierly Pond on the West Millbury Road. The land for St. Bridget's Church was given by Mr. and Mrs. Michael Coogan. The Rev. Mathew Gibson succeeded Father Fitton at Worcester and also in the mission work here. The succeeding pastors at the mission were the Rev. A. L'Eveque, the Rev. E. J. Sheridan of Uxbridge, and the Rev. J. J. Power, of Worcester, during whose pastorate the building was enlarged. In 1869, the church became a regular parish, with the Rev. M. J. Doherty as resident priest. After the death of Father Doherty, the Rev. William H. Goggin, then at the cathedral in Springfield, was appointed over St. Bridget's parish, Sept. 1, 1886. Within a year, the edifice was thoroughly remodeled. He terminated his relation with the church in 1898 after twelve years service and went to St. Paul's church in Worcester. Father Goggin was succeeded by the Rev. Charles J. Boylan who, because of ill health, labored here but a few months. In October, 1898, the Rev. P. L. Quail, then at Turners Falls, was appointed to this parish and continued as its priest for four years. He was succeeded by the Rev. John F. Conlin, who served the church for two and a half years. The present priest, the Rev. John F. Griffin, M. A., was appointed to the church, Nov. 7, 1905.

Father Griffin is a man of strong personality whose genial and courteous manner makes him popular throughout the community. Under his direction several improvements have been made in the church buildings and grounds.

The church property is free from any incumbrance of debt. Connected with the church are a boys' and a girls' sodality; two choirs, a senior and a junior, under the direction of Mr. Thomas J. Moran. The Hibernian society is under the spiritual direction of the priest of this church. A Holy Name society was organized in 1914.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL MISSION

Previous to 1880, Protestant Episcopal services, conducted by the various rectors of St. John's Church of Wilkinsonville, were held in the upper room of the high school (the old Academy) building and later in the Methodist Church, where the worshippers met Sunday afternoons.

In 1880, upon the completion of the present (then new) Town Hall, the south-west room on the second floor was equipped for regular services and was called "The Mission Room." May 8, of that year, a regular organization was perfected in which the officers were,—Edward Anderson, warden; John Hopkins, Esq., treasurer; and Samuel C. Nield, clerk. Services were continued regularly until April 25, 1888. During this time the rectors in charge of the mission were the Rev. James T. Ellis, until 1882, and the Rev. John Gregson for the remainder of the time.

In 1894, the Mission was re-organized and services were held for some weeks in the Second Congregational Church after which the mission was conducted in the Unitarian Church. These services continued regularly until Aug. 16, 1898. During this period the rectors in charge of the mission were the Rev. Mr. Trussell and the Rev. Mr. Hodgkiss, who were successively appointed over the St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church at Wilkinsonville.

FIRST UNITARIAN CHURCH

In 1879, at different homes meetings were held, presided over by various Unitarian clergymen among whom were the Rev. Edward Hall and the Rev. Austin S. Garver, both of Worcester. March 4, 1884, the First Unitarian Church of Millbury was instituted and on the sixteenth of the same month, largely through the efforts of Mrs. Elizabeth Livermore and Mrs. Francis Walker, a memorable service was held in Blanchard Hall, at which the Rev. Mr. Garver officiated. Following this meeting, services were continued until June 22 of the same year, when a covenant was adopted and an organization perfected, with the following officers: Clerk, Mrs. N. H. Sears; parish committee, Mrs. B. T. Rice, John Rhodes, Silas Dunton, Mrs. Simon Farnsworth, and Mrs. A. G. Livermore; treasurer and collector, Thomas A. Winter; Sunday School Superintendent, Thomas A. Winter; music committee, Anson G. Livermore, John C. Waters, and Mrs. Carrie Marble.

Silas Dunton, Thomas A. Winter, John Rhodes, Benjamin T. Rice, and Nathan H. Sears, as petitioners, were granted the right of incorporation as a religious society and, March 19, 1885, "The First Unitarian Society of Millbury" was accordingly incorporated.

In 1885, preliminary steps were taken for the erection of a house of worship and, Aug. 4, 1887, the following building committee was chosen: Calvin Barker, John B.

Barton, Silas Dunton, George Burnett, and T. A. M. Bennett. The church building, which is situated on Elm street opposite Waters, was dedicated Sept. 20, 1888, and the first communion service was celebrated on the Sunday following when a communion set was used that had been presented by Mrs. John W. Ware in memory of her husband.

The following have served the church as pastors: the Rev. Julius Blass, from 1885 until 1889; the Rev. Mary T. Whitney, through whose efforts a Young People's Society was organized, 1889-92; the Rev. Nathaniel Seaver, 1892-96; the Rev. Henry Mitchel, 1896-98; the Rev. Clifton M. Gray, 1898-1901; the Rev. Alson H. Robinson, 1901-04; the Rev. Charles H. Dalrymple, 1905-07; the Rev. Albert Walkley, 1907-10; the Rev. William T. Hutchins, 1910-13.

CHURCH OF THE ASSUMPTION OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN Roman Catholic (French)

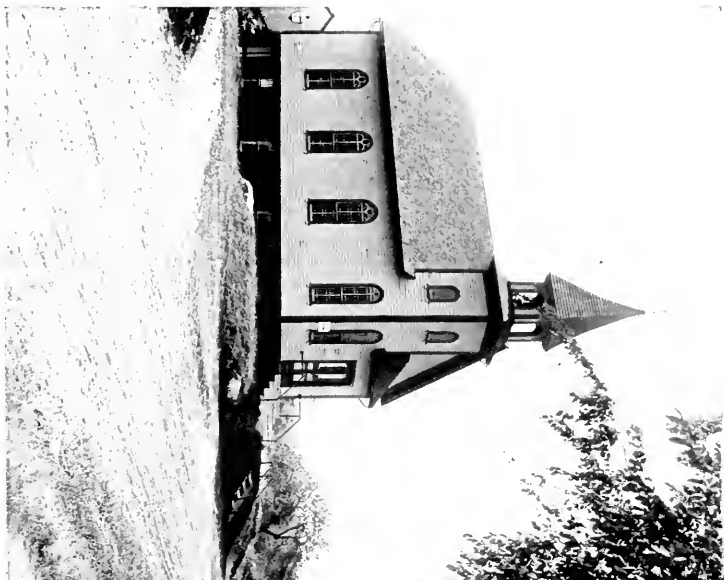

Because of the considerable French speaking population settled in Millbury and its vicinity a Roman Catholic Church, having a French-speaking pastor, was organized in April, 1882. From that time, however, the French population of the vicinage has grown from one hundred and seventy-five families until it numbers over three hundred and fifty families with a population of about seventeen hundred.

A church edifice was begun in April, 1884, and was dedicated Nov. 14, 1886, with appropriate ceremonies. The structure was burned in 1914 and the parish worshipped in St. Bridget's church while waiting for its own place of worship to be rebuilt.

The first priest in charge of the parish, the Rev. J. A. Charland, was highly esteemed by his people and continued with them until his death, although in his later years, because of poor health, he was assisted by other priests.

Jan. 23, 1907, the Rev. Louis E. Barry was appointed to the church and continued in charge until 1915. It was his desire to establish a parochial school and for this purpose land near the church building was purchased in 1912.

Jan. 15, 1915, the Rev. Joseph Octave Comtois, who came from West Springfield, was appointed over the parish.

The societies immediately connected with the church are "Ladies of St. Anne's" and "Children of Mary." National societies represented in the parish are "St. Jean Baptiste Society," "The Artisans Society," and "The Foresters' Franco-American Society."

In 1915, the present structure was erected.

UNION CHAPEL, WEST MILLBURY

For several years after the dissolution of the church at West Millbury, in 1871, religious services, conducted principally by pastors of the churches in the town, were occasionally held in the school-house. In 1887, in response to a general desire for more adequate rooms for religious and social purposes a Ladies Union Entertainment Society was formed for the purpose of furnishing entertainments which would stimulate interest in the vicinity and at the same time raise money for erecting a new chapel. The society also sought to raise money by subscriptions and appointed the following solicitors: Miss Leora Balcom, Mrs. John S. Blanchard, Miss Florence E. Crane, Mrs. John C. Crane, Mrs. Henry W. Davidson, Miss Florence Freeman, Mrs. Emily C. Goulding, and Miss Lizzie Wheeler. The following gentlemen were also selected to supervise the erection of the building: Thomas Windle, H. W. Bentley, Ira Glazier, Freeman Van Orman, and Henry W. Davidson. As a result of the efforts put forth the present Union Chapel, situated on the main road in West Millbury near the corner of the road leading to Oxford, was erected at a cost of twenty-two hundred dollars.

May 29, 1888, the building was dedicated with appropriate exercises at which a historical address was given by John C. Crane, a statement of the building committee was given by Thomas Windle, a sermon was delivered by the Rev. George A. Putnam, and a letter was read from Charles D. Morse expressing a hope that the enterprise be "as enduring as the hill upon which it stands."

This property is held in the care of three trustees who are chosen annually in December and the choice is made, if possible, among the people of West Millbury, who are members of evangelical churches in town. The first board consisted of Ira Glazier, Edwin Hoyle, and Theodore B. Sherwood.

The Sunday services at the chapel have been conducted by pastors from the Congregational, Methodist, and Baptist churches and by John C. Crane, a lay preacher of the Baptist Church.

Connected with the Chapel is a Social Union which stimulates an interest in the work at the chapel and raises funds for its support.

CHAPTER XXIV

SCHOOLS

Every township, "after the Lord hath increased them to the number of 50 householders," was obliged by law to appoint one within the town to teach "all such children as shall resort to him to write and read; whose wages shall be paid either by the parents or masters of such children, or by the inhabitants in general, by way of supply, as the major part of those that order the prudentials of the town shall appoint; provided, those that send their children be not oppressed by paying much more than they can have them taught for in other towns; and it is further ordered, that where any town shall increase to the number of 100 families or householders, they shall set up a grammar school, the master thereof being able to instruct youth as far as they may be fitted for the university, provided, that if any town neglect the performance hereof above one year, that every such town shall pay £5 to the next school till they shall perform this order."

From the town records, we learn that there were two committees having charge of school matters; one of these was composed of representatives from the several districts; the other, called the Prudential committee, supervised the actions of the former.

In 1813, the county-bridge schoolhouse stood below the old cemetery, on the south side of and a little back from the street on the main road to Wilkinsonville. In the same vicinity, at the junction formed by the road crossing the county-bridge and the road from the Centre, a brick building is standing, which was early used for school purposes. Until 1862, a little one-story square schoolhouse, having a four-sided pointed roof, stood on the Old Common nearly on the site of the present one. An early school building also stood at the junction of the road from the Whittemore place on the Grafton road, not far from the home of Samuel Goodell. Later on, a schoolhouse stood on the Worcester road not far from Martin street. Eighty years ago there was a schoolhouse on Park Hill, not far from the home of Calvin R. Brackett. In the Haywood district, which included the territory on the eastern road to Worcester, a schoolhouse stood near Dorothy Pond.

The earliest Bramanville schoolhouse was located within a few feet of the present watering trough and a later building, built of brick, was situated nearby.

At West Millbury, the original schoolhouse which was built of brick stood on the site now occupied by Union Chapel. It was destroyed by fire supposed to have been started by "some miscreant not having the fear of the law before him." The building was replaced by a hip-roofed wooden structure with but one room which was used both for school purposes and for holding religious meetings.

The former residence of General Burbank, purchased by the town and remodeled for school purposes, still stands on Burbank Hill, overlooking the valley of the Blackstone. It is a reminder of the general who did so much for the town in its early days. Its present owner, William E. Horne, has converted it into a tenement house.

These schoolhouses which served in the early days of Millbury, like those erected elsewhere in New England, were small and, usually, only one story high. Although these old structures have been replaced by more modern buildings, yet among the older citizens fond memories cling about the sites where many learned the rudiments of knowledge.

On March 21, 1814, the following report was made at the town meeting:

"The committee to whom was submitted the question of making some new arrangements and alterations in the school-districts in the town of Millbury have attended to the business and ask leave to report the following statement of the relative state and circumstances of the several districts in town, together with their opinion respecting the same. The relative state of the districts stands as follows:—Grass Hill district has 35 families and draws $87.50; Center (Old Common) district has 28 families and draws $70.00; Paper-mill district (Bramanville) has 21 families and draws $52.00; County-bridge district has 41 families and draws $102.50; Northeast district has 12 families and draws $30.00; Southeast district has 9 families and draws $22.50. From the above statement your committee are of opinion that by far too great a disproportion exists in said districts. With regard to the three first mentioned districts, your committee do not conceive it necessary to make essential alteration. But with respect to the three last, it is the unanimous opinion of your committee that an alteration ought to be made, in order that an equal distribution of this highly important privilege of schooling may be realized in that part of the town. All which is humbly submitted.

(signed) Josiah Stiles, per order."

Although the early inhabitants felt the need of providing school accommodations yet the financial stress through which the country was passing enforced a modest beginning. Sutton, at its annual town meeting in 1813, had voted to appropriate one thousand dollars for the schools and, on August 23, in that year, Millbury voted to raise its proportion of this money, three hundred and sixty-four dollars. (See Annals.) Millbury later voted twenty-five dollars for rewards and premiums, so that three hundred and ninety dollars was the entire sum paid for school expenses by the town during the first year of its history.

The old district school was a kingdom by itself in which the prudential committee-man ruled over the school and the school property. In summer, the pupils were small boys and girls, but in winter they were almost grown men and women. Of graded schools, like those of the present time, nothing was known. The child of five and the youth of twenty would recite lessons in the same room. The wooden ruler and the birch sapling were used frequently, as many have testified from personal experience. Often, some of the larger pupils would undertake to carry matters with a high hand, in defiance of the school regulations, but their effort usually came to grief, for the old-time school-máster generally won the day.

Winter evenings were often enlivened by the old-fashioned spelling-school, which was usually well attended. The spelling-bee, too, was an early institution in the villages of New England, which the surviving participants recall with pleasure.

Mrs. Abby (Kelly) Foster, wife of Stephen S. Foster, an Abolitionist and co-worker with William Lloyd Garrison, and herself a noted Anti-slavery lecturer, was among the early school-teachers of the town.

The town is also proud that its roll of teachers bears the name of Miss Clara Barton who was world-famous for her distinguished services as nurse in the Civil War and later as a leader in the work of the American Red Cross Society, so that her name has been commonly linked with that of Florence Nightingale in her services for humanity. For a term she taught in the school at West Millbury.

In 1818, twenty-five dollars were appropriated for a singing school. Out of the money due from individuals, a sum was appropriated, which, added to the school money, amounted to $500, for a permanent school fund. On May 3 of the next year, however, this fund was used to pay expenses of the town.

In 1822, fifty dollars were voted to be used for a singing school.

In 1825, twenty-five dollars were placed in the hands of the school committee, "to be used as they saw fit."

In December, 1826, the town purchased of Moses Dunton a lot for a schoolhouse on School street. In June, 1827, the district voted that "the Presbyterian Society (Second Congregational) may use the new school-house, until they have a place of their own."

In September, 1827, schools were divided as follows, "Scholars who are eight years of age and over shall compose the first school and be taught by a male teacher. And scholars under eight years of age shall be taught by a female teacher." From the by-laws of the Union school District for 1827, we learn something of the rules concerning the school and the school property.

"Article 1. The school-house and appendages thereto belonging, together with all the property of the district, shall be under the special care and keeping of the prudential committee. And the school-house shall not be used for any other purpose than school-keeping, religious meetings, and singing schools, without leave of the Prudential committee.

"Article 2. It shall be the duty of the Prudential committee to visit the school and premises frequently, and to see that no damage is done to the house or premises.

"Article 4. During the Intermission (at noon), the door of the school-house shall be locked and pupils required to go to their homes, except by the judgment of the teacher in inclement weather some could remain in the school building."

A Prudential committee was chosen which had general superintendence of the schools, such as examining the teachers, selecting textbooks, regulating attendance, as provided by an act passed by the Legislature in 1826, "providing for the further instruction of youth."

March 7, 1831, a committee, appointed in 1830 to examine schools, reported as follows: "We were much gratified with the wisdom and economy of the arrangement in the schools on Grass Hill (West Millbury), at the Paper-mill and Union districts, in dividing them and placing all under a certain age by themselves, under the instruction of female teachers thus leaving the master unembarrassed by young children to pay an undivided attention to the older scholars."

The report also commended the infant school kept by Miss Hooper in the Paper-mill district stating that, "This is beginning the work of government and education where it ought to begin—it is laying the axe at the very root of ignorance and insubordination." Four hundred and eighty-five scholars attended the schools in town during the winter.

At the same time an excellent private school was kept at Bramanville.

In 1832, one thousand dollars were voted for school purposes—an increase over the previous appropriations because of the growth in population.

In 1835, the money expended was six hundred twenty-seven dollars and eighty-six cents.

In 1836, at West Millbury Mr. Thomas P. Green, from Amherst College, opened a High School. The tuition was three dollars per quarter, but for Greek, Latin, and French, four dollars were charged.

In 1838, nine hundred dollars were voted for schools.

In 1842, the amount voted was one thousand dollars.

In 1848, twelve hundred and fifty dollars were voted for schools.

April 1, 1850, at the annual town meeting, article VI, which concerned the establishment of a high school, was referred to a committee, consisting of Simeon Waters, Leonard Dwinnell, Samuel Waters, C. R. Miles, Josiah L. Woodward, Oliver Rice and Simeon Haywood, one from each school district, who were instructed to report at the following March meeting of the town. Accordingly, March 4, 1851, the committee reported and the town voted to institute a high school. A committee of seven, consisting of J. E. Waters, Horace Waters, Asa H. Waters, E. W. Goffe, Josiah L. Woodward, John E. Bacon, and Hervey Park, one from each school district, was chosen to bring in plans and estimates for the proposed school at the April meeting of the voters. April 7, this committee reported and the town chose a committee of three, consisting of C. R. Miles, Andrus March, and Mowry Farnum, who were instructed to purchase the Millbury Academy building and site, provided that it could be bought on the conditions embodied in the report presented. Fifteen hundred dollars were appropriated as part payment on the Academy property and the selectmen were authorized to borrow five hundred dollars to make the first payment. It was also voted that five hundred dollars be raised for the support of the high school during that year.

In 1852, seven hundred and fifty dollars were appropriated for the High School, and the following year this amount was increased to one thousand dollars.

In 1857, the expenditure for the support of both the common and the High schools was $2800.

March 2, 1857. The town "voted to raise and appropriate the sum of $1,800.00 for the common schools and $1,000.00 for the High School."

In 1863, the town voted to abolish the school districts; accordingly, in 1864, we find the following report.

"We the undersigned having been chosen by the legal voters of the town of Millbury, to appraise the school-houses and other property which the town possesses in consequence of having abolished the school districts, have examined the said property, and agreed upon the value of the same as follows:—

In 1865, money was appropriated to pay the school districts the "amounts that may be due them for the schoolhouses now in the possession of the town, the school districts having been abolished."

Dec. 30, 1865, the town voted to establish and maintain schools for the education of persons over fifteen years of age.

In 1870, six thousand dollars were appropriated for school purposes.

March 20, 1871, it was voted "that the school committee be instructed to employ a superintendent of the public schools in town." Fifteen hundred dollars were appropriated for his salary.

April 19, vote of March 20 concerning superintendent of schools was rescinded.

In 1872, the first public graduating exercises for the high school were held.

In 1873, the best record in the school belonged to Cyrus F. Carter, of the fourth class, who later became a physician. Mr. Jackson continued to be principal of the High School for ten years and gained for himself an enviable reputation as a teacher. In 1883, he resigned his position in Millbury to accept a similar one in Worcester where for eighteen years he was principal of the Woodland street school, and, in 1901, he was promoted to be principal of the English High School.

March 19, 1877, seven thousand dollars were appropriated for the schools.

In 1880, the number on the school committee was reduced from six to three. Year after year the committee had reiterated in its reports the evil effects attending the frequent changes of teachers in the schools. In one report Dr. Webber and those associated with him stated that "A town is what its citizens make it, and its citizens are what its schools make them. Give us the money and your committee will accept the responsibility of giving you good schools." The town permitted the school committee to make use of the Town Hall, which occupied the upper floor in the building, for school purposes.

In 1883, the committee recommended that there be a superintendent of schools who would also be principal of the High School.

In April, 1884, Dr. Webber, who had served faithfully as a member of the school committee and had shown unusual interest throughout a long term of service, resigned.

As might be expected the need of money for school purposes gradually increased and, in 1888, the additional expenses for necessary repairs upon the High school building brought the appropriation up to $12,500. Thirty-five hundred dollars were appropriated for repairing the high school building.

March 16, 1891, the town accepted the legislative act of 1888 "to unite with one or more towns in employing a superintendent of schools."

The first superintendent of schools was Mr. J. S. Cooley, who served in 1891.

With an increase in the population came a demand for larger school accommodations, thus, in 1892, a new schoolhouse was built at Bramanville, at a cost of a little more than $14,000. Mr. George N. Goddard resigned as principal of the High School and Mr. R. A. Parker was chosen to fill the position. The superintendent of schools, Mr. J. S. Cooley, also resigned and Mr. F. E. Sanborn succeeded him.

March 20, 1893, ninety-eight hundred dollars were voted for schools.

In 1894, Mr. C. S. Lyman was superintendent of schools.

In the report of the school board for 1895 in answer to the question "What is the character and quality of our schools?" the answer was given: "It can be affirmed with candor that our schools are maintained at a good standard, and this declaration rests not alone upon the belief of the school committee and superintendent, but is confirmed by the opinion of a visiting supervisor. (signed) Henry W. Aiken, Dr. Edmund March, Amos Armsby."

The superintendent's report to the school committee for 1896 stated in reference to teachers' meetings that, "They have been continued successfully through the year; not only has the superintendent lectured at those meetings but teachers have given their experience in various lines of work."

During 1899, D. Edmund March resigned from the school board. He was a conscientious, earnest worker, who aimed to promote the welfare of the schools.

In 1901, C. S. Lyman closed his services as superintendent of schools having satisfactorily filled the office for nine years. He was succeeded by W. C. Lea.

From the school report for 1904 we learn that there was an entirely new staff of teachers employed that year in the High School, all of whom were selected after an exhaustive examination of candidates. Miss Clara B. Cook and Miss Sarah W. Kelley were assistants.

In the school report for 1906 a brief memorial was given to Mr. Amos Armsby who was a member of the school board at the time of his death. It was an expression of his associates on the board. "Long and faithful has been his service, and his death was a substantial loss to the public schools."

In 1908, Mr. Ira T. Chapman was superintendent of schools.

In 1910, Dr. Robert Booth, a prominent citizen of the town, who had been a member of the school board but a short time, died. In 1912, the superintendent, Mr. Ira T. Chapman, resigned and Mr. Chauncy C. Ferguson was chosen to fill that position.

It is gratifying to all Millbury people to know that the Hon. William Howard Taft, ex-president of the United States, was for a season in his boyhood days, a pupil in the Millbury schools.

When the High School supplanted Millbury Academy, Mr. A. P. Stone continued in charge. Succeeding principals have been the following, with the date of their service, although the year has not exactly coincided with the calendar year:—

1857-1858, H. P. Roberts	1884-1890, S. J. Blanpied
1859-1862, H. E. Rockwell	1891, Geo. N. Goddard
1863-1864, Wm. P. Bennett	1892, R. A. Park
1865-1868, J. B. Tyler	1893, W. A. Parker
1869, Geo. W. Heywood	1893-1895, A. W. Rogers
1870-1871, E. S. Hume	1895-1904, John F. Roache
1872, Leonard Morse	1904-1911, John O. Hall, Jr.
1873-1882, Joseph Jackson	1911-1913, John C. Backus
1883, A. F. Chase	1913- , Chas. H. Keyes

EVENING SCHOOLS

In 1866, an appropriation of three hundred dollars was made, on November 6, to defray the expenses of an evening school.

In 1882, "at the beginning of the winter term, an evening school was opened in the Union Grammar school room, under Mr. W. P. Brown and Miss Fanny Browning. It began with thirty-five pupils and was continued ten weeks."

In 1891-'92, two schools were opened, one at the Union building, with Thomas H. Sullivan, principal, and Miss Lucy Harrington, assistant; the other school at the Providence street building, with Miss Abigail Callahan as teacher.

March 16, 1896, three hundred and fifty dollars were appropriated for evening schools.

In 1905-'06 an evening school was opened at the High school building in which the assembly hall and one recitation room were used. The principal was Miss Callahan and the assistant, Mr. John E. Welch.

In 1908-'09 an evening school was opened at the High school building with Mrs. Abigail Callahan Dowd as principal, and Mr. A. F. Vaughn, assistant.

In 1909-'10, an evening school was held at the High school building with Mrs. Dowd as principal, Miss Augusta M. Harris as assistant, and two teachers, Miss Pearl Lacouture, and Miss Mildred Brierly. These schools have proved to be a valuable adjunct to the educational forces of the town.

ST. JOSEPH'S INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

Through the courtesy of Mr. Thomas A. Dowd, clerk of the Board of Trustees, we are in possession of the following facts relating to St. Joseph's Industrial School, located on Park Hill in the town.

The late Rt. Rev. Mgr. Thomas Griffin, of Worcester, saw the advantage of providing an institution in which Roman Catholic boys who did not have a home, or who might be in need of some strong directing influence, could find shelter and at the same time would be educated along useful lines.

Consequently, in 1900, he purchased the site on Park Hill on which St. Joseph's Industrial School is located. Aug. 2, 1900, the corporation of St. Joseph's Industrial School was organized. Among the subscribers to the agreement of association were the Rt. Rev. Thomas D. Beaven, Roman Catholic Bishop of Springfield; the Rev. Bernard S. Conaty; the late Rt. Rev. Mgr. Griffin; the Rev. D. M. O'Neil; the late James P. Tuite, and the late Rev. John J. Power, all of Worcester, and about twelve Roman Catholic laymen of the City of Worcester. Since that time the corporation has managed the business of the Institution, and the work of caring for the boys has been under the direction of the Xaverian Christian Brothers. Since its start many boys have been at the Institution, and, besides obtaining the ordinary common school education, they have been taught the practical trades.

THIEF DETECTING SOCIETY

A Thief Detecting Society was formed about 1830 and is still in existence. During this long period the organization has included in its membership many of the prominent men of the town. At present it is a social club which meets annually for a banquet.

ANCIENT ORDER OF HIBERNIANS

This Society was organized in November, 1871, as Millbury Division, No. 9. It meets in Foresters' Hall, on the first Tuesday of each month. The first officers of the society were: president, Thomas McCarthy; vice-president, John Ivory; recording secretary, Patrick Duggan; treasurer, Jeremiah Sullivan. The officers for 1912 were: president, James J. Grogan; vice-president, J. Conley; financial secretary, P. J. Buckley; recording secretary, J. J. Mulhane; treasurer, Edward Dolan.

The society has a membership of seventy-eight.

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC

George A. Custer Post 70, G. A. R., was organized Aug. 10, 1876, with the following charter members:—Edward E. Howe, A. B. Slocum, Dr. George C. Webber, Edward Holden, George R. Leland, D. N. Carpenter, Daniel Cobb, James Clark, R. E. Bowen, and Dr. William H. Lincoln. The first commander was Edward E. Howe; the first chaplain, B. F. McIntire; the first adjutant, R. D. Loomis.

The officers in 1914 were:—commander, A. G. Livermore; senior vice-commander, H. F. Rice; junior vice-commander, J. A. Dike; surgeon, J. E. Holbrook; chaplain, D. E. Hurd; officer of the day, L. S. Waters; officer of the guard, E. R. Bugbee; quartermaster, H. F. Hobart; adjutant, H. F. Hobart; sergeant-major, D. E. Hurd; quartermaster-sergeant, T. A. Winter.

The objects of The Grand Army of the Republic are:

“To preserve and strengthen those kind and fraternal feelings which bind together the soldiers, sailors and marines who united to suppress the late rebellion, and to perpetuate the memory and history of the dead.

“To assist such former comrades in arms as need help and protection, and to extend the needful aid to the widows and orphans of those who have fallen.

“To maintain true allegiance to the United States of America, based upon a paramount respect for, and fidelity to, the National Constitution and laws, to discountenance whatever tends to weaken loyalty, incites to insurrection, treason or rebellion, or in any manner impairs the efficiency and permanency of our free institutions; and to encourage the spread of universal liberty, equal rights and justice to all men.

“Others may forget, but as long as memory holds her place the true comrade will never forget his duty to his comrades in arms.”

SOCIÉTÉ ST. JEAN BAPTISTE

This society was organized Feb. 1, 1880. Its object is to render assistance to its members who are sick, to the amount of $4.00 per week, and to give insurance on the death of a member, consisting of an assessment of one dollar on each surviving member.

At its organization, the officers were:—president, Charles Thibeault, Sr.; vice-president, Joseph Gendron; recorder, Ed. Moore; assistant recorder, O. P. Dubreuil; financier, Joseph Gregoire; treasurer, Damien Ducharme; corresponding secretary, Andre Faucher; marshal, Piere Pion; directors, Dr. J. Fontaine, T. Reeves, Eusébe Dubois.

Richardson; inside guardian, Thomas M. Williams; outside guardian, James R. Whatley.

Since its organization Morning Star Lodge of Odd Fellows has, through prosperity and adversity, steadfastly carried out the beneficent purposes of the order, and inculcated its precepts. It has for more than thirty years dispensed financial aid to its members, as well as to the brothers of other lodges applying for relief. It has tenderly cared for its sick, consoled the bereaved and buried the dead. In this noble work thousands of dollars have been willingly expended, desolate homes have been cheered and aching hearts comforted by fraternal ministrations. The support of the best citizenship of the community has been with the organization from its inception to the present day, and the brothers who today are carrying on the sacred duties entrusted to them feel a justifiable pride in the noble traditions they inherit.

The officers of the lodge in 1914 were:—noble grand, Edward Hofstra; vice grand, Thomas S. Marsden; recording secretary, James W. Robertson; financial sec-

DAUGHTERS OF REBEKAH

In 1888, twenty-eight members of Morning Star Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Millbury, and Jennie L. Packard of Naomi Lodge, of Worcester, applied to the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, I. O. O. F., for a charter to form a Rebekah Lodge in Millbury. Accordingly, Nov. 8, 1888, A. S. Pinkerton, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, and suite instituted Bethesda Lodge, Daughters of Rebekah, in Odd Fellows Hall, now Red Men's Hall, Armsby Block, Millbury. It was named after the I. O. O. F. in South Boston, which presented to the Bethesda Lodge gavels and ballot box.

In the evening the Grand Instructor, James M. Price, and suite conferred the degree on forty-four candidates, after which the following officers were elected and installed: N. G., Charles Whitworth; V. G., Lizzie M. Waterman; Rec. Sec., Elizabeth M. Brackett; Treas., Mary E. Dodge; Fin. Sec., Louette G. Carter; Warden, Martha J. Stone; Con., Hattie E. Searles; O. G., James Whatley; I. G., Lena C. Neudeck; Chap., Maria H. Aiken; R. S. N. G., Jennie L. Packard; L. S. N. G., Elizabeth Nield; R. S. V. G., Kezia Houghton; L. S. V. G., Clara M. Johnson; B. B., Minnie D. Whitworth, Bertha Neudeck, Mary E. Neudeck.

December 28, 1891, the present hall was jointly dedicated by Odd Fellows and Daughters of Rebekah. At the present time the lodge is known as Rebekahs instead of Daughters of Rebekah.

The officers in 1915 were: N. G., Carrie E. Roote; R. G., Mildred A. Brierly; Rec. and Fin. Sec., Mary E. Neudeck; Treas., Clarence C. Hayward; Con., Christine Neff; War., Blanche Newell; I. G., Jeanette Pike; O. G., James W. Robertson; R. S. N. G., Achsah A. Magill; L. S. N. G., Jessie M. Weir; R. S. V. G., Tryphena McCrea; L. S. V. G., Belle Crossman; Chap., Grace E. Whitworth.

The Rebekah order stands for benevolence and charity.

ROYAL ARCANUM

Millbury Council, Royal Arcanum, was chartered in 1885. This is a fraternal, benevolent organization, with an assessment plan of insurance. The first regent was F. A. Lapham. E. I. Humphreys was the first orator, and J. Henry Searles the first secretary.

The officers in 1912 were:—regent, L. H. Ballard; vice-regent, D. J. Dempsey; orator, Amos Buxton; secretary, A. L. Martin; treasurer, R. R. Crane; collector, E. C. Putnam; guide, Oliver Lamoreux; warden, Philip Lemay; sentry, J. A. Lindsay.

ANCIENT ORDER OF UNITED WORKMEN

Quartet Lodge No. 93 was instituted Dec. 9, 1887, and it is a subordinate lodge of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, which is composed of all the members in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Vermont. It is an assessment order which has about thirty-two thousand members in the three states and is composed of free white males. The age of admission is from eighteen to forty-five and the members are rated on the step rate plan, classified into seven classes. Class 1, 18 to 24; class 2, 24 to 29; class 3, 29 to 34; class 4, 34 to 39; class 5, 39 to 44; class 6, 44 to 50; class 7, 50 and over. It has full rate or half rate members (full rate for two thousand dollars; half rate for one thousand dollars) in the beneficiary part of the order. In the past the fraternal part of the lodge work has been active in caring for the sick and assisting the members when occasion required.

The first officers were as follows:—past master workman, Fred A. Lapham; master workman, James H. Ferguson; foreman, James C. Wooldridge; overseer, F. H. Sisson; recorder, Wm. S. Ostrander; treasurer, Rufus R. Crane; financier, F. M. Stockwell; guide, Richard Pickering; inside watchman, Fred A. Sisson; outside watchman, John Lindsay; trustee for three years, Henry Merriam; trustee for two years, Fred A. Lapham; trustee for one year, E. E. Wood.

Since the lodge was organized in 1887, it has enrolled on its book 92 members, thirty-eight have dropped out, fifteen have died, leaving the membership in 1912 thirty-nine.

The officers in 1914 were:—past master workman, Charles H. Burbank; master workman, Antoine Lacouture; foreman, Edward Boucher; overseer, Richard Pickering; recorder, Wm. L. Clementson; treasurer, Henry Van Ostrand; financier, C. F. Holman; guide, John W. Ashton; inside watchman, Nelson Caisse; outside watchman, John B. Cartier; trustees, 1914, Charles H. Burbank; 1915, John Lindsay; 1916, Richard Pickering.

FRENCH NATURALIZATION CLUB

The French Naturalization Club was organized Jan. 18, 1889, and its purpose is the encouragement of the naturalization of Franco-American people in town.

The first officers of the society were:

President, Hermann Vigeant; vice-president, Joseph Ballard, Jr.; recorder, Charles J. E. Bazin; treasurer, Joseph Ballard, Sr.; business director, Frank Bellville; directors, Octave Aubin, Peter Jacques, Joseph Gendron.

The officers for 1912 were: President, Albert Despard; vice-president, Joseph Bussiere; recorder, Hornidas Lavallee; treasurer, Alfred Gauthier; business director, Frank Bellville; theater director, Paul H. Thibeault; investigation directors, Damien Ducharme, P. C. Paradis, Joseph Ballard, Sr., Peter Jacques, L. Bail.

The meetings of the society are held in St. Jean Baptiste Hall, the first and third Sundays of each month.

MILLBURY SOCIAL UNION

On May 30, 1889, a social gathering was held at the residence of Mr. Amos Armsby at which the matter of forming a club in town which should include members of the evangelical churches and congregations was presented. It was voted that such an organization was deemed advisable and a committee of four, consisting of the Rev. Joseph Conclin, D. T. March, the Rev. A. M. Crane, and Dr. J. R. Lincoln, was appointed by the chair to draw up a constitution and a code of by-laws. Mr. Armsby was added to the committee.

On July 8, 1889, at a meeting held in the Second Congregational Church, a constitution and by-laws were adopted. Sept. 5, 1889, the following officers were elected: president, Amos Armsby; vice-president, Rev. A. M. Crane; secretary, Henry T. Maxwell; treasurer, Carroll Thayer.

The object of the Union is to encourage among the members of the Protestant churches and congregations of Millbury a more intimate acquaintance and to discuss such church questions as may promote the physical, intellectual, and religious welfare of the town.

Until 1910, the meetings were held quarterly. At that time the constitution was revised and the object broadened, so that the attendants of any church, whether in Millbury or the surrounding towns, are eligible to membership. The meetings were also reduced in number to three each year.

WEST MILLBURY SOCIAL UNION

The West Millbury Social Union was organized Feb. 1, 1892, to assist in maintaining the religious work at Union Chapel. It has also been active in the social and literary affairs of the community in providing suppers and entertainments. The Union has annually celebrated Memorial Day at the Chapel by having a supper and entertainment at which the veterans of the Civil War have been guests of honor. The occasion has also served as a reunion day for former residents of the neighborhood.

The original officers of the Union were: president, Wm. H. Stockwell; vice-president, Freeman Van Orman; secretary, Florence I. Bentley; treasurer, Mrs. H. W. Davidson.

The officers in 1915 were: president, Fred Putnam; vice-president, Mrs. H. W. Glover; secretary, Helen Glover; treasurer, Wm. H. Stockwell.

The membership in 1915 was one hundred. Monthly business and social meetings have been held either at the Chapel or at the home of some member.

FORESTERS OF AMERICA

Court Millbury No. 79 Foresters of America has held a prominent place among our fraternal organizations. Through the efforts of Jos. S. Anderson and Thos. F. Dean, of Worcester, the following were secured as charter members to form a nucleus for Court Millbury and at a meeting of Court Quinsigamond, of Worcester, July 13, 1892, they were elected and initiated: James M. Cronin, R. F. Brown, Thos. A. Dowd, Thos. L. Brown, Wm. C. Carberry, Patrick C. Carroll, Thos. A. Dolan, Wm. A. Army, Dr. Thos. J. Cronin, Jos. C. Brown, Jas. J. Sullivan, Jeremiah F. Lyons, John F. Frazier, Edw. Trombly, M. F. Gleason, John Coulter, Samuel Barber, Wm. Belleville, Jas. T. Gaughan, John J. Dolan, Thos. Walsh, Edw. H. Dolan, Chas. Sherin, B. Frank Turnan, Jas. J. Gleason, John Durkin, Dr. Robert Booth.

July 28, 1892, a dispensation was granted by the Supreme Court and Grand Court of the Ancient Order of Foresters of America of the State of Massachusetts, authorizing the instituting of Court Millbury, No. 8165, Ancient Order of Foresters of America. In 1896 the word "Ancient" was eliminated and the number changed to 79. The Court now is known as "Court Millbury, No. 79, Foresters of America."

At a meeting Aug. 9, 1892, held in Odd Fellows Hall, Grand Recording Secretary, Joseph S. Anderson, and several of the Grand Court Officers instituted Court Millbury and installed the following officers: chief ranger, Thos. A. Dowd; sub. chief ranger, Thos. L. Brown; recording secretary, Robert F. Brown; financial secretary, Thos. J. Cronin; senior woodward, Michael J. Gleason; junior woodward, John Coulter; junior beadle, Patrick Carroll; senior beadle, Wm. Army. Board of Trustees: Jeremiah F. Lyons, chairman, for three years; James J. Sullivan, for two years; Charles Tebo, for one year; court physician, Dr. Robert Booth; past chief ranger, Dr. Chas. H. Hakes.

Sixty new members were initiated that night. Since that time the Court has continued to prosper, growing in membership and finances so that it now has a membership of about 300 and a treasury of about $5,000.00. The Court disposes annually of about $1,000.00 for sick benefit—$5.00 per week for 13 weeks, $2.50 per week, 13 weeks, and $1.25 per week for remainder of sickness. A death benefit of $100.00 is payable to one's family and $50.00 is payable on the death of a wife.

The success of the Court in a great measure is due to the executive ability of the Chief Ranger and the financial officers. The roll of Honor as Past Chief Ranger of the Court is the following:

Thomas A. Dowd, Robert Rushby, Jeremiah F. Lyon, Chas. Tibeault, John F. O'Leary, M. T. O'Leary, John H. Neudeck, Chas. A. Kennedy, Joseph E. Army, Medick

THE COMMON, LOOKING NORTH

Boucher, Joseph D. Army, Louis N. Gabree, Robert F. Brown, T. A. Dolan, P. J. Buckley, E. F. Cassidy, M. J. Farron.

The last four mentioned have served as financial officers three years or more.

Since the formation of the Court it has paid over twenty thousand dollars for sick benefits to its members and three thousand five hundred dollars for death benefits, besides many benevolent donations. All this has been accomplished on a revenue of $6.00 a year per member. The members of the Court are composed of men of all walks in life and has been represented on about every board of the town government.

This Court has a representation in the Grand Court of one member for every one hundred on the roll each year. The following men have been members of the Grand Court since its institution at different times.

Thos. A. Dowd, Robert Rushby, Chas. Tebo, Jeremiah Lyons, John F. O'Leary, M. T. O'Leary, Chas. A. Kennedy, Jas. Maloney, Thos. L. Connors, Patrick J. Buckley, Jas. W. Coyne, Esthery Dusthroff, Jos. E. Army, Medick Boucher, John Morrissey, Joseph D. Army, Fred Marsell, John H. Neudeck, Geo. H. Lacouture, Louis N. Gabree, Edw. F. Cassidy, Robert Brown, M. J. Farron.

The latter has represented this Court on the Grand Court for sixteen consecutive years.

The motto of the order is "Liberty, Unity, Benevolence and Concord."

The names of the officers in 1914 were: R. F. Brown, chief ranger; M. J. Farron, secretary (serving his twenty-first year); Robert Rushby (the first sub. C. R.), chairman of the trustees; Joseph D. Army, captain of the degree team.

MILLBURY WOMAN'S CLUB

The Millbury Woman's Club was organized Nov. 7, 1894. Its first officers were: president, Mrs. Alice P.

Eastman; vice-president, Miss Anna L. Peirce; secretary, Miss Anna L. Morse; treasurer, Mrs. Lizzie G. Winter.

The club constitution has the following preamble: "We, women of Millbury, and vicinity, feeling the necessity which the present and prospective status of women imposes upon us of informing ourselves more fully, not only upon subjects of present general interest, but also upon the more important general questions which are now pressing upon all people everywhere for a just solution, because involving the welfare of humanity, do agree to form ourselves into an association for the prosecution and accomplishment of the above named purpose. So we have our club composed of women brought together by a desire for a larger mental growth, whose companionship is not based upon neighborhood, previous acquaintance, or church."

The Club was admitted to the Massachusetts State Federation in 1897. The regular meetings are held on the first Wednesday of each month, from October to May, inclusive.

The Executive Board for 1912-13 were: president, Miss Lauribel Armsby; vice-president, Mrs. Charles B. Perry; secretary, Mrs. William C. Barratt; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Fred V. Goodell; treasurer, Mrs. Jacob R. Lincoln; auditor, Mrs. Rufus E. Crane. Chairmen of Departments: household economics, Mrs. W. W. Windle; literature, Mrs. G. B. Stowe; social service, Mrs. C. A. Church; social, Mrs. R. J. Stockwell; science, Mrs. F. L. Simmons; education, Mrs. C. P. Macduff; art, Mrs. E. L. Smith; current events, Mrs. W. F. Grout.

The membership in 1915 was seventy-five. In 1915, Mrs. William W. Windle was elected president of the club.

Honorary members: Mrs. George P. Eastman, Mrs. Charles Marble, Miss Anna L. Morse, Mrs. W. Peabody Reid, Mrs. John F. Roache, Mrs. George A. Slocomb.

The presidents have been: Mrs. George P. Eastman, 1894-1896; Miss Anna Lee Peirce, 1896-1901; Mrs. John F. Roache, 1901-1902; Miss Anna Lee Peirce, 1902-03; Mrs. Robert E. Molt, 1903-04; Miss Sarah H. Walling, 1904-07; Mrs. Gustave A. Neudeck, 1907-08; Mrs. Edward F. Hull, 1908-11; Mrs. Ira T. Chapman, 1911-12; Miss Lauribel Armsby, 1912-15; Mrs. W. W. Windle, 1915-.

MILLBURY TURNER'S SOCIETY

This society, started in 1898, is a social organization for the playing of games. Several times during the summer months it has excursions down the Narragansett Bay, for fishing, and other recreation, being joined at these times by parties from other places. Henry L. Hooper was the originator of the Society, and has continued to be its leader.

FRATERNITY CIRCLE No. 522. COMPANIONS OF THE FOREST OF AMERICA

“Companions of the Forest of America” is the name of a benevolent and social organization whose motto is “Sociability, Sincerity and Constancy.”

The officers in 1915 were: Anna G. Kinniery, Sr. P. C. C.; Annie L. Sullivan, Sr. P. C. C.; Mary Gallagher, Jr. P. C. C.; Mrs. Cecilia Faron, C. C.; Mrs. Mary A. Gilbert, S. C. C.; Mrs. Annie Pengalley, R. S.; Mary A. Cunningham, F. S.; Evelyn G. Bertrand, Treas.; Catherine L. Bagin, R. G.; Mrs. Dora Baillargeon, L. G.; Mrs. Bertha Baillargeon, I. G.; Mrs. Lizzie A. Connor, O. G.; Mrs. Elizabeth M. Welch, Ch. Trust.; Mrs. Margaret Scannell, Trust.; Mary Foley, Trust.

LA SOCIÉTÉ DES ARTISANS CANADIENS FRANÇAIS

Société des Artisans Canadiens Français No. 108 was organized Sept. 8, 1902, with the following officers: president, Chas. J. E. Bazin; treasurer, Hermann Vigeant. The supreme office is in Montreal. Both men and women are admitted to membership. The society has 40,000 members and a reserve of $2,600,000.00.

Since its organization in Millbury the society has paid about $15,000.00 in benefits to the Millbury members. The Lodge meets in St. Jean Baptiste Hall on the second Tuesday of each month.

The officers in 1915 were: president, Joseph A. Ballard, Jr.; treasurer, Achille T. Croteau.

FORESTIER FRANCO-AMERICAINS—COUR POTHIER

Cour Pothier No. 44 de l'Ordre des Forestiers Franco-Americains was organized in November, 1909, with 42 charter members.

The Court has had a very steady growth, having, in 1915, 130 members. It is a mutual organization with sick benefits, and a Mortuary Fund.

The officers in 1915 were: Chef-Forestier, Edmond Gauthier; S. Ch., Nere Lamothe; Sec. Fin., Archille T. Croteau; Tresorier, Omer H. Roberts; Sec. Arch., George L. Lacoutre; Ier. Garde, Napoleon Jacques; 2me. Garde, Arthur Cournoyer; Ier. Sentinelle, George Moisan; 2me. Sentinelle, Arthur Gagnier; Doyen, Arthur Barril; Ier. Syndic, Eusèbé Cote; 2me. Syndic, Arthur Bourbeau; 3me. Syndic, Louis Boucher.

WAMPUS TRIBE 159, IMPROVED ORDER OF RED MEN

Wampus Tribe, No. 159, Improved Order of Red Men, was instituted in Millbury on the night of November 28, 1904, by the Great Sachem of Massachusetts, Frank H. Wyman, and Great Chief of Records, Alexander Gilmore. The degrees were exemplified by Quinsigamond Tribe, No. 7, of Worcester.

At this writing, ten years after the institution of the Tribe, the following Chiefs are in charge: Sachem, R. C. Leclair; Prophet, Alfred L. Armsby; Senior Sagamore, Neil A. Swenson; Junior Sagamore, J. C. Woodward; Chief of Records, Wendell P. Jones; Collector of Wampum, Walter B. Horne; Keeper of Wampum, William E. Horne; First Sannap, Eugene J. Leclaire; Second Sannap, Fred V. Goodell; Warriors, Harry B. Horne, Esthen E. Dursthoff, James Crapo, Eugene T. Stinson; Braves, Charles L. Undergraves, Albert H. Hyde, Joseph H. Tatro, Willard O. Glover; Guard of Wigwam, Edward J. Sharon; Guard of Forest, Hector A. Rivers.

Committees: Trustees, Robert F. Brown, Fred V. Goodell, Joseph H. Tatro; Finance, Charles L. Undergraves, Albert H. Hyde, Alfred L. Armsby; Entertainment, Charles L. Undergraves, Joseph H. Tatro, J. H. Woodward, A. L. Armsby, Neil A. Swenson, A. H. Hyde, Fred V. Goodell; Visiting Sick, A. L. Armsby, George E. Whitehead, Walter D. Horne, C. L. Undergraves, Joseph H. Tatro, A. H. Hyde, Willard O. Glover; Relief, William E. Horne, Robert Stockwell, A. L. Armsby, Henry L. Hooper, Henry J. Curll.

The Tribe has come into prominence by having its First Sachem exalted to the important and honorable position of Great Junior Sagamore of the Order in Massachusetts.

The Improved Order of Red Men is a Patriotic and Charitable organization being directly descended from the Sons of Liberty, which played a most important part in the early struggles for American independence. It is an American Order, for American citizens alone.

MILLBURY DISTRICT NURSING SOCIETY

The Millbury District Nursing Society "is for the benefit of those who may need the service of a trained nurse, and to encourage and foster every effort for the scientific care of the sick." The society was organized Dec. 27, 1910. Two regular nurses have been employed, Miss Pearl Brown who served from Jan. 14, 1911, to April 8, 1911, and Miss May A. Stafford who began her duties May 22, 1911. The society was incorporated in 1911.

The officers of the Society in 1915 were: president, Mrs. F. W. Hooper; vice-president, Mrs. H. O. Sutcliffe; treasurer, Miss Lilla Streeter; secretary, Mrs. William F. Grout; directors, Mrs. P. C. Paradis, Mrs. W. H. Thompson, Mrs. Eli Lacouture, Mrs. Roger Montague, Mrs. Ed. Hogan, Miss M. Cunningham, Mrs. G. E. Flagg, Miss Stella Stafford.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS

The George A. Custer Woman's Relief Corps, No. 155, was instituted Feb. 26, 1912, as an auxiliary to George A. Custer Post, No. 70, G. A. R. The following were the original officers: Pres., Mrs. Adaline B. Moore; S. V. Pres., Mrs. Ella Clark Martin; J. V. Pres., Mrs. Elizabeth B. Livermore; Chaplain, Mrs. Ruth M. Hurd; Treas., Mrs. Ida T. Davidson; Sec., Mrs. Cora B. Snow; Conductor, Mrs. Alice Brierly; Guard, Mrs. Annie Vultor; Asst. Conductor, Mrs. Carrie E. Roote; Asst. Guard, Mrs. Amie P. Dixon; Patriotic Instructor, Miss Minnie E. McIntire; Press. Cor., Mrs. Evelyn H. Pierce; Color Bearer, No. 1, Miss Helen Winter; Color Bearer, No. 2, Miss Henrietta C. Davidson; Color Bearer, No. 3, Miss May E. White; Color Bearer, No. 4, Miss Mabel A. Brierly.

In 1914, Mrs. Ella Clark Martin was president and, in 1915, Mrs. Lillian F. Putnam held that office.

The Woman's Relief Corps has assisted the Grand Army Post in the observance of Memorial Day and at patriotic meetings and entertainments. The Corps has done a conspicuous service in presenting national flags to each room of the public schools, to the Sunday schools in the churches, to the St. Joseph's Industrial School, and to other organizations.

CHAPTER XXVI

OLD HOUSES

STEPHEN BLANCHARD HOUSE, WEST MILLBURY

On the plot of land between the cemetery and the main road in West Millbury stood, until a few years ago, the old house of Stephen Blanchard. To this place came Thomas Blanchard, as a boy, to work for his brother at tack-making, but the old shop was many years ago divided, part of it having been removed to the location occupied by the home of J. J. Fjellman. Part of the building is on Loon Island in Singletary Lake. The remainder was converted into a dwelling house. Samuel Blanchard, father of Thomas, later resided opposite in the house now occupied by Wm. H. Fairbanks.

CAPTAIN BURBANK HOUSE

On High street, in Bramanville, nearly opposite the store of the late A. S. Winter, there stood until 1914 an old house which was once the home of Capt. Abijah Burbank, the paper-maker. It was a two-story structure, long neglected, and but partly occupied, but it was a silent witness to many changes in and about the village since its first occupant passed away.

CALEB BURBANK HOUSE, BRAMANVILLE

In the early thirties, on Burbank Hill, Gen. Caleb Burbank built what was for those days a magnificent mansion, which he equipped suitably for a man who was regarded as the richest man in the town. The house has been moved a few rods from its original location, but it is a constant reminder of the palmy days of the Major-general. The view from its location is extensive, overlooking as it does the scenes of his early labors. The town purchased the building and it was used for nearly thirty years as a schoolhouse; and on the site a handsome school building was built later. The older building is the next above the present Burbank schoolhouse.

CHAPLIN-BRAMAN-MARBLE HOUSE, OLD COMMON

This old residence, facing the Old Common, or old training ground, was once the home of the Rev. Ebenezer Chaplin. Later it was the residence of Dr. Amasa Braman. The place is now occupied by Mr. Charles Marble, son of the late Henry Marble. The doctor's still-house was a little way from here on the corner of Elmwood and Beach streets where cider-brandy was distilled.

THE ELLIOT-SEVERY-GILSON HOUSE

The ancient and forsaken old mansion, once the home of Captain Andrew Elliot, a soldier of the Revolution and captain of one of the Sutton companies, was built before 1771, if the tradition is true that it was erected by Captain Timothy Carter who died in that year. He left no sons and only his older daughter Anna married, so far as the town records show. Certainly she, as the wife of Andrew Elliot, was long mistress of the mansion. Their two older sons died before the father, the third son remained in Millbury, and the fourth son, John, removed to Livermore, Maine. Both the Elliot family and the Severy family which later occupied the property are extinct by name in Millbury.

Like many of the best farm houses of its time, the old house is dominated by a large central chimney, is two stories in height, and so placed as to command a beautiful prospect over the valleys towards Worcester, but its distinguishing feature is an unusually elegant cornice with brackets, which is returned at the corners upon the end walls with skill and fine effect. The interior well repays a visit, especially the ancient best room at the southwest corner of the ground floor which, with its panelled and wainscoted walls, timbered ceiling and quaint buffet built into one corner, is still a dignified apartment, even in its neglected and abandoned state, suggesting how charming it must have been when furnished in the olden style. This is, perhaps, the best example in town representing the traditions of local craftsmanship of the time when the carpenter made good joinery before the coming of machine tools destroyed his art. Although he might have had only a single book for his instruction, that was a good one and was principally an explanation of the classic orders, thus explaining why we discover in these old houses that their builders knew the value of such simple architectural virtues as simplicity, balance and good proportion in parts and in whole. Above all, there was an appreciation of good proportion which, about 1840, almost became a lost art. Many old Millbury doorways show that their makers did possess that understanding.

Mr. Wm. J. Gilson has built a new house a few rods west of the old one and now occupies the modern one and works the farm.

FREELAND-GOFFE-GARFIELD HOUSE

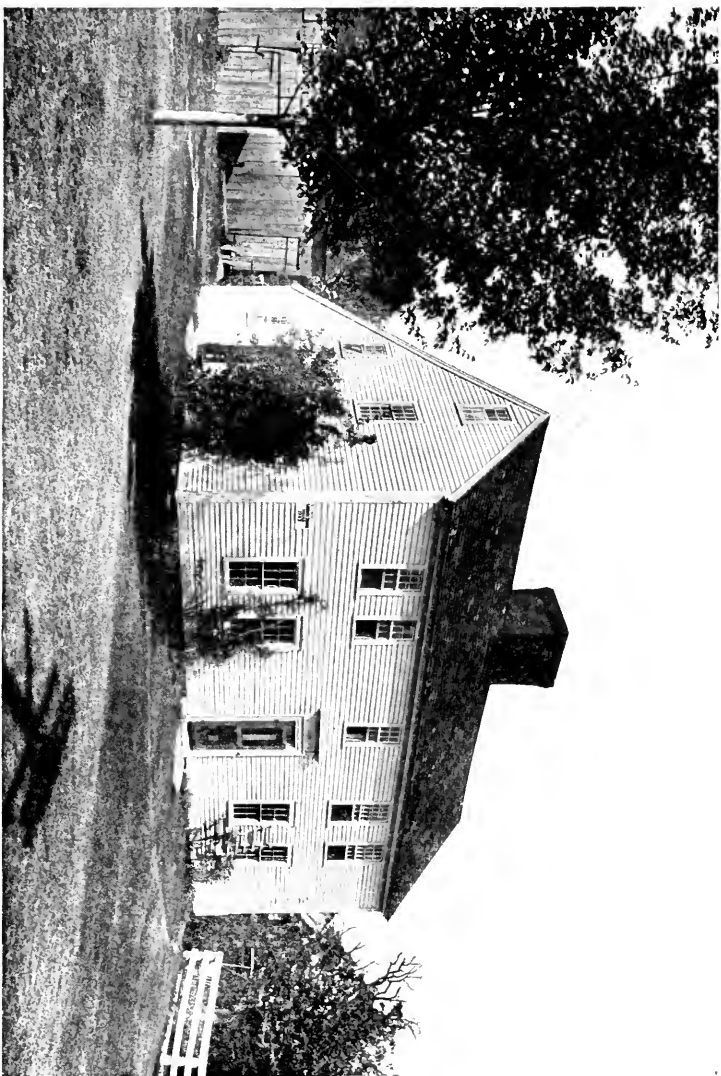

The residence of Andrew P. Garfield, facing the old common, is a fine old building. This house is reputed to have been built by Dr. Freeland in 1772. It has distinction in the small sized old window panes that are undisturbed in the ell part of the house. In 1872, the building was remodelled in the interior. Within are preserved many house utensils of early New England. It was the home of the Rev. Joseph Goffe, the best known old-time minister of the First Church of Millbury. Here "Priest Goffe," as he was called, for many years produced those sermons that stirred his hearers in the long ago. The old mansion has witnessed many stirring scenes in times past, but the old soldiers have vanished from the training ground in front, the church building has been removed to Bramanville, the old still-house went in flames, and the old settlers, one by one, have passed away.

FULLER-TRASK-DAVIDSON HOUSE

Probably the oldest (1742) of the houses still standing in town is that of Mr. Henry W. Davidson, at West Millbury. It is two-stories high and the roof has a long slope on the rear side. The old building, a relic of pre-Revolutionary times and an interesting memento of the early days of Sutton and Millbury, is still a substantial structure. Pleasantly situated on high ground it commands a good view of West Millbury and the surrounding country. A short distance south may be seen the old mansion of Col. Jonathan Holman, a son-in-law of Captain Trask. To the southeast may be seen Potter Hill, not far from which is the site of the home of John Davidson, an early ancestor. In this family were one Colonial and two Revolutionary soldiers.

We are indebted to Mr. Walter Davidson, secretary of the Worcester Society of Antiquity, for the following facts relating to the old homestead and the land about it. "The land was sold to Jonathan Fuller, by Nathan Kenney, April 6, 1742, for three hundred seventy pounds. Forty-eight acres being the amount. May 3, 1742, Jonathan Fuller sold to Samuel Trask (b. 1721, a nephew of Mrs. Jonathan Fuller), 'who has lived with me from infancy and whom I have adopted' one half of his farm, and the other half to be his at the death of said Fuller and wife, forty-eight acres and buildings, the considerations being tender love and regard and five shillings. Capt. Samuel Trask added parts to the farm as follows: from Wm. Fiske—June 6, 1742; also in 1747; from Timothy Carter, Sept. 23, 1748; from Jonathan Kenney, Dec. 13, 1752; from Amos Chase, April 20, 1762; from G. Gould, Oct. 4, 1763. The original barn was built in 1761, and was in use for one hundred and fifty years." To the building mentioned by Mr. Fuller, in 1742, an addition was made a short time afterwards. Over the front door appears the date, 1743. On the death of Samuel Trask, March 7, 1790, the property was inherited by his son Jonathan.

Senator George F. Hoar took a great interest in this old mansion and some years ago he paid a visit to the house, examining the old structure.

COL. JONATHAN HOLMAN HOUSE, WEST MILLBURY

Col. Jonathan Holman, a large real estate owner, possessed about three thousand acres. The following deed shows the amount of land on the Holman homestead where Colonel Holman built the mansion house, in 1812-13, and it also locates some of our early settlers of West Millbury:

"1758, March 14, Solomon Holman of Sutton, Deeded to Jonathan Holman the following:—

"All that my certain messuage or Tenement of housing and Land Situate in Sutton, afore sd where I now Dwell, containing by Estimation one hundred acres, be the same more or less & in what I call my homestead through which goes a Town way from ye precinct meeting house to Rams-horn pond. The whole bounded as follows—namely—northerly on Land of Samuel Trask—Easterly part on Land of Simon Tainter and partly on Land of said Jonathan Holman. Southerly partly on sd Town way & partly on land of Stephen Small—& westerly on Land of Jacob Snow & partly on Land of Abel Chase—also the half part of my Saw mill with the mill Dams thereto belonging—said mill stands on a stream running out of said pond with one half of all appurtenances to the mill belonging & one half ye Liberty of yard Room—said homestead acres comes westerly on land of Solomon Holman, Jr. Dwelling there on for myself my Heirs etc. do covenant and Engage the above-demised premises to him the said Jonathan Holman, etc, to secure and Defend by These Presents—(his mother's thirds should she out live).

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand & Seal This 14 Day of March In the 30th year of His majesty's Reign Anno Dom—1758—In the presence of { SOLOMON HOLMAN (seal) }"

This place was occupied in 1915 by Mr. John W. Pierce. The house is a large, commodious structure representative of the wealthy and influential New Englander of early days.

JACOBS-McGRATH HOUSE, WEST MILLBURY

This old building was, many years ago, the home of Deacon Elisha Jacobs, whose daughter was married to Sewall Brown, once a well-known citizen of the town. Sixty years ago the place was in the possession of Jedediah Bugbee. Next, it was owned by Patrick McGrath, father of the present occupant. The road at present ends here, but formerly it continued on by the home of Stephen Stockwell. On an old road, which formerly ran north from the home of the first Jonathan Waters, there once lived Timothy Allen, who is said to have been the Nimrod of this region. He once had a difficulty with the occupant of this Elisha Jacobs place and determined to get his revenge. A barrel of cider had been left exposed in the yard, whereupon Allen, early one morning, took a position where he could get a good sight of it, and he shot the spigot-hole so that the contents were released. When the owner went to remove his cider to the cellar, he found that the barrel was empty and, although he was puzzled for some time to know what had become of his beverage, ere long the bullet-hole was found and the mystery was solved. Tim had his revenge.

ELIAS LOVELL HOUSE

The Elias Lovell house was built on the usual lines of the country home of the past century with the addition of an ell. This is situated opposite the reservoir on Burbank hill near the Millbury-Sutton boundary. It is the birthplace of Mr. Russell B. Lovell, the nonogenarian. Until recently the property was owned by David Ring who married one of the family.

MANSFIELD-HALL-BALCOM HOUSE

The old house, owned by the heirs of Willard Balcom, is situated in West Millbury on the road leading to Auburn and Oxford. It is a two-story structure with a hip-roof and an outside wall of brick, one tier thick. The main building remains as it was originally built. The place was held by Thaddeus Hall previous to the Civil War. Thus it was the home of Orson Hall, his son, who, at the time of the capture of New Orleans by the Union forces in 1862, was the proprietor of the St. Charles Hotel in that city.

MARBLE-WATERS-HAIRYES HOUSE, WEST MILLBURY

This house, one of the oldest dwellings in town, was originally the residence of Deacon Solomon Marble who came here from the south part of the town (Sutton) previous to 1797. It is an old landmark. The place later came into the hands of 'Squire Simeon Waters from whom it descended to his son, Simeon Sylvester Waters, father of Lyman S. Waters. A later owner was Mr. Charles Buckley from whom it passed to Mr. Thomas Windle, who made extensive alterations on the buildings. The house took fire in the fall of 1913, but it was repaired. The property is now owned by Mr. Henry Glover.

DEACON MARCH PLACE, BRAMANVILLE

The house and farm situated on the northwestern side of the old road that led to West Millbury, i. e., on the southeastern side of Brierly Pond, and one of the old landmarks of Bramanville, is owned by Mr. William E. Horne, but was formerly occupied by Deacons Tyrus and David March. From an old deed (Dec. 19, 1806) we learn that Simeon Waters, previous to his purchase of the Dea. Solomon Marble farm, at West Millbury, from Joel Marble, was the owner of this March Place, purchasing it from Ebenezer Sibley. Other parties mentioned in this deed whose land adjoined were Col. Caleb Burbank, Carter and David Elliot, Abigail Sibley and Dr. Amasa Braman. From an old plan in possession of Lyman S. Waters, a grandson of 'Squire Simeon, one may see the course of the old road, now discontinued, which formerly ran on the West Shore of Brierly's Pond. Abigail Sibley, single, deeded land to Simeon Waters near his farm.

MARCY HOUSE

Just above the mill of John S. Rich, toward the old common, there is an old two-story house, which was once the home of Amos Singletary, a basket-maker, and a descendant of that family who early located here. He is not, however, the Amos Singletary who had the honor of being a member of the Provincial Congress. Here also once lived the Dwinells. Still later, this house was occupied by Jeremiah Marcy, a cousin of Wm. L. Marcy, who was a United States Senator, Governor of New York, 1832-1838, and an important United States official in 1853.

PIERCE HOUSE, WEST MILLBURY TOWN FARM, 1835-1913

This house and farm is the home of the Pierce family for Dr. Ebenezer Pierce of the Woburn branch of the family settled here. The farm is located but a short distance from the home of George I. Stowe, on the road leading to Auburn. The house was the home and office of the first Town Clerk of Millbury, 'Squire Aaron Pierce. Although at present this place seems to be too far removed to serve as the town clerk's office, at that time the Old Common was the center of the town. From the annals of the town, from old deeds and from other documents, we learn that the town clerk of the early days was influential in private as well as in public affairs. 'Squire Pierce was one of the old-school gentlemen and highly respected. Like 'Squire Simeon Waters, and 'Squire Ephraim Goulding, he was frequently consulted by the early citizens. The old house is two stories in height and sits a little back from the road. It has sheltered many older citizens who have passed through misfortunes and mishaps in life's struggles, and given them a haven of rest, free from turmoil and strife. It is related of one citizen, who for a time found a home here, that he one day disappeared, and was sought in vain. He was a man of good address, with good clothes, and had a considerable knowledge of law. One bright morning a fine barouche drove up to the door of the farm house and from it came the lost inmate of the farm. After securing his few belongings, he jumped into his equipage, waved his hand and disappeared for all time, so far as his residence here was concerned. He had found a wealthy client in another town, who was glad to get his legal services at a moderate price. We withhold his name but in days gone by it was a power here.

SMALL-STOWE FARM, WEST MILLBURY

Stephen Small, a Colonial soldier, was the original settler on the farm now occupied by G. Burton Stowe. This extends from the West Millbury Cemetery to the shore of Ramshorn Pond and it is noted for its production of hay, fruit, and vegetables. Capt. Samuel Small, a son of Stephen, was in the Revolutionary war. Aaron Small, a highly respected member of this family, who spent his life on the farm and for many years had extensive cider and vinegar works, was father of the late Samuel A. Small, one of the best-known citizens. From the labor of this family of Smalls fine orchards were developed which are still in a high state of production and are probably the largest apple orchards in town. From its very earliest settlement the farm remained in that family till a few years ago, when it was bought by Mr. G. B. Stowe, who has improved the property.

RUFUS STOCKWELL HOUSE

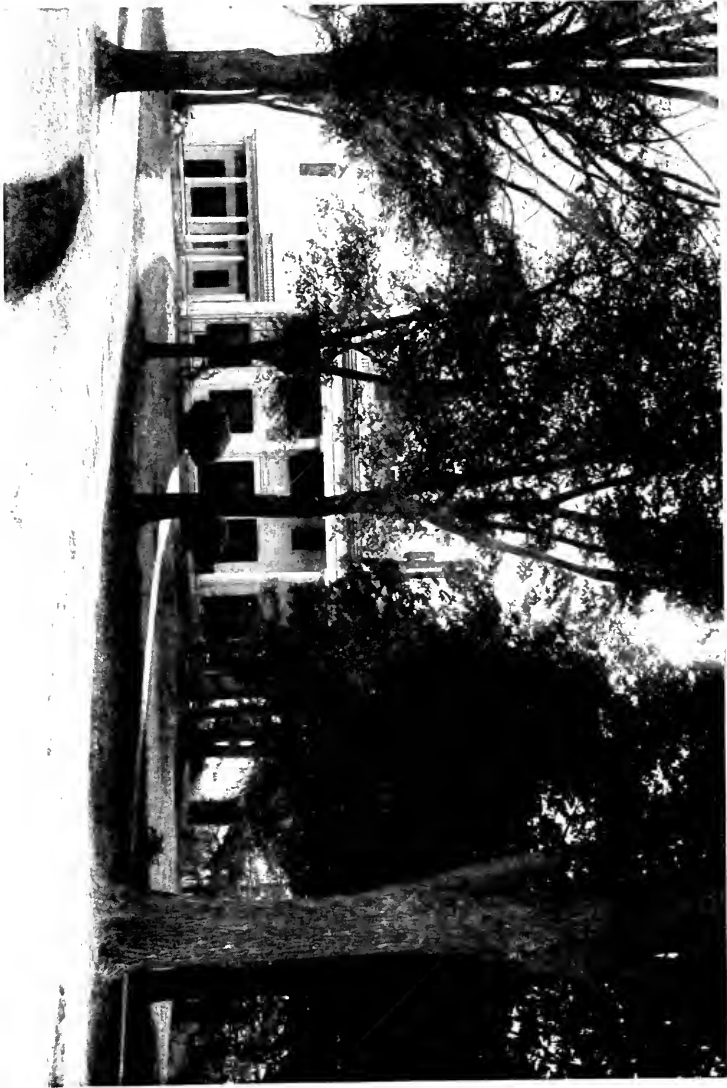

This house, situated on Martin Street near the corner of North Main, is one of the solid old structures which no doubt antedates the beginning of the town, and it is well preserved. It contains a buffet cupboard in a lower front room extending from the floor to the ceiling. A fireplace is still in existence, as of old. Wide timbers extend through the center of the ceiling in the rooms, as they commonly did in houses built a century or more ago. An old style stairway is still standing which leads to the story above. The interior of the old building suggests people and days long since passed away. The property is now occupied by descendants of Rufus Stockwell.

HOUSE OF WILLIAM H. STOCKWELL, WEST MILLBURY

This homestead is of great age, and was the home of several in the Pierce family, descendants of the deacon, Dr. Ebenezer Pierce. The farm adjoins that of Colonel Holman and that of Stephen Small. It is on the North Oxford road and stands as a landmark of early days. Members of this early household became connected with the Waters and Burbank families by marriage. Capt. Abijah Burbank's second wife, Mary, was the daughter of Deacon Ebenezer Pierce. The house later came into the hands of Robert Jones, who was a well-known citizen, held town office, and was deeply interested in religious matters and other good enterprises. He married one of the Pierce family. From Mr. Jones, the place passed into the hands of Mr. S. Stockwell, who married Lucine, a daughter of Mr. Jones.

TAINTER-STOWE HOUSE, WEST MILLBURY

The George I. Stowe house is one of the oldest in town, and was built about the time that the Henry W. Davidson house was erected. It is known that the structure has withstood the storms of a century and three-fourths, and it is still in good condition. This was the early home of the well-known Tainter family which figured largely in our early history, as we learn from the church and Revolutionary records which give us the names of many of this name. Mr. Stowe, the present owner of the property, has made great improvements on the farm. The farm is suited to general crops, especially cabbages, corn and apples. In a walnut grove a short distance from the house, there is an excellent spring of water from which the Indian of early days undoubtedly supplied himself, for numerous relics, such as arrow heads, have been found nearby. The present owner has utilized the spring for a system of water supply.

THE RUFUS WAIT HOUSE

This old place on the road to Bucks Village, just beyond the Tourtellotte House, or "The Lower Tavern," was once the home of the well-known Wait family. Two at least of these were soldiers of the Revolution, whose graves in the County-bridge cemetery are so marked. Rufus Wait resided here during the continuance of the Blackstone Canal and was in charge of two of the canal-locks which were then situated near this place, as we learn from his old account book (now in the possession of Mr. George F. Chase). The old building is two and one-half stories in height, similar to many of the old homes of Revolutionary days and is well-preserved. In front of the house still stands the old horse-block, formerly used by members of this family in mounting their steeds for a ride to mill, meeting, or elsewhere. Near the well is an old Indian relic, a mortar about ten inches in diameter. The house is at present occupied by members of the Thomas Hill family.

NELSON WALLING HOUSE

The Walling house, one of the finest residences in town, is situated on spacious grounds bounded by Miles, Main and Canal streets. Between the latter street and this mansion there were several locks of the Blackstone Canal. On this location originally stood the home of the March family, and the place was in their hands for a long time. The present house was built by Clough R. Miles, Esq., who was an important figure in town in his day, for the old justices of the peace often held court here, with the 'squire presiding. 'Squire Mills of Sutton also frequently sat on the bench here in the preliminary trial of cases. These justices, together with 'squire Randall, the old-time lawyer, expounded much law here, in the days now passed away.

Mr. Nelson Walling extensively remodelled the house and graded the grounds which previously showed traces of the excavations made for the canal locks.

THE WATERS-SABINE-CARTER HOUSE

Previous to building this house, Asa Waters, the first, lived on the Bramanville main street, at the east corner of the lane leading to his factory (Rhodes St.). The elm planted in front of this earlier house attained a great size and was not cut down until after 1900.

The date when the house on Elmwood Street was built is uncertain; but was not earlier than 1771 and not later than 1793. It was then the stateliest and most comfortable residence in the town. A typical New England village dwelling of the best class, the house had four square rooms on each floor of the main house, besides a capacious ell. A huge chimney arose from its center. The front door faced the street and opened upon a little square fenced garden, such as give so much dignity to some of the houses that have survived from that period in Salem and Newburyport. In 1805, when Asa Waters had reached the age of sixty-three years, he deeded half the house and grounds to his son Samuel, then living in a smaller house about 100 rods to the northeast, remains of which can still be seen in the field. At the same date as that deed, Asa Waters made his will, bequeathing to the son Samuel the remaining half of the house, but making the reservations, common in old wills, in favor of the widow, Samuel's mother, so that the latter should have a comfortable home in the house, where her son should continue to furnish his mother with the comforts and luxuries to which she had been accustomed. Shortly after this, Samuel and his family removed to the mansion to live with his father who survived until 1813, and there Samuel lived until his own death in 1858, and there Samuel's widow continued to live until her decease in 1870. Asa Waters, his children, his grandchildren and great-grandchildren occupied the house for about one hundred years.

Elder Samuel Waters, as he was called, was deeply interested in the welfare of the church of which he was elder, holding his time and his means ever at its service. He was active as a manufacturer and, about 1828, built the stone mill on the site or just above the site where his father had established the first armory on the Singletary. The stone structure is now the Holbrook Mills (p. 258). He is remembered as a stirring man, intensely interested in whatever subject commanded his attention. His farm was a fine one. On the death of Samuel, the property passed to his son-in-law, Harvey Goodell, and then to another son-in-law, George Sabine, who lived there many years. Henry W. Carter acquired the property in 1883 and has made alterations and extensive improvements.

Approached from the east the house seems to stand at the focus of a noble amphitheatre of hills, with out-buildings and barns stretching to an imposing length. They stand on a terracing of masonry walls, below which runs a clear brook. Altogether it looks the ideal home of the comfortable farmer. Our illustration has caught the charm of the place. Its windows overlook a prospect of broad meadows towards the river, above which rise the trees, roofs and towers of the center village.

WELLMAN-CARTER HOUSE, OLD COMMON

The Wellman-Carter house was built, about 1747, for the Rev. James Wellman, the first North Parish minister. The house is a large plain wooden building with an ell. The old structure stands on the corner of the road leading to Auburn. Here resided Dr. Timothy Longley and Cyrus Faulkner, worthies of old days. The house and farm many years ago came into the hands of Mr. Rufus Carter, who lived here for many years.

WATERS-WOOD-SOULE FARM, WEST MILLBURY

The Soule place, one of the largest and best farms in the town, was originally settled by Nathaniel Waters, a brother of Jonathan, who settled the C. R. Harris farm adjoining. Portions of the original buildings with the water privilege were sold to Solomon Holman by Nathaniel Waters, but some land was later added by John G. Wood. From the Waters family the farm passed to Capt. Amasa Wood and for nearly one hundred years it remained in the Wood family. As described in the sketch of Captain Wood, boot and shoe manufacturing was once carried on here. The old factory building and the country store kept by the Wood family have been moved back from their original location. About 1870 this farm, then owned by Mr. John G. Wood, was the most noted stock farm in the county.

OLD HOTELS

The old hotel, known as "The Lower Tavern," has stood for many years and was a place well known throughout the county. It has had many proprietors. During the time it was occupied by Charles A. Tourtellotte, the hall in the old building was a popular place for dancing-parties. During the time of Mr. Tourtellotte's occupancy he was the owner of the once famous "Tom Hyer", a horse that in his prime could trot a mile in 2:37. "Old Tom" appeared almost annually at the Worcester County horse and cattle show, and nearly always won his race. The place was famous for its bird-suppers. Later, landlord John White, a son-in-law of Mr. Tourtellotte, marrying his oldest daughter, kept the hotel for over twenty years and was the most popular hotel keeper in town. He was a crack shot, and always had a larder full of game-birds.

The old Hotel kept by Simon Farnsworth, and later by Elijah A. Johnson, stood on the site of the present Town Hall. It was destroyed by fire and its ruins were unsightly for a long time. One old barn, which escaped the flames, was used for many years as a livery stable.

The Marble House now fronting the old common, once occupied by Dr. Braman and Ebenezer Chapman, was at one time used as a hotel.

The house now occupied by Mr. Calstrom, and situated on the short road running from the Old Common, was occupied some years ago by Capt. Nymphas Longley and Isaac Redding, and in early days was known as Buck's Tavern. Nahum W. Chamberlain once owned the property.

The Central House was located over Dunton and Winter's store.

The list of the old hotel keepers of Millbury includes the following: Dr. Amasa Braman, Dr. William M. Benedict, Landlor Longley, Elijah A. Johnson, Jesse Pierce (who ran the American Temperance House on the present location of the Sweetser house), Simon Farnsworth, Elias Lovell, Charles A. Tourtellotte, John M. White, McAleer Bros., Timothy Cotter, Charles T. Pratt, Edgar R. Bartlett.

PRESENT HOTELS

The St. Charles Hotel, Bramanville, said to have been built by Dr. Benedict, is kept by Wm. E. Bartlett, son of the former proprietor. The place was once the residence of Dana A. Braman, and later came into the hands of Elias Lovell, who made some additions to the building and used it for a hotel. In front of this hotel is the terminus of the electric car line at Bramanville, so that it is easy of access from Worcester.

The Belfont House, formerly kept by Mrs. B. Branagan, is located at Millbury Center.

CHAPTER XXVII

PROFESSIONAL AND LITERARY

The first male child born within the present limits of the town of Millbury was a lawyer, for Amos Singletary, during the period which included the Revolutionary War, attended to legal matters and held the position of Justice of the Peace and Quorum, an office that was of considerable importance and local dignity. Aaron Pierce, Esq., the first Town Clerk, was a justice of the peace, Josiah Prentice, Esq., Josiah Stiles, Esq., and Thomas Pope, Esq., who lived at the Old Common, practised law at the time when Millbury became a separate town.

At a later date Gen. William S. Lincoln, Alexander Hamilton, Esq., and Edward W. Lincoln, Esq., all of whom came from Worcester, practised law in Millbury. Abraham G. Randall, Esq., George W. Livermore, Esq., Clough R. Miles, Esq., and George A. Flagg, Esq., resided in Millbury for some time and practised law. Asa H. Waters, Esq., practised law a short time before devoting his time to manufacturing. John Hopkins, Esq., a justice of the Superior Court, was a resident of Millbury. (See personal sketch.)

Formerly, criminal and civil cases were tried before the local justices of the peace and Millbury was the scene of many such trials, but with the decline of the power placed in the hands of these officials the number of local attorneys became less.

Henry W. Aiken, Esq., assistant clerk of courts in Worcester County, was for many years a member of the law firm of Potter and Aiken, with an office in Worcester. Mr. Aiken has also maintained an office in Millbury. Thomas H. Sullivan, Esq., a native and resident of Millbury, maintains a law office in Worcester. He has frequently been counsel for the town. Charles B. Perry, Esq., bail commissioner, is a resident of Millbury, but maintains a law office in Worcester in company with the Hon. John Alden Thayer, ex-Congressman, in the firm of Thayer and Perry. Mr. Perry has for some years served the town as moderator at its annual meetings and he is recognized as an authority on the laws and the rules of procedure governing town meetings. Herbert S. Hopkins, Esq., son of Judge Hopkins, maintained a law office in Farnsworth Block. Thomas L. Brown, Esq., was once a lawyer in town, but he has lately maintained an office in Worcester. John W. Sheehan, Esq., who was born in Millbury and for some years lived here, has maintained a law office in Worcester in the firm of Sheehan and Cutting. Archer R. Greeley, Esq., who was born at West Millbury and spent his boyhood and youth in this town, has been for a number of years a lawyer in Webster.

The medical profession was represented among the very first settlers within the present bounds of Millbury for in the Sutton Proprietors' Book we learn that Dr. Boylstone possessed land near Dorothy Pond and also near the Old Common. In 1740, Dr. Ebenezer Pierce, the progenitor of the West Millbury Pierce family, settled on Grass Hill, West Millbury. A friend described him as a man of "unexceptionable character." He was a deacon in the North Parish Church.

Among the physicians who were practicing during the early days after the establishment of Millbury as a separate town was Dr. William M. Benedict, who was also prominent in business and public affairs. With him was associated in business Dr. Amasa Braman, after whom Bramanville was named. Dr. Azor Phelps at the time lived at the Old Common. Dr. Phineas Longley also lived at the Old Common in the house built by the Rev. James Wellman.

At a later period Dr. Leonard Spaulding was a successful practitioner. (See sketch.) Dr. Asa Andrews was a young and successful practitioner who in attending a patient contracted blood-poisoning which caused his death. Dr. Joseph E. Corlew was a successful physician and practiced here for a number of years.

Dr. William Bowen Moore, Dr. George C. Webber, Dr. William H. Lincoln and Dr. Robert Booth all are noticed in the individual sketches.

In 1853, Dr. Henry G. Davis, a specialist on curvatures and club feet, was located in town. Dr. B. F. Greene, who was also a local preacher, practiced for a few years. Mr. Maurice Welsh, who came from Ireland was a "bone-setter."

Dr. Jacob R. Lincoln, son of Dr. William H. Lincoln, succeeded to his father's practice. In 1888, he began the practice of medicine in Millbury and he has pursued this with success, for many years being the school physician. Dr. Albert G. Hurd began his career as a physician when he commenced practicing in Millbury in 1895. He has continued successfully as a general practitioner. In the same year Dr. Charles A. Church began the practice of medicine in town, coming from New York state, where he had practiced previously. His career has been a successful one. Dr. Gustave Desy, although having a large number of patients among the French-speaking people, yet has a considerable practice among people of other tongues. Dr. Arthur A. Brown, a Millbury boy, began the practice of medicine a few years ago in Fall River, but after six months he moved to this town where he has taken up an extensive practice. He has succeeded to an extent to the practice of the late Dr. Booth, especially with some of the fraternal organizations.

Dr. David March, who was born in 1785, and Dr. Alden March, who was born in 1795 and later became president of the American Medical Association, were reared on the March farm that is situated on the road to North Grafton. (See Genealogy.)

Dr. George A. Jordan, Dr. Cyrus F. Carter, Dr. Henry W. Cronin and Dr. Thomas H. Cronin were Millbury boys, but have practised elsewhere.

In the homeopathic school of medicine Dr. Southgate was an early practitioner. Later homeopathic physicians were Dr. Underwood and Dr. H. A. Clarke who lived in Millbury in 1871. He died young and was succeeded by Dr. C. C. Slocomb, who came to this town from Rutland, but unfortunately he was stricken in his prime with paralysis from which he never fully recovered. He, in turn, was succeeded by his son, Dr. George A. Slocomb, who had the unique distinction of serving, in 1888, at the birth of quadruplets, all girls, children of Mr. and Mrs. Frank DeGroote. Although Dr. Slocomb has moved to Worcester he continues to practice in Millbury.

Notice has been made of the clergymen of Millbury in the accounts which have been given of the various churches: (See chapter on Churches; also individual sketches of the Rev. Joseph Goffe, Bishop Thomas J. Shahan, D. D., and the Rev. George A. Putnam).

Among the writers that have lived in Millbury may be mentioned some members of the March family whose ancestral home stood at the junction of Main, Miles and Canal streets, although a branch of the family later resided on the road to North Grafton.

Daniel March, D. D., a Congregational clergyman, was born in Millbury, July 21, 1816. He was a pupil at the old Millbury Academy, was graduated from Yale College in 1840 and from Yale Divinity School a few years later. He was given the degree of A. M. by Yale and the degree of D. D. by Western University of Pennsylvania. He held pastorates in Nashua, N. H., in Philadelphia, and in Woburn, Mass. Dr. March was author of the following works: "Night Scenes in the Bible," "Walks and Homes of Jesus," "Our Father's House," "Home Life in the Bible," "The First Khedive," "Morning Light in Many Lands," "From Dark to Dawn."

Dr. Alden March, M. D., was born at the March place which stood on the road to North Grafton, in 1795. He was graduated from Brown College. He resided at Albany, N. Y. He derived literary distinction from numerous lectures and papers on medical and surgical science. He was president of the American Medical Association and was a founder of the Albany Medical College and of the Albany City Hospital. He died at Albany in 1869.

Prof. Francis A. March, who was born in Millbury, resided later at Easton, Penn. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Commission on Amended Orthography. (See Genealogy.)

It has been claimed that Mr. Manton Marble, the distinguished journalist of New York City and at one time the editor of "The New York World," was born in Millbury, but the town records do not bear this out. However, his grandfather, Deacon Solomon Marble, owned the Simeon Waters farm at West Millbury and here in his early days Manton Marble was well known. He also frequently visited his relatives in the town during his active career in journalism. His literary productions were numerous, among them being an article on "English and Scottish Ballads," which was published in the "Knickerbocker Magazine" in July, 1859.

Other Millbury men who have made contributions to literature are Col. Asa H. Waters, Bishop Willard F. Mallalieu, Bishop Thomas J. Shahan, The Rev. George A. Putnam, and Mr. John C. Crane, but for an account of the writings of these men we refer the reader to the Individual Sketches.

But one bound book has come to light bearing a Millbury imprint, the title page of which reads as follows:

"The Destruction of Jerusalem—an absolute and irresistible Proof of the Divine origin of Christianity—Including a narrative of the Calamities which befel the Jews so far as they tend to verify Our Lord's Predictions relative to that event—with a Brief description of the City and Temple—Millbury, Mass. Printed and published by B. T. Abbro, 1833.”

Mr. Albro's printing office was located on Elmwood Street, in the house formerly owned by Tyler Waters, and also known as the “Penniman” house. The book has for a frontispiece a picture of the Temple. It was bound in colored boards, with leather back. In the year previous to issuing the above, Mr. Albro printed the “confession of Faith of the Presbyterian Church in Millbury,” which is a leaflet of eight pages.

In the same year that the history of Jerusalem was issued by Mr. Albro, a pamphlet of twenty-four pages appeared with the title: “Election to Life Eternal—A prize of inestimable worth, which everyone, by seasonable and proper attention may make his own—By Samuel Baker—Republished for Erastus Spaulding—Millbury (Mass.). Printed by Benjamin T. Albro, 1833.” A pamphlet is also preserved with the following title: “The Laws of Millbury Academy, in Millbury, Massachusetts—Enacted by The Board of Trustees—Millbury. Printed by Benjamin T. Albro—1833—”

A leather-bound copy has been preserved entitled, “The Psalms of David, imitated in the language of The New Testament and applied to the Christian State and Worship—By Isaac Watts, D. D.” This book was issued for a Millbury man as we read,—“Dated—Sutton (Mass.) Printed by Sewall Goodridge For Caleb Burbank, sold by him at wholesale and retail—1808—”

A large board-covered book, illustrated, with directions for youth, was brought out, evidently for school use and, in place of the usual imprint, “Sold by Caleb Burbank, Millbury, (Mass.)” is printed.

In 1831, a newspaper was printed called “The Millbury Plebian,” a small sheet, whose existence was of short duration. Later we find “The Millbury Chronicle.”

Under the title is found the following: "Vol. 1—No. 6—Published every Friday morning, by Fred W. Fletcher, Armory Block, Main Street, Millbury"—In this number (July 6, 1877) is found an account of the Studlefunk Parade of July 4th in that year.

"The Millbury Journal" was established, in 1894, by Frederick H. Greenwood who was editor and proprietor. It was continued by him until 1906, when he sold to Charles A. Kirtland, of Deep River, Conn. who owned it but a few months.

A small sheet was issued called "The Blackstone Valley Dispatch," for a brief period. The first number dated Nov. 2, 1906, contained a number of news items from towns outside of Millbury. The paper was published in Farnsworth Block and was edited by A. R. Evans.

In May, 1907, The Blackstone Valley Publishing Co. bought all the interest in these papers, and since Jan. 1, 1908, Mr. Charles F. Holman has been proprietor, publisher and editor. Mr. Holman has had extensive experience in newspaper work, having been long connected with "The Worcester Telegram" and the "Worcester Evening Gazette." He was a former postmaster in Millbury, is an assessor of the town, a deacon in the Second Congregational Church, and has filled many important positions both in town affairs and in local societies. He is a descendant of Lieut. David Holman, a Revolutionary patriot; also the son of a veteran of the Civil War, Lieut. Rodney Holman (see Genealogy). In connection with publishing the Journal, Mr. Holman has a printing office, from which have been issued town documents and other printed matter of local interest. Mr. Holman first issued a design for stationery, to be used in calling attention to the Centennial of 1913.

PUBLIC LIBRARY

For some years previous to 1864, there was at Millbury Centre an organization called "The Society of Social Friends," composed of the teachers and pupils of Millbury Academy, which had a library consisting (with what had come to them from the Agricultural and Atheneum libraries) of about six hundred volumes. April 7, 1864, a meeting of this society was held at The Millbury Bank, at which it was voted: "That the library belonging to the Society be offered to the Town, for the purpose of founding a free public Library. (Signed) William H. Harrington, Silas Dunton, D. B. Chase, committee of Society of Social Friends." April 11th of the same year, the town "voted to accept the library from the society," and also chose a board of trustees, consisting of David Atwood, Osgood H. Waters, and Hosea Crane. The chairman of the school committee and the principal of the High School were members ex-officio.

H. E. Rockwell, postmaster, was librarian. The library was later moved to the High School building and the principal was placed in charge. After a time it was established in the store of Henry A. Aiken, who was librarian until 1872, when the library was moved to Masonic Block, Main Street, where Mrs. Abby S. Freeman was librarian.

After the building of the Town Hall the books were placed in the present room. Mr. Henry T. Maxwell followed Mrs. Freeman as librarian. The present librarian is Miss Carolyn C. Waters, daughter of an original trustee. Miss Almyra B. Longley is assistant librarian. The first catalogue was issued in 1872, and a card catalogue was made in 1900.

The library room is pleasantly located on the lower floor of the Town House and is easy of access to its patrons. This is owing to the foresight of our late esteemed fellow-citizen, Judge John Hopkins, who, when the Town-House was building, recommended that the room now used as a library be set apart for that purpose. On the wall of the room are displayed the oil portraits of the godfather of Millbury, Gen. Caleb Burbank, and his wife, gifts of the late Mrs. Gardner Burbank, of Fitchburg. Some years ago an offer was made by Mr. Carnegie, of a library building on certain conditions, which the town rejected. From the report of the Trustees for the year ending 1912, we learn that the library had been accessible for 231 days. The total circulation for the year was 23,551. One hundred and sixty new works were added during the year, making the total number in the library a little over 9,200 volumes. The library is one of the foremost in the state among towns with similar resources. A work with the children of the town, consisting of talks on various subjects by competent persons, has been undertaken by the Woman's Club under the direction of the librarian, with good success.

The largest donors to the library have been Mr. Calvin Barker, who left one thousand dollars; his sister, Lucy Barker, who bequeathed one hundred dollars; and Dea. Leonard Dwinell, who willed to the town, for library purposes, one hundred dollars. A recent gift of books was made by the Rev. J. F. Griffin.

In 1915, Mr. Andrew Carnegie gave the town twelve thousand and five hundred dollars for the erection of a new Public Library Building and Miss Delia C. Torrey donated the land on which the building was erected.

The trustees of the Public Library in 1915 were Mr. James W. Robertson, Mr. Edward F. Rice, and Dr. Albert G. Hurd.

CHAPTER XXVIII

INDEPENDENT SKETCHES: BIOGRAPHICAL

HENRY W. CARTER

Henry W. Carter, descendant of the Rev. Thomas Carter on his father's side and of the Rev. J. W. Campbell on his mother's side, is a native of Millbury, having been born in one of the historic localities, the Old Common. In his early manhood he was a school teacher and in this capacity influenced the town through his former pupils. For a period he undertook the study of medicine but his preference was for farming. He has worked extensively as a contractor, having been one of the builders of the Worcester and Southbridge Electric Railway. His advice is often sought in appraising the value of property.

Mr. Carter owns the farm formerly possessed by Elder Samuel Waters, one of the best in the town. He has improved the buildings and equipment and brought the entire property to a high degree of productiveness and orderliness. The estate contains a variety of soil, and is adapted to a variety of products.

More than fifty years ago Elder Waters established an irrigating system on this farm by taking water from the brook and conducting it over parts of the land successfully.

Mr. Carter has held the position of selectman for several years. He has been an overseer of the poor, superintendent of streets, assessor, and member of the finance committee, being for several years its chairman. He is a Republican in politics. His church affiliations are with the Second Congregational Church. He is a thirty-second degree Mason and a Past Grand in the Odd Fellows. Since April 1, 1892, he has been a trustee, since April 2, 1897, a member of the investment committee of the Millbury Savings Bank and, in 1914, he was chosen as one of its vice-presidents.

Mr. Carter has travelled extensively in this country as well as in Mexico and Cuba.

(See Genealogy.)

GEORGE F. CHASE

George F. Chase is a member of that ancient family whose immigrant ancestor was Aquila Chase, of Newbury, Mass. His descendants early appeared at Sutton and have occupied prominent places in the history of Sutton and Millbury, as well as of other towns. From the inscriptions found in the old cemeteries of Millbury, we learn that members of this family bore a part in the Revolutionary struggle. For years Mr. Chase was one of the strongest advocates for a water-supply in the town, even though at its beginning the project was unpopular, but he had the satisfaction, at last, of receiving the commendation of those who had opposed him. He first called the attention of the citizens to the need of a history of Millbury, and when, in 1905, the matter was brought up by him in town meeting, it received favorable attention, so that steps were taken to make the history a reality. He was chairman of the committee in charge of this work, but because of ill health gave it up in 1914, retaining his place on the committee.

Mr. Chase is a contractor and builder of many years' experience, and secures a large share of the patronage of the citizens.

Mr. Chase has served on the board of selectmen several times. He was elected to the State Legislature of 1896, serving on the committee on drainage, and again elected to the legislature of 1897, serving as House chairman of the same committee. He is a Past Grand of Morning Star Lodge of Odd Fellows; a member of Olive Branch Lodge of Masons; and Past District Deputy of the Royal Arcanum. He is a member of the Second Congregational Church in which he has served on the Standing Committee and as Superintendent of the Sunday School, for many years. He has served as president of the Worcester South District of Sunday Schools.

(See Genealogy.)

JOHN C. CRANE

John Calvin Crane received his education in the common and high schools of Grafton, and in the Academy at Lancaster, Mass. At the age of sixteen he was a correspondent of the Boston Post. He was later employed as a shoemaker at Grafton and at West Millbury. In 1858 he made a tour of Canada and the Great Lakes, visiting the Macinac and Green Bay Indians. He visited Prairie du Chien, where he first had a view of the "Father of Waters." Proceeding to St. Paul in this early period, he found himself enrolled among the Pioneers of Minnesota. At Richfield, Minnesota, Mr. Crane established a depot for the sale of boots to the settlers who came from a distance of twenty and thirty miles with wheat to exchange for footwear made in Massachusetts. At that time the state was swarming with Indians. For a time Mr. Crane lived near the scenes depicted in Longfellow's Hiawatha, around the Laughing Minnehaha. Leaving his business in charge of a trustworthy friend, Mr. Crane pushed into the Indian country, hunting, fishing, and studying the ways and customs of the nomads of the great Northwest. He was reported to have been killed by them, and his friends around the Fort gave up all hope of ever seeing him again, but one day he appeared, sound and healthy, wearing on his face the real Indian tan.

In 1859, Mr. Crane closed out his business in Minnesota. In Boston he learned the art of painting on glass, then much in vogue. He later returned to Millbury, and again entered the employ of A. Wood & Sons.

Soon after 1880, Mr. Crane engaged in literary work, making researches in family history, uniting his historical sketches, magazine articles (among them being an article on the "Ponds of Worcester County"), biography, and poems, which had appeared in various periodicals and newspapers, sometimes under his own name, and at others under a nom de plume. His patrons in genealogical work include many distinguished people. During 1883 and 1884, in various towns in the country, he lectured on temperance and other subjects. In 1885, he was licensed by the Millbury Baptist Church, of which he is a member, to preach the Gospel.

In 1891, Mr. Crane became a member of the second expedition of Capt. Willard Glazier to the sources of the Mississippi River. This expedition was composed of eighteen white men and one Indian, and the result of the explorations was favorable to the claim put forth, in 1881, by Captain Glazier, i. e. that he had found the source of the Mississippi in a lake beyond Itasca. Mr. Crane has been, for many years, a persistent searcher for relics of the Indians. Among his specimens are implements of the Nipmucks, the Micmacs, and Narragansetts.

Mr. Crane is the author of the following publications: "Colonel Thomas Gilbert, the leader of the New England Tories," "Jonathan Holman, a Revolutionary Colonel," "Asa Holman Waters, Memorial," "Peter Whitney, and His History of Worcester County," "Major-General Burbank, an Early Paper Maker," "The Nipmucks and Their Country," "George Sumner Memorial," "What Guns in King Philip's War," "History of Millbury in County History of 1889," "Champions of Freedom."

(See Genealogy.)

DAMIEN DUCHARME

Damien Ducharme, one of the best-known citizens of French extraction, was born in Contrecoeur, Canada, in 1847. He was educated in the common schools of his native place and in an evening school of Millbury. He came to Millbury June 23, 1865, when seventeen years of age, and began work as a chore-boy in the Cordis Mills for which he received five dollars a week. He afterwards became a loom-fixer, working here and in a cotton mill at Providence, R. I. From that place he went to Woonsocket and followed the same trade. In 1873, he returned to Millbury and entered the employ of Joseph Faneuf in a meat market at Bramanville with whom he remained four years. Upon leaving that place, in company with Thomas York, he opened a bake-shop at Fall River. In June, 1879, he again returned to Millbury and opened a meat and provision store in the basement of the old Cunningham Block, under the firm name of York & Ducharme, at the same time continuing the bake-shop at Fall River, both places being under his management. In 1881, he bought out the interest of Mr. York and conducted the business alone.

In 1888, Mr. Ducharme bought of the Emerson estate the land and buildings on North Main Street, occupied in part by the store of Warren Sweetser and the drug store of N. H. Sears. Some of the buildings were removed to the rear and some to Church street. In 1892, the brick block which is now partly occupied by Mr. Ducharme for his business was built.

Mr. Ducharme is one of the largest property owners of the town, a man of sound judgment, and a good financier. For over twenty-five years he has served as trustee of the Millbury Savings Bank, and except for a few years at the beginning of his trusteeship, he has been a member of the board of investment. In 1914, he was elected as one of the vice-presidents of the bank. He has served the town in the capacity of selectman.

· SILAS DUNTON

Silas Dunton who is ninety-seven years of age is one of the best known citizens of the town. The family of Mr. Dunton dates back to Samuel Dunton, the New England ancestor, who is known to have lived at Reading, in 1644. Moses Dunton, father of Silas, was a blacksmith and moved here from Sturbridge. At one time he had a shop of his own, but later was employed in the gun-works of Asa Waters. As assistant to his father, Silas Dunton worked in the shop for a short time, but when still a youth he entered the employ of A. G. Stiles & Co., who owned a general store. As a young man three years were passed as a salesman at Louisville, Ky., in the boat and shoe business, in the employ of Capt. A. Wood. Leaving this occupation he became a clerk in the dry-goods store of Hardon & Hunt, of Worcester. Later, he worked for a short time in a clothing store at Boston, then for a short time he was a clerk in Millbury. His next position was in charge of a store owned by Benedict & Denney, at North Oxford. In 1848, he became a partner in the firm of Robbins & Dunton, at Millbury, continuing for three years, when he became the sole proprietor. In addition to a general store, located in Randall Block, Mr. Dunton, in company with Mr. Denney, added a drug-store, which was continued for a few years. Mr. Denney later withdrew, and Mr. Dunton took his son-in-law, James A. Morse, into partnership, continuing for some time, until the store was sold and went into the possession of Crane & Aldrich. (Rufus R. Crane and Samuel W. Aldrich.)

Mr. Dunton, in company with other Millbury men, caught the oil-fever once raging in Canada, but, not meeting with success in this venture, he returned to Millbury and bought back his old business, continuing it under the name of Dunton & Morse. In 1872, the firm of Dunton & Winter (Silas Dunton and Thomas A. Winter) was formed, which from that time to 1915 was continued, carrying on an extensive trade in groceries and dry goods. Several years ago Mr. Dunton retired from active management and Mr. Winter has conducted the business. In 1915 Mr. Winter became sole proprietor.

Mr. Dunton is a mason of high standing and, since 1850, has been a member of Olive Branch Lodge. In 1868, he was representative to the General court. He is a man of a pleasant, genial nature and his long life has been passed mostly in his native place. His great age covers almost the entire history of the town.

(See Genealogy.)

JAMES H. FERGUSON

James H. Ferguson, son of John Ferguson, was born in Bristol, Rhode Island. He received his education in the schools of that town and spent his spare time on the farm. His trade of tinsmith and plumber was learned at Saundersville. In 1869, he came to Millbury where he has since resided. In 1886, he was a member of the firm of Crane & Ferguson, hardware dealers. Later in Odd Fellows' Block he carried on the hardware business together with the pursuit of his trade in his own name. In 1914, he moved to the Arcade building.

For years Mr. Ferguson has been an active politician in the Republican party, being frequently delegated to attend its conventions and he has many times held the position of chairman of the Republican town committee. He has served on the Board of Selectmen and is at present secretary of the Board of Health. In 1894, he was chosen to represent this district in the State Legislature and he was again elected in 1912.

He is a member of Olive Branch lodge, F. & A. M., of Tyrian Royal Arch Chapter, and of the Worcester County Commandery of Knight Templars.

COL. GEORGE A. FLAGG

Col. George A. Flagg, son of Benjamin, was born in Millbury, in 1845. For many years he resided here and is pleasantly remembered by our older citizens. He received his education in the schools of Millbury, at Phillips Exeter Academy, and at Harvard University, graduating from the college in 1866 and from Harvard Law School in 1868. He took an active part in politics, representing the district of which Millbury formed a part, in the General Court. He served as secretary of the Republican State Committee. His rank of colonel was received from his service on the staff of Governor Robinson. He was a member of the School Committee. He was at one time associated with his father in business at the Millbury Cotton Mills. In 1879, he became connected with the Calumet & Hecla Mining Co. and, in 1893, was made its secretary and treasurer. Some years ago he moved to Holliston, where he now resides.

JOHN GEGENHEIMER

John Gegenheimer, agent of the Cordis Mills prior to 1891, was conspicuous for his success in advancing the interests of that industry and of the welfare of its employees. He served the town as chief of the fire department and in other ways manifested his public spirit and devotion to the prosperity of the community. He was treasurer of the Millbury Electric Light Co.

He now resides at Needham where he is engaged in the hardware and plumbing business.

JOHN R. GREENWOOD

Mr. John R. Greenwood, widely known as a successful mill superintendent, came to Millbury in 1897 from Dexter, Maine, where for fifteen years he was agent in the Dexter Woolen Mills. In January, 1898, he took local charge of the affairs of the Mayo Woolen Co. which purchased the Mowry A. Lapham mill and under his direction repairs and alterations were made in the structure and machinery. The work begun at this mill has been continued by the later additions of recent machinery and similar improvements have been made under his supervision in other mills owned by the same company, viz.,—the "Wheeler" mills, the "Pinafore" mill, and the "Crane and Waters" mill. Thus under his direction the number of mills has increased to four and the business of the company has greatly expanded.

In 1913 and 1914, Mr. Greenwood was clerk of the Board of Selectmen and in 1915 was its chairman, having become a candidate in response to solicitations from business men of the town.

Mr. Greenwood has proved himself to be a good financier, a successful manufacturer and a loyal citizen whose efforts have contributed to the growth and development of the town.

HUDSON WARREN HAKES

Hudson Warren Hakes, manufacturer and inventor, is the son of Henry Hudson Hakes, a Civil War veteran. He was born in Millbury, July 5, 1853, and during his boyhood attended the local public schools. At the age of eleven he worked for five cents an hour under John Hovey on the Waters' farm watering tobacco on the same piece of ground now occupied by his manufacturing establishment. He later worked in the Millbury Cotton mill, then operated by Harrington and Flagg, and was afterwards employed in the sash and blind shop of C. D. Morse and Co.

THE MILLBURY MACHINE COMPANY

THE H. W. HAKES MANUFACTURING CO. SHOP

When in his early twenties Mr. Hakes worked with his uncle, Mr. George Sweetser (brother of Warren Sweetser), at the Gilbert Loom Company of Worcester. Here he worked on loom construction and acquired a knowledge in the structure of looms which aided him in his later achievements. He afterwards was employed at the Crompton Loom Works, then located on Green St., Worcester.

In 1879, Mr. Hakes began the manufacture of loom fittings for himself in Millbury, hiring a room in the factory of C. D. Morse (where the Felters' Co. is now situated) and here he worked for two years when fire destroyed the entire plant.

In 1881, he built a shop, eighty feet long and fifty-six feet wide, on River St. where he has been located ever since. Here he has manufactured heddle-frames, wire goods and mill findings for woolen, cotton, and silk mills.

In 1895, Mr. Hakes formed a stock company for the manufacture of heddle-frames and at the same time extensive improvements were made in the factory. A new shop was erected and well-nigh the entire equipment was renewed. The company on the first day of the year moved into the new building and the old shop was moved to the bank of the river where it has since been used as a store-house.

In 1905, another building was erected, which is now used as the main shop.

In 1908, the J. H. Williams Manufacturing Company, of Utica, N. Y., was taken under the management of Mr. Hakes and brought from that place to Millbury. This company was incorporated in New York, in 1846, but the first owners have died. Mr. Hakes disposed of the company's machines for the manufacture of reeds, bobbins, and heddles, retaining for the plant in Millbury the shuttle machinery. A further addition was made to the buildings for the accommodation of this machinery by the erection of the North wing which has been devoted to the making of shuttles of all kinds and where, it is interesting to note, the Garfield shuttle-eyes are used.

Mr. Hakes has been not only a manufacturer of mill findings, but he has been an inventor as well. He has not only invented improved machinery in his own works, but he has also invented improvements in heddles and shuttles, to meet the requirements of advancing ideas. He has also contributed to the facilities for the manufacture of textile goods. He has been granted three patents for improvements in the structure of heddle-frames and two patents for the invention of hand threading shuttles, thus, in his own shop, meeting the requirements of the law which forbids the use of shuttles that require the operator to suck the thread through the shuttle-eye. He has been granted a patent for a holder in the automatic (Draper) shuttles whereby a rigid, strongly supported bevelled surface, instead of the metal strap commonly used, receives the head of the bobbin and guides it into its place.

Mr. Hakes first invented in this country the adjustable handle-bars for bicycles securing a modified patent, the basic idea having previously been discovered in England. He also invented an adjustable spring bicycle seat though he never put this invention on the market.

Besides the patents already granted, the last being in 1914, Mr. Hakes has five patents still pending for which application has been made.

WARREN A. HARRIS

Mr. Harris has always lived on the farm which he owns and which was formerly in the possession of his father, Harry W. Harris. For many years he has been a dealer in wood, lumber and ice, having an ice house and a wood sawing plant located near the outlet of Singletary Lake. He also does a teaming business, so that in connection with all his industries he employs several men. He is the proprietor of many acres of land adjoining the lake, including Harris Grove which has been cleared so as to make an attractive place for summer campers and others who wish to enjoy the charm of this beautiful sheet of water.

WM. E. HORNE

Wm. E. Horne came to Millbury, in 1874, and went to work as a clerk for Augustus S. Winter, with whom he remained for several years. He first engaged in business for himself in the brick building which stands at the foot of Wigwam Hill, earlier used as a school-house for the paper-mill district, and later as a store by H. L. Baneroft, and by Redding & Co. Here he dealt in groceries and general merchandise. The increase of business led him to move to his present location at Burbank Square, which is the site of the old hotel of Elias Lovell. With some of his sons, who were taken into partnership, he has built up an extensive business in groceries, fish, provisions, dry-goods, boots and shoes. Mr. Horne is also a dealer in ice, wood and lumber and does an extensive teaming business. One of his ice-houses is located at Brierly Pond and the other, formerly owned by H. M. Goddard, is at Singletary Lake.

Mr. Horne is proprietor of the farm formerly owned by David T. March. The house in which he resides was once occupied by Maj. Gen. Burbank. The later residence built by the general, and situated next to the school-house in Bramanville, is also owned by Mr. Horne, who also possesses "Wigwam," or, as it is sometimes called, "Soapstone" Hill.

FREDERICK W. MOORE

Frederick W. Moore was born at Port Huron, Mich., but received his education in the public schools of Salmon Falls, N. H., and Exeter, N. H. He has resided at Exeter, N. H., Milltown, N. B., Ware, Mass., Thorndike, Mass., and Moosup, Conn. Since 1891, he has been the resident agent of the Cordis Mills and under his management these mills have doubled in size, so that today they constitute the largest industry in town.

Mr. Moore is president of the Millbury Steel Foundry Co., a trustee of the Millbury Savings Bank, and was formerly a director of the Blackstone Valley Electric Railway Co. He is a prominent Mason.

In public town affairs Mr. Moore has been active and has held many important positions. He has served as moderator at special town meetings. He was chiefly instrumental in inaugurating the present financial system of the town and for several years was chairman of the finance committee. He was on the committee in charge of remodelling the Union School Building. He was chairman of the committee which changed the street lighting system from the arc to the tungsten light. He was secretary of the committee for the erection of the new High School Building.

PETER C. PARADIS

Peter C. Paradis, grocer and general store-keeper, was born in St. Guillaume, P. Q. After attending the local school for a few years, upon the death of his father, he came to the United States at the age of fifteen. He began work as a mill-hand and attended night schools while thus employed. At North Grosvenordale, Ct., he was employed for several years as clerk in J. H. Wousard's store. In 1879, he came to Millbury, where he has since resided. Mr. Paradis bought the "Duggan place" on Maple Street and opened a small store, but the business has greatly increased.

Mr. Paradis has been president of the French Naturalization Club, an active member of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, a member of the Foresters of America, and L'Union St. Jean Baptiste. In politics he is a member of the Republican party and has been a member of the town committee for several years. He was chairman of the board of selectmen in 1909, was on the board in 1912, and was chairman in 1913 and 1914. In 1915 he served in the State Legislature.

Mr. and Mrs. Paradis were active in founding the Church of the Assumption and are closely identified with its interests. Both are well known for their benevolence. Mrs. Paradis is president of Council 212, of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste.

WILLIAM L. PROCTOR

William L. Proctor who, with E. M. Wood, succeeded to the business of Buck Bros. in the manufacture of edge tools, after the death of Richard T. Buck, is a native of Sheffield, England. He was educated at Wesley, England, and later learned the business of steel making. Some years previous to 1887 he made several business trips to this country in which he finally came to reside. By his knowledge of steel and its working Mr. Proctor became a valuable assistant to Mr. Buck. He now carries on the business in company with his sons, Richard W. and Harold B. Proctor. Mr. Proctor has been prominent in musical affairs.

REV. GEORGE A. PUTNAM

The Rev. George A. Putnam is descended from John Putnam who came to Salem Village, now Danvers, from Ashton, Abbots, in Buckinghamshire, England, in 1634. The lineage descends

John¹, Thomas², Deacon Edward³, Elisha⁴, Nehemiah⁵, Reuben⁶, Rev. John Milton⁷, Rev. George Augustus⁸. In the same family, though not in a direct line, were the distinguished generals of Revolutionary fame, viz.:—Gen. Israel Putnam of Connecticut, and Gen. Rufus Putnam, who was born in Sutton, Mass., and who was also very prominent in settling the State of Ohio.

The father of the Rev. George A. Putnam was born in Sutton and, as his father died when he was young, he spent his youth on the farm of Jonathan Waters at West Millbury. The Rev. George Augustus Putnam was born at Dunbarton, N. H., May 8, 1835. He attended the district school in that place and prepared for college at Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, N. H. He then entered Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., from which he was graduated in 1858 and went to Bangor Theological Seminary from which he was graduated in 1860. His first pastorate was in the First Congregational church of Yarmouth, Maine, with which he remained from 1860 to 1870. On January 22, 1871, he came to the First Congregational Church of Millbury, and was installed as pastor, April 11, 1872.

For nearly four decades Mr. Putnam continued in the pastorate of the church, resigning June 26, 1910, but he was made pastor emeritus, so that his pastoral relation with the church was modified, but not terminated.

In October, 1875, Mr. Putnam went abroad for study and rest, visiting Scotland, England, France, Italy, Egypt, and Palestine. He remained absent a year having his full salary continued by a loyal and generous church.

Although he has lectured occasionally, Mr. Putnam has constantly devoted his time, his attention, his talents, his learning and his strength to the duties of the pastorate. This office, however, he has interpreted in a broad sense of the function so that he has been widely influential as citizen in the town and as a friend among the people.

During his long pastorate the First Congregational Church has grown in strength and in numbers so far as the condition of the community permitted. Business disaster and a change of population greatly depleted the number within the limits of the parish yet the proportion of church members among the residents has increased.

HERBERT A. RYAN

Herbert A. Ryan was educated in the local public schools and at Eastman's Business College, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. His occupation is that of undertaker and florist. He is also treasurer of the Millbury Water Company. He was active in the early development of the Blackstone Valley Street Railway Company and, previous to its consolidation with other companies, he was treasurer of the Millbury Electric Light Company.

Mr. Ryan is a member of the Olive Branch Lodge of Masons and a past Grand in the Morning Star Lodge of Odd Fellows. For many years he has been a prominent member of the Millbury Baptist Church in which he has held the offices of church treasurer and superintendent of the Sunday school.

(See Genealogy.)

Among the prominent men who have gone out from Millbury the Right Reverend Thomas Joseph Shahan is the most eminent scholar. His active life, as student, teacher, and writer has led to his recognition the world over as an authority in ecclesiastical matters and he enjoys the esteem and confidence of the highest power in the Roman Catholic Church. In 1913 he was appointed bishop.

Bishop Shahan was born at Manchester, N. H., Sept. 11, 1857, being the son of Maurice Peter and Mary Anna (Carmody) Shahan. He was reared in Millbury and educated in the public schools, spending three years in the high school. In 1872, he entered Montreal College, where he studied for six years, graduating in 1878. In that year he entered the American College at Rome and after four years' study was, in 1882, ordained to the priesthood.

Returning to America he became assistant pastor of St. John's Church at New Haven, Conn., for about eight months, after which he was appointed chancellor and secretary of the diocese of Hartford where he resided for five years.

In the fall of 1888, he was appointed to a chair in the newly created Catholic University at Washington and went abroad for three years during which he studied at Rome, at Paris, and at Berlin, spending two years at the University in the latter city.

MONSIGNOR THOMAS J. SHAHAN

Since 1891, he has resided in Washington, serving for eighteen years as professor of church history and lecturer on Roman law and for the last four years as rector of the Catholic University, an office to which he was appointed by Pope Pius X., in 1909, as successor to Bishop O'Connell, of Richmond, Va.

He founded, and for ten years edited, the Catholic University Bulletin (1895-1913) and lectured and preached extensively, besides contributing frequently to periodicals and newspapers.

He was made a prelate to the papal household (monsignor), an honorary office, by Pius X, in 1909, and was appointed as an original member of the board of judges for the Hall of Fame, University Heights, New York. He is president of the Catholic Educational Association, an extensive organization, and is also president of the National Conference of Catholic Charities.

He has written the following books, "Blessed Virgin in the Catacombs" (1892), "Giovanni Battista de Rossi" (1900), "The Beginnings of Christianity" (1903), "The Middle Ages" (1904), "The House of God" (1905).

Since 1905, he has been one of the five editors of the Catholic Encyclopedia (New York, sixteen quarto volumes of eight hundred pages each), the standard work, in English, on the doctrine, discipline, history and institutions of the Roman Catholic Church.

In 1882, he received the degree Doctor of Divinity from the Propaganda College at Rome; in 1889, the degree of Licentiate of Canon and Civil Law from the Roman Seminary; and, in 1910, the honorary degree of LL.D. from Manhattan College, New York.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT

Mr. Taft honored and delighted the people of Millbury by attending the Centennial exercises in 1913. It is with mingled feelings of intimacy and awe that the citizens regard him. The feeling of intimacy is fostered by those older ones who remember him as a boy, by those who have been companions with him in his early years, and also by those who feel the pleasant touch of acquaintance with the Torrey family from which on his mother's side Mr. Taft has sprung. As a member of this family he is also related to several of the pioneers of the town who have done so much in moulding the influences that were at work in the early days. The Holman, Trask, Bond, Goodell, and Waters families all take justifiable pride in their connection with him. For many years his grandfather, Mr. Samuel D. Torrey, was one of the conspicuous figures in the life of the community and it was in his home that the ex-President was a visitor when a boy. He attended the public schools of Millbury and of all the youth who have had it impressed into their minds that some day they might become President of the United States he is the one, from Millbury Schools, who has actually attained that high position.

William Howard Taft was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, September 15, 1857. Both of his parents were of old Massachusetts families. His father, Alphonso Taft, who was born in Vermont, was descended from Robert Taft who settled in Mendon in 1660. Mr. Alphonso Taft was a prominent citizen of Cincinnati and a judge in the superior court of Cincinnati. He served in the cabinet of President Grant as Secretary of War and as Attorney-general and was successively United States minister to Austria-Hungary and to Russia, under President Arthur.

On the mother's side Mr. Taft was descended from William Torrey who came to New England in 1640 and from the Waters family which has been conspicuous in the earliest Millbury and Sutton history. After her husband's death Mrs. Taft again made her home in Millbury, living with her sister, Miss Delia C. Torrey.

Mr. Taft was graduated from the Woodward High School of Cincinnati, in 1874, and from Yale University, in 1878, where he stood second and was salutatorian in a class of 132, being also elected class orator by his class. In 1880, he was graduated from the Cincinnati Law School, dividing the first prize. He received the degree of LL.D. from Yale, in 1893; from University of Pennsylvania, in 1902; from Harvard and Miami, in 1905; from the State University of Iowa, in 1907; from Princeton, in 1912; from Wesleyan College, in 1909; and from Amherst, in 1914.

In 1886, Mr. Taft married Helen Herron, daughter of John W. Herron, Esq., of Cincinnati, for eight years United States district attorney for the Southern District of Ohio.

Mr. Taft was admitted to the Ohio bar, in 1880, and in the same year he became a law reporter on the "Cincinnati Times" which was owned by his half-brother, Charles P. Taft, and later on the "Commercial" of the same city. He was assistant prosecuting attorney for Hamilton County, Ohio, in 1881-2. In the following year he was appointed collector of internal revenue for the first district of Ohio, by President Arthur, but he resigned in the next year, as he found the work uncongenial, and he returned to the practice of law in which he continued until 1885, when he was appointed assistant county solicitor of Hamilton County, Ohio. Two years later he was appointed and in the next year was elected, by popular vote, a judge in the superior court, a position formerly held by his father.

THE HONORABLE WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT
THE 27TH PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

In 1890, President Harrison appointed him solicitor general of the United States where, under the supervision of the Attorney-general, he conducted the business of the government before the Supreme Court of the United States.

He was appointed, in March, 1892, also by President Harrison, United States Circuit Judge for the sixth circuit, embracing Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee and became a member of the court of appeals of that circuit. In this capacity he handed down several notable decisions, especially on boycotts and strikes.

During a great railroad strike, in 1894, Frank W. Phelan was sent by Eugene V. Debbs, president of the American Railway Union, for the purpose of tying up traffic about Cincinnati. Judge Taft granted an injunction, restraining Phelan from instigating violence against employees of a railroad receiver in his court. Phelan violated the injunction and was sentenced to jail for six months for contempt. Judge Taft at the time announced that "the starvation of a nation cannot be the lawful purpose of a combination." He further said that "if there is any power in the army of the United States to run those trains the trains will run," and they were. The most important opinion written by Judge Taft was in the case of the United States against the Addington Pope Company and others, involving a construction of the Anti-trust Act. It was the judgment of the court of appeals, consisting of Justice Harlan, Judge Taft and Judge Lurton. It was a pioneer decision.

From 1896 until 1900 Judge Taft was a professor in the law department of the University of Cincinnati and also its dean.

Judge Taft was selected by President McKinley as president of the Philippine Commission on which he served from March 13, 1901, until February 1, 1904, after July 4, 1901, being in addition the first civil governor of the Philippine Islands. In this capacity he faced many problems that were new to American political life with consummate skill, fairness, and firmness. The commission acted like a legislature, holding public meetings and causing bills to be published and discussed before they were passed. Arriving at Manila in June, 1900, the commission at once set itself to the accomplishment of the task before it and in August of that year sent a preliminary report. In June of the following year a code of laws was completed for the islands, a judiciary system was established, and law officers were appointed. Under the rule of Governor Taft the Filipinos experienced a degree of justice, peace and prosperity such as they had never reached in their previous history. Under him they had a government that would keep its faith with them, good roads were built and good schools were introduced. Governor Taft believed in stimulating the efforts of the islanders for their own benefit and further believed it to be "most important that Filipinos should suppress Filipino disturbances and arrest Filipino outlaws," and it was for this purpose that the constabulary of the islands was first used.

Mr. Taft acquired great influence among the more conservative and influential Filipinos and in turn he felt his responsibility toward them for, in 1902, he was tendered a position on the Supreme bench, one of his fondest ambitions, by President Roosevelt, but the entreaties of the Filipinos influenced him to decline the offer.

In that and the following years, partly through a conference with Pope Leo XIII, he arranged for the purchase of the lands in the Philippines belonging to the religious orders.

After having faced many problems entirely new in American administration and having met them with a wisdom and courage that won for him not only the respect of the people of the islands, but also the confidence of the people and the government of the United States, he was appointed, February 1, 1904, Secretary of War in the cabinet of President Roosevelt, succeeding Elihu Root in that office and following at a greater interval his own father. To the usual duties of this position were also added the administration of the Philippine Islands and preparations for the construction of the Panama Canal.

In an early report which he made on the government of the Philippines he stated that "The Philippine government is the result of an effort on the part of this nation to assist the Philippine people to stand upon their feet. It is a national experiment."

As Secretary of War he became a pacificator in several lands where the United States had the right to attempt adjustments, notably, in Panama he adjusted disputes which were acute.

In 1905, with a Congressional delegation, Secretary Taft went on a tour of inspection in the Philippines and again, in 1907, fulfilling a promise made when he retired from the office of civil governor, he went to the Philippines and assisted in the opening of the first Filipino legislative assembly.

In 1906, Mr. Taft was sent by President Roosevelt to Cuba to adjust a revolution there and for a short time he acted as provisional governor. In March and April, 1907, he visited Panama, Porto Rico, and Cuba to familiarize himself with conditions. Later, he visited Japan and the Philippine Islands, returning to America through Russia.

Mr. Taft delivered the Dodge lectures at Yale University, in 1906, on "The Responsibilities of Citizenship." These were published as "Four Aspects of Civic Duty." Some of his political speeches have been published under the titles, "Present Day Problems" and "Issues and Outlooks."

In 1906, Mr. Taft became president of the American Red Cross and promoted its re-organization.

Mr. Taft was nominated for the presidency of the United States in the Republican National Convention, held in Chicago, in June, 1908, and he was elected to that position November 3, 1908, for the term beginning March 4, 1909, receiving three hundred twenty-one electoral votes against one hundred sixty-two for William Jennings Bryan, the Democratic candidate. His popular plurality was one million, forty-five thousand, seven hundred and fifteen.

After he had become President, Mr. Taft called an extra session of Congress to revise the tariff and on August 5, 1909, he signed the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill thus making it a law. Although this measure did not meet his wishes, it seemed to be the best that he could secure from Congress and he stoutly defended it in the early addresses of his administration. To Congress and in public speeches he has committed himself in favor of a central bank, subsidies for ocean shipping, a postal savings system, a bureau of mines, a bureau of public health, liberal conservation legislation, a broader plan of government supervision of interstate commerce, an improved form of government for Alaska, the fortification of the Panama Canal, and several reforms in judicial procedure.

President Taft strove to make as much progress as possible through the laws which were already in existence. This he did especially in the curbing of great combinations of capital through the Sherman anti-trust law.

President Taft secured treaties with England and other powers by which each agreed to submit questions that might arise in the future, over which there might be contention, to arbitration. The senate, however, would not confirm the treaties. Thus although his efforts to produce instruments that would submit further differences to arbitration were not successful, yet the moral value of his endeavor was very great.

Although the Republican majority was very great during his administration it was divided by a so-called Progressive element that was impatient of results.

In 1912, Mr. Taft was again nominated for the Presidency by the Republican party but the so-called Progressive party was formed, headed by President Taft's predecessor in office, and the vote of the party was so divided in the states that the Democratic candidate was elected.

In the year of his retirement from the Presidency, Mr. Taft was elected as Kent professor of law in Yale University, and in the same year he was made president of the American Bar Association.

LEVI L. WHITNEY

The Honorable Levi Lincoln Whitney, formerly a well-known business man of Millbury, was born in Princeton, January 20, 1838. His father, Col. John Whitney, was at one time a deputy sheriff of the county. The maternal grandfather was Col. Jacob W. Watson, of Princeton, an old time tanner and currier, with whom Mr. Whitney lived for three years. When sixteen years of age, Mr. Whitney came to Millbury and entered the employ of A. Wood & Sons, shoe manufacturers at West Millbury. For a part of the time he worked in the store and office of the company, but spent the remainder of the time in learning the trade of a shoe cutter. After being employed here for a year, he attended Worcester Academy for a year. Upon returning to Millbury, he was again employed by A. Wood & Sons and spent his whole time in the factory. Two brothers, Charles A. and John N. Whitney, were also employed by the same company, the latter being foreman of the cutting room. With this company Mr. Whitney remained till he was about twenty-one years of age.

Mr. Whitney's brother, the late Charles A. Whitney, and Orville E. Thompson engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes at Chicago, Illinois, and, in 1859, Mr. Whitney moved there, and became a member of the firm of Thompson, Whitney & Co. which did a large business until the great Chicago fire, in 1871, when its factory was destroyed. Upon returning to Millbury, Mr. Whitney was associated with the firm of Crane & Waters, at Bramanville, continuing there until 1875. In 1875, he was also associated with Gustave Molt, on Dorothy Stream, in the manufacture of indigo-blue dye and he remained in this business for several years. In 1877, Mr. Whitney bought the mill now owned by the West End Thread Company which he operated till 1884. At one time he was in business in Worcester with his son, Walter L. Whitney, near the old Junction Depot, manufacturing the Pentecost Steam Generators. He was a director in the Millbury National Bank, a trustee of the Millbury Savings Bank in 1873, and president of the latter institution in 1888. He was a member of the board of selectmen in 1877, in 1878, in 1879, in 1881 and 1887. In 1880, he represented the fifteenth district in the Massachusetts Legislature and, in 1888, he was elected to the state Senate. He is a member of Worcester Commandery Knights Templars. Mr. Whitney resides in Worcester.

CHAPTER XXIX

INDEPENDENT SKETCHES, A-C

HENRY AUGUSTUS AIKEN

Henry Augustus Aiken, a descendant of Edward Aiken, was born in Merrimac, N. H. He maintained a jeweller's store and for a time was engaged in the printing business. He owned the Aiken Block which formerly stood on South Main St., not far from the present Town House. He was an esteemed citizen.

ASA ANDREWS

Asa Andrews, an early citizen, was a small manufacturer and was conspicuous in town and church affairs. He had a son, Dr. Asa Andrews. Miss Mary Andrews, of this family, was long active in the Second Congregational Church. She was esteemed for her deeds of charity and for her missionary interest.

The Andrews house stood on the spot now occupied by the Millbury National Bank, but years ago it was moved to the rear of Farnsworth Block.

AMOS ARMSBY

Amos Armsby, son of Horace, was born at Sutton, Mass., Sept. 10, 1835. He was educated in the public schools of Haydensville (now Whitinsville), Mass.; in Illinois, where his parents resided for a time; and at Millbury Academy in this town. In 1849, his parents moved to Millbury and here he resided for the remainder of his life. He was a man of decided opinions. He took a warm interest in the welfare of this town and filled an important place in the religious, social, and business affairs of the community.

Mr. Armsby was first employed as clerk in the office of the J. D. Wheeler Mill. Later he was book-keeper for his father in the sash and blind shop. In 1872, he was assistant to Frank C. Miles, treasurer of the Millbury Savings Bank and cashier of the Millbury National Bank. When, in 1874, the banks divided, David Atwood succeeded Mr. Miles as treasurer of the Savings Bank and Mr. Armsby succeeded him as cashier of the National Bank. This position Mr. Armsby held until 1897 when he succeeded Mr. Atwood as treasurer of the Savings Bank, a position which he held at the time of his death. In the resolutions passed by the Board of Investment of the Savings Bank at the time of his decease it was stated that the Bank had "lost a treasurer of spotless integrity, sterling character, high ideals and ripe judgment." He was also a stockholder and director in the National Bank.

Mr. Armsby served the town as assessor and, for ten years, as a member of the school committee of which he was chairman at the time of his death. Like his father he was a deacon in the Second Congregational Church and also clerk and treasurer of the Society. He was treasurer of the Worcester South Conference of Congregational Churches and was a member of the Congregational Club of Worcester.

Mr. Armsby was twice married. His second wife was Alice M. Davis who was educated at Mt. Holyoke Seminary. She was active in church and social affairs and at the time of her death in 1897 was vice-president of the Mt. Holyoke Seminary Alumnae Association.

(See Genealogy.)

HORACE ARMSBY

Deacon Horace Armsby, a widely known and highly respected citizen, was born in Paris, Maine, in 1809. His grandfather, Joshua, was a soldier in the Old French War and with the wages received he assisted himself through Harvard College from which he was graduated in 1773.

Mr. Armsby early learned the trade of carpenter. In 1849, he moved to Millbury and engaged in the manufacture of doors, sash, and blinds. From 1853 until 1872, he continued in this business in company with Charles D. Morse.

Mr. Armsby was honored by the citizens with many responsible positions, having been chosen assessor, selectman, and representative to the General Court (1861 and 1862). He was president of the Millbury Savings Bank at the time of his death, having been elected to that position in the previous year. For twelve years he was a deacon in the Second Congregational Church in whose affairs he ever took a warm and active interest.

(See Genealogy.)

CHARLES BOWLER ATWOOD

Charles Bowler Atwood, noted American architect, was a man of peculiarly sensitive artistic temperament. He was a close and a sound student of his art with a remarkable experience. He was a remarkable draughtsman using his left hand with sureness and rapidity. D. H. Burnham, with whom he was associated in his ripest work, said of him, "He was of an honorable, charitable disposition, but like most great artists a mere child in the practical things of life."

Mr. Atwood was the son of David Atwood and was born in Charlestown, May 18, 1849, but he was reared in Millbury. He received architectural training in the offices of Elbridge Boyden, of Worcester, and of Ware and Van Brunt, of Boston. He studied in the Scientific School of Harvard University and after his graduation he returned to the office of Ware and Van Brunt with whom he remained until 1870. In 1872 he opened an office for himself in Pemberton Square, Boston.

In 1870, he built the first State Mutual building in Worcester, the Merchants and Farmers' Fire Insurance Co. building, also in Worcester, and the Five Cent Savings Bank building in Lowell.

Within a few years he received a prize for his plans of a City Hall in San Francisco, two prizes for plans of a state capitol in Hartford, Conn., a prize for the design of the court house in Springfield, Mass., and the first prize with the commission to build the city hall in Holyoke, Mass. In 1875, he removed to New York City where for many years he was engaged in designing everything in relation to architecture in association with Herter Bros. He designed the residences of David Dows, William H. Vanderbilt, Elliot F. Shepherd, and W. D. Sloane, all in New York City. He also designed the interior decorations of many notable houses in other parts of the country, including that of Mrs. Mark Hopkins at San Francisco.

In 1884, Mr. Atwood established himself independently in New York City and received from Mr. Vanderbilt a commission to design two houses for his sons-in-law, Mr. H. McK. Twombly and Dr. Seward Webb. He also entered into competition for the Boston Public Library Building and he gained the first prize, but his building was not erected. Later he submitted a design for a new City Hall in New York City and gained the first prize of five thousand dollars. His plans were recommended by the board of experts as the only suitable ones to be accepted, but this building also was not erected.

In 1886, he was selected by Mrs. Mark Hopkins to complete her magnificent residence at Great Barrington, Mass., and Mr. Atwood labored upon this for two years.

In April, 1891, at the invitation of Mr. D. H. Burnham, he went to Chicago as one of the corps of architects who were at work on the buildings and grounds for the Columbian Exposition. He was made designer-in-chief with the task of harmonizing the plans of the various architects and for this position of censorship he was well fitted by his sound scholarship and remarkable experience. He designed particularly the peristyle, the forestry building, the casino, the music hall but most notably the fine arts building. Of Mr. Atwood's work on this building we have some light in the following incident which was written by Daniel H. Burnham, architect-in-chief of the Exposition, and utilized in the "Reminiscences of Augustus St. Gaudens," prepared by his son. We shall recall that Mr. St. Gaudens was esteemed to have been the greatest sculptor and the greatest artist that had worked in America and that the Parthenon to which he referred has stood for two thousand years as the world's most perfect work in architecture. When the Art Building had been finished and just before the Fair had opened Mr. St. Gaudens took Mr. Burnham by the shoulders and said, "Old fellow, do you realize the rank of Atwood's building? In my judgment it is the best thing done since the Parthenon." And Mr. Burnham stated that "this conclusion has been justified by the statements of many eminent critics."

From 1893 until 1895 Mr. Atwood was a partner in the architectural firm of D. H. Burnham & Co.

Following his marked success as designer-in-chief of the buildings at the World's Fair in Chicago, Mr. Atwood was summoned to Paris to assist in the plans for the Paris Exposition, but he could not complete this task.

He died in Chicago, Dec. 19, 1895, and his remains were brought to Millbury where they were interred in Central Cemetery.

DAVID ATWOOD

David Atwood, a native of North Eastham, Mass., for many years was cashier of the Millbury Bank, and was the first treasurer of the Millbury Savings Bank, a position which he held until 1897, when failing health compelled him to retire. For several years, he served the town as treasurer. He was a member of the school committee, and a trustee of cemeteries. All of these positions he filled ably and honorably. In 1897, he went to California, and he remained there until 1899, when he visited Millbury for a few months. He returned to California, and lived there until his death, at Los Angeles, Sept. 22, 1907. He was buried in Central Cemetery, Millbury, Sept. 30, 1907. Mr. Atwood's eldest son, Chas. B. Atwood, was a noted architect (see sketch).

JOHN E. BACON

John E. Bacon, for many years previous to 1870 agent of the Cordis Mills, was a man widely known among mill owners. His marked integrity commanded universal respect. Quiet and unassuming in manner among his fellow-townsmen he was careful of the position which he assumed on questions that arose. He was interested in the public schools. He left a definite impression on the townspeople.

HENRY HARRIS BANCROFT

Henry Harris Bancroft was a tenor singer and for many years he frequently sang in local concerts. For twenty years he was a travelling salesman for the H. A. Matthews Manufacturing Co., in which he had an interest. He was well-known in the hardware, sheet-metal, and similar lines of trade covered by his company, particularly in the important centers of the middle west.

Henry L. Bancroft, son of Solomon, was born on the Greenwood farm in Millbury, June 25, 1821. He received his education in the local schools and at Leicester Academy. He became a millwright by occupation and the erection of many mills along the Blackstone came under his supervision. He later conducted a general store in Bramanville.

Mr. Bancroft was an ardent Republican in politics. For many years he was moderator at the town meetings. He also served the town as tax collector, as assessor, as selectman, as a member of the school committee, and as overseer of the poor. He was for two years a member of the State Senate and occupied a prominent place in the councils of his party.

Mr. Baneroft was an active and influential member of the First Congregational Church and for twenty-five years superintendent of its Sunday school. He sang in the church choir for the greater part of his life even until he was well advanced in years. He was zealous in every good work that in his opinion was for the upbuilding of the community. He resided on Burbank Hill.

(See Genealogy.)

ISAAC BARNARD

Isaac Barnard gave to the North Parish of Sutton what is now the "Old Common" of Millbury (see page 20). He was the great, great grandfather of William C. Barnard, of Worcester. Isaac Barnard's daughter married the Rev. James Wellman, first pastor of the First Congregational Church in Millbury. Mr. Barnard died in Worcester, and was buried on the Common. Wm. S. Barton, in his work, "Inscriptions from the Old Burial Ground on the Common," gives us the following relating to Isaac Barnard,—

"Barnard
"My glass is run—

"Erected in memory of Isaac Barnard, Esq., who departed this life March ye 18, 1788, Aged 86 years. . . . —Rev. XIV. 13."

A note tells us that he was, "A Royalist Protestor of 1774, disarmed by order of the Committee of Correspondence in May, 1775."

JAMES A. BENCHLEY

James H. Benchley, a former local business man, was a member of the firm of Benchley & Jackson, which owned a machine shop at the site of the W. W. Windle Co. Mill. His son, Henry W. Benchley, held the high position of Lieutenant-Governor of the state, the only man from the town to attain this dignity, though Millbury has had several citizens who have become state senators. Mr. Benchley later removed to Texas where he died some years ago. His son, Charles H. Benchley, has for many years held the position of mayor's clerk in Worcester.

STEPHEN BLANCHARD

Stephen Blanchard, a brother of Thomas, the inventor, was an active man in business and in general affairs. His old tack factory where he and his brother Thomas worked is still in existence. The old home was at the corner of the main street and Oxford Road, West Millbury, and was built in 1812, after his house, which formerly stood there, was destroyed by fire. The house built in 1812, was a well-known landmark of the village and stood until a few years ago, when it, too, was burned. At the rear of this old homestead is the West Millbury cemetery where lie buried Samuel Blanchard and wife, the father and mother of Stephen and Thomas. Though Stephen Blanchard did not exercise the inventive genius of his brother Thomas, yet he was a man of ability and character.

THOMAS BLANCHARD

The greatest inventor that Millbury has produced was Thomas Blanchard whose inventions supplemented those of Asa Waters and revolutionized the manufacture of guns in America, if not in the entire world. His inventions have made possible the turning of irregular forms such as shoe lasts, pulley-blocks, etc., and later models of his machines are widely in use today. The relative importance of Mr. Blanchard's contributions to the progress of mechanical production has thus been stated by the late Col. Asa H. Waters (History of Sutton, 1878, p. 758).

"A cartoon, entitled 'Men of Progress,' was published in Philadelphia by Munn & Co. in 1863 on which are represented the most distinguished American inventors of the present century, and among them may be found a good picture of the late Thomas Blanchard. No one in that galaxy of geniuses more justly deserves the honor. Some of them, such as Morse, McCormick, Howe, and Goodyear, have made single inventions which have perhaps attracted more public notice than any one of Blanchard's, but it may be questioned whether another inventor can be named in this country or in Europe, during the last century, who has produced so many different labor-saving machines, applicable to such variety of uses, and which have contributed so largely to the common necessities, comforts, and economies of life. This language may seem extravagant, but it must be remembered that not an armory exists in this country or in England where guns are made—hardly a human being that wears boots and shoes—scarcely a vessel that sails upon the ocean—not a school where slates are used—not a carpet laid down, but that owes tribute to the genius of Thomas Blanchard for producing articles cheaper and better. The same may be said of carriage wheels, plows, shovels, and various articles of furniture. Latterly, his machines have been applied to carving, to architectural designs, and even to statuary—much to the surprise of the artists. Indeed, there seems to be no limit to the uses made of Blanchard's inventions, and it is impossible at present to enumerate them. One can hardly go into a tool shop, a machine shop or a work-shop of any kind, wood or iron, where motive power is used, in which he will not find more or less of Blanchard's mechanical motions."

Thomas Blanchard was born June 24, 1788, in that part of Sutton which was called the "Oxford Gore" and was later set off to Oxford. He was of French origin being descended from the Huguenots who settled in that town to avoid persecution and from them he inherited a taste for mechanical pursuits in which they were proficient. His father, Samuel, was an industrious farmer who cultivated the strip of land on which his home was located and maintained a country blacksmith shop. The mother, Susanna, a native of Rowley, Mass., was the daughter of Daniel Tenney. To them were born eight children of whom Thomas was the sixth.

As a boy Thomas Blanchard was tall for his age, awkward in appearance, and indifferent to the general information to be derived from books. Indeed, many called him simple-minded, but his mechanical tastes were evident in the making of wooden toys, such as wind-mills and water-wheels, and it was reported that he would entertain himself by the hour with a piece of wood, a knife and a gimlet. When only nine years of age he attempted (unsuccessfully, as might be expected) to construct a forge for welding iron, as he had seen his father do. At the age of thirteen, or later, he invented an apple-paring machine that elicited local wonder and undoubtedly encouraged him in his attention to labor-saving devices.

The first invention of Mr. Blanchard that gained wide attention was perfected when he was eighteen years of age. He was at the time employed by his brother Stephen at the shop in West Millbury where tacks were slowly made by hand. Here he studied tack-making and invented his machine on which five hundred tacks could be produced in a minute with better finished heads and points than those made by hand. At the age of twenty-four he sold this invention for five thousand dollars, a large sum to him at the time, but a very small amount for such a revolutionary invention.

Mr. Blanchard's most famous and most valuable invention was the eccentric lathe for turning irregular forms. Millbury is especially concerned in the creation of this production, as it has commonly been stated that the United States armory at Springfield was the birthplace of this valuable machine. The invention was assigned there, possibly because of Mr. Blanchard's later connection with the establishment and the later supplements to the machine that were produced there. As a matter of fact, however, the eccentric lathe was invented and first constructed in Millbury and, after its invention here, the first machine to be set up in the Springfield armory was carted over the roads from Millbury by Mr. Horace Waters. After another was made like it for the Springfield Armory the original lathe was returned to Millbury where it was used for about twenty years in the Waters Armory.

The entire machine in its perfection did not come at once into Mr. Blanchard's mind as he was about two years at work upon the first model. Various anecdotes have been related purporting to reveal the development of the working of the idea in his mind, but if we leave it to the psychologists and to the recording angel to give us the exact sequence of his ideas in the development of his conception, we are still assured that it was at the armory of Asa Waters in Millbury that Mr. Blanchard was taken by the proprietor who had himself invented a lathe for turning the gun barrels round but who sought a machine for turning the breech end of the gun which was flat on the sides and round on the top and bottom. As a result of Mr. Waters' efforts in directing the attention of young Blanchard to the turning of the gun barrel Mr. Blanchard developed the idea of the eccentric lathe which, after some study, he elaborated in a model. He secured a patent on the machine September 6, 1819.

After the machine had been put in operation for gun barrels it was applied to the turning of gun-stocks and afterwards to the turning of many kinds of irregular forms.

Major J. W. Wright, who was long employed in the Armory Works, as machinist, clerk and superintendent, under date of Kalamazoo, Mich., April 27, 1886, wrote Col. Asa H. Waters as follows:—

"To turn the irregular shape of the butt baffled all the efforts, and defied the ingenuity, of all the mechanics, in all the armories. After laboring long and hard on the problem, Mr. Waters, hearing of a budding genius in a neighboring district, sent for him to come to his armory, and see if he could suggest something. He came and soon after produced a model for a very peculiar and entirely original 'Cam Motion' which relieved the difficulty at once. To reduce the forged butt to proper shape cost, in labor and files, a dollar on each gun; and this motion reduced the expense more than half. One of the stockers, while watching the operation, said, 'Blanchard has robbed you of your job; but he cannot rob us of ours, for he cannot turn a gunstock.' This young man since famous as Thomas Blanchard, modestly replied, 'I'm not so certain of that.' His mind being thus directed to this matter, after the study of a year or more, he brought to the armory of Mr. Waters a wooden model four feet long for a machine to turn a gunstock. The expert mechanics thought favorably of it, and a full sized machine was built. Some of the United States inspectors on service at the armory at the time wanted it sent to Springfield for examination and trial. Blanchard consenting, it was carted to the armory there by Horace Waters. It remained long enough to build another similar, was then returned to Mr. Waters' armory, and there remained in use many years. While in the employ of Mr. Waters, I married the niece of Thomas Blanchard, and thus was brought into close and intimate relations with both. I had frequent conferences with Blanchard upon his various inventions, and was often requested to aid him in his suits for infringements, which were unending.

(Signed) J. W. WRIGHT."

The principle of this machine, as we learn from the Encyclopedia Americana, is "that forms are turned by a pattern the exact shape of the object to be produced, which in every part of it is successively brought in contact with a small friction wheel; this wheel precisely regulates the motion of chisels arranged upon a cutting wheel acting upon the rough block, so that as the friction-wheel successively traverses every portion of the rotating pattern, the cutting wheel pares off the superabundant wood from end to end of the block, leaving a precise resemblance of the model. This remarkable machine, with its modifications and improvements, is in use in the national armories as well as in England."

Mr. Blanchard was afterwards employed at the armory in Springfield where he added other machines (thirteen in all) to the one already invented, so that the stock of the gun could be made entirely by machinery and fitted to receive the metal parts.

Mr. Blanchard was one of the inventors that were then at work in developing uniform parts to a gun, so that the broken pieces on a battlefield could be fitted together. In these efforts inventors were opposed by hand laborers but out of the efforts put forth there was developed as a practical reality the interchangeability of parts. This was extended to the manufacture of watches and of other mechanical contrivances.

In 1825, Mr. Blanchard built a steam carriage that was a forerunner of the automobile of today.

From 1826 until 1830 he was employed in the construction of steam boats on the Connecticut River and he designed water craft that would ascend the swift waters of that river. He also invented a machine for cutting and folding envelopes. He perfected a process by which heavy timbers were bent without losing any of their strength and this has been applied to lighter wood as well.

In 1834, Mr. Blanchard was granted a renewal of his patent on the eccentric lathe after a contest in which an attempt was made to deprive him of the honor of the invention. When the second patent had expired he applied for a third time to Congress stating that because of his expenditures in defending himself against infringements he had realized very little on the invention. He was strongly opposed in his efforts before Congress and the renowned Choate was employed to defeat him. Meanwhile, Mr. Blanchard secured plaster casts of several men eminent in American life, including several members of Congress, and from these casts as models he turned out similar busts from wood. This greatly impressed the members of Congress and Choate wittily remarked that "Blanchard has turned the heads of Congress and gained his point." In the senate Daniel Webster introduced a motion for a renewal of the patent and this was amended so that Mr. Blanchard was given the patent rights on his invention during his lifetime.

In 1841, Mr. Blanchard moved to New York City where he remained for two years. In 1843, he moved to Boston where he resided until his death which occurred April 16, 1864.

Blanchard Hall, situated on the ground floor of the Town House, was named in his honor.

DR. ROBERT BOOTH

Dr. Robert Booth, for more than thirty years a successful physician in Millbury, was born in Ireland, Sept. 20, 1840, being the youngest of nine children. His early life was spent on a farm in his native country. When seventeen years of age he emigrated to America, landing at New York after a voyage of seven weeks, and proceeded soon to Millbury. He was first employed as an operative in the woolen mill of Nelson Walling where he worked for a year. He then joined his brother in Canada and taught in the public schools, at the same time preparing himself for his medical studies which he took at the University of Michigan, graduating in 1867.

Dr. Booth practiced medicine first at Blackstone, Mass., where he remained eight years after which he moved to Millbury and resided here from that time. His practice became extensive and he increasingly gained the respect and affection of the people of the community. Besides his private practice he was physician for Court Millbury, F. of A.; Fraternity Circle, C. of F. A.; and Division 9, A. O. H.

Dr. Booth served the town with fidelity in many positions of honor. He was a member of the board of selectmen in 1891 and 1892 and again from 1896 until 1901. In 1910, he was elected on the school committee for three years but died before the expiration of his term of office. For several years he was on the board of health and was its chairman at the time of his death. He was active in securing public improvements including the building of sections of state highway and the extension of the Blackstone Valley Electric Railway to Worcester.

Dr. Booth was a member of the Foresters of America. In politics he was a democrat, but he received the support of many in local affairs regardless of party distinction.

Dr. Booth in 1894 married Josie Little. He died in June, 1910.

ROLAND E. BOWEN

Roland E. Bowen, former postmaster of Millbury, was one of the most noted checker players of the country. He met many other famous players of this and other countries and was very successful in his contests.

Mr. Bowen was a member of that old fighting regiment, the Fifteenth Massachusetts. For a time he was a prisoner in the famous Libby Prison at Richmond, Virginia. He was a popular member of the local Post of the G. A. R. and was esteemed highly in the community.

BENJAMIN BRIERLY

Benjamin Brierly, like James Brierly, was for many years a well-known citizen of the town. He was prominent in the First Congregational Church, and labored faithfully for the moral and spiritual elevation of the community. Mr. Brierly was twice married, his second wife being a sister of the Hon. Henry L. Bancroft. For a time he was engaged in business in Worcester.

JAMES BRIERLY

James Brierly, formerly a cotton manufacturer, was also, in the fifties, engaged in making paper at the old Burbank Mill in Bramanville. He was among the most respected citizens of the town, a man of strict integrity, and commanded the esteem of his associates. His useful life added much to the material prosperity and moral elevation of the community.

CHARLES BUCK

Charles Buck, edge-tool manufacturer, was descended from a family that had long been engaged in this occupation. He was born in Sheffield, England, where as a youth and young man he mastered the processes involved in the manufacture of edge-tools. After emigrating to America, in 1850, he was employed at Rochester, N. Y., and later he worked at the Old Junction shop in Worcester, Mass. While at Worcester, in 1853, with his brother, Richard T., under the firm name of "Buck Brothers," he began the manufacture of edge-tools, especially chisels. In 1864 the industry was moved to the Andrus March privilege on Dorothy Stream, Millbury. At the beginning Mr. Buck had little capital, and the rise which he later made to industrial and business success was largely due to his own efforts. In 1873, Mr. Buck withdrew from the firm of Buck Brothers and established a separate industry (see Chap. XX.) on the Grafton Road, where he manufactured edge-tools of the highest grade.

Mr. Buck was a member of the Methodist Church for nearly fifty years and for a considerable period was a class leader and superintendent of the Sunday school.

RICHARD T. BUCK

Richard T. Buck, born in 1832, was a native of Sheffield, Eng., a place noted for the manufacture of cutlery. He was educated in the schools of his native town, and graduated from the People's College. After learning the trade of a tool-maker in his native land, he came to this country and located at Worcester, Mass., in 1853.

Mr. Buck was a man of strong personality and strict integrity. He was a loyal and liberal member of the Second Congregational Church. He was a successful man of business, a good judge of men, and an able financier. As trustee of the Millbury Savings Bank his advice helped to make that institution then and now one of the best in the state. Mr. Buck took great interest in "Buck's village" which he was instrumental in founding and in the welfare of its inhabitants.

His wife, Miss Elizabeth Edge, came from Manchester, England, and like him, she was interested in the welfare of the community. Their good deeds exemplified their Christian belief and character, for their lives here were a blessing to the community. Mr. Buck died in 1893.

MAJOR-GENERAL CALEB BURBANK

Maj.-Gen. Caleb Burbank was descended from John Burbank who settled in Rowley, Mass., about 1640. He was the eldest son of Capt. Abijah Burbank and was born in Sutton, July 18, 1761. As a youth he worked on the farm of his father and learned the art of paper-making in his father's paper mill at Bramanville. (See "Industries on the Singletary.")

It was as a paper manufacturer that General Burbank was best known in the industrial world, although he also owned a part in most of the other mills on that stream. He greatly steadied the outflow of the water from the pond by raising its level several feet and he also built a storage basin for the paper-mill. When it had passed into his possession he added both to the quantity and the quality of the output of paper from the paper-mill.

General Burbank was in the prime of his manhood when Millbury was set off as a separate town from Sutton and at the time he was probably the richest and most prominent man in the new town. He selected the name "Millbury" for the town and, apparently by his sole influence, prevented the adoption of some other name (see Annals, 1813).

In personal appearance General Burbank was of medium height, about one hundred and forty pounds in weight, erect, and moved with a martial step. His portrait, done in oil colors, is displayed in the Public Library. Col. A. H. Waters in his copy of the "History of Sutton," made the following note concerning General Burbank, "General Burbank was for many years a conspicuous character. He always came to church at the 'Old Common' in a hack drawn by a span of white horses with a driver and surrounded by a bevy of young, beautiful girls whom he employed in his paper mill works. He was generous, public-spirited and kind-hearted." He was reputed to have been exceedingly generous. As an instance we may cite that, when the house of Stephen Blanchard was burned, General Burbank went the next day to view the ruins and at the time presented Mr. Blanchard with one thousand dollars as a help toward rebuilding. Although a man of a kind disposition General Burbank is reputed to have been strict in his military and business affairs. He loved the pomp attached to his military rank and undoubtedly exercised his command with uncompromising rigor.

For twenty-eight years he was an officer in the state militia. He was commissioned lieutenant, in 1790; captain, in 1794; major, in 1797; lieutenant-colonel, in 1801; brigadier-general, in 1807; and major-general, in 1813. Five years later he was dismissed from the service.

General Burbank built a residence, pretentious for those days, on Burbank Hill (see chapter on "Old Houses").

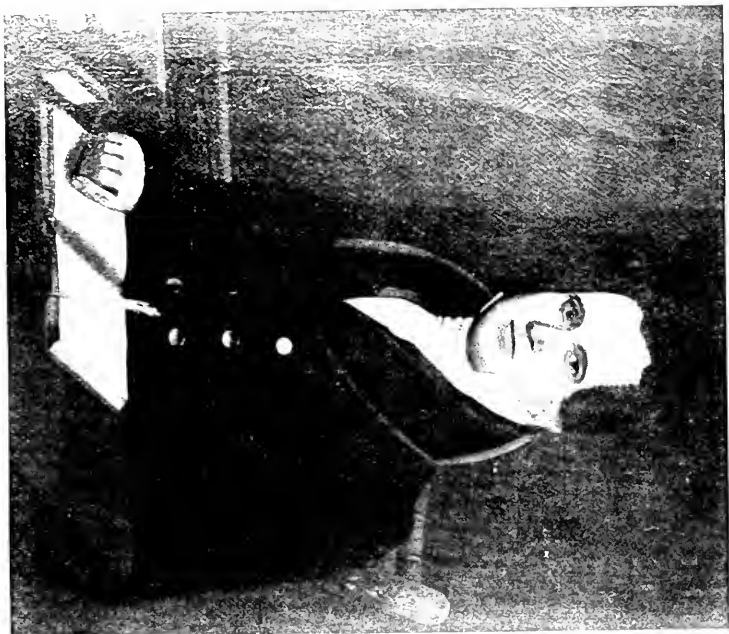

In his old age the General met with financial reverses, but it is to the credit of Millbury officials that, in consideration of what he had done for the town, a comfortable home was secured for him in the family of Deacon Tyrus March.

GEORGE LEWIS CHASE

George Lewis, son of Paul Cushing and Sarah P. Chase, was born in Millbury, Jan. 13, 1828. His education was received at Millbury Academy. He began his business career at the age of nineteen, as agent of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Georgetown, Mass., of which he was afterward elected a director. In 1848, he became traveling agent for the People's Insurance Company of Worcester, and retained this position until 1852, when he was appointed assistant superintendent of the Central Ohio Railway. He continued in the railroad business until 1860 when he returned to his first love, the fire insurance business, becoming the western general agent of the New England Fire Insurance company of Hartford.

GENERAL CALEB BURBANK

In 1863, Mr. Chase became assistant western general agent of the company and it was only four years later that he was offered the presidency of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company. He took office in June, 1867, continuing to be president for over forty years, and its remarkable growth and prosperity under his administration are well known. Since President Chase assumed its management, the company has experienced some extremely disastrous conflagrations, notably those in Chicago, in Boston, in Baltimore and in San Francisco.

In the administration of the affairs of his company Mr. Chase was always progressive, even in office details. He was the first to suggest the use of the telephone for communication with other local fire insurance offices, and the Hartford, the Phoenix, and the Aetna offices had such communication at an early date constituting what was really the introduction of the telephone service into the city of Hartford. The Hartford company was also a pioneer in the employment of stenographers, and in the use of the typewritten letter.

He was elected president of the National board of fire underwriters, and he has been prominent in the work of its committees.

Mr. Chase's business activity was not wholly confined to the company of which he was president, nor to the insurance field. His counsel was sought in other places in which sound judgment is valued. At the time of his death, he was a vice-president of the Society for Savings, a trustee of the Connecticut Trust and Safe Deposit company, and a director of the American National Bank of Hartford, Conn.

Mr. Chase was a prominent Congregationalist, and was several times elected president of the Connecticut Congregational club. He died at Hartford, Conn., Jan. 7, 1908. Soon after his death, his son, Charles E. Chase, was advanced from the office of first vice-president to that of president, but because of ill health Mr. Charles E. Chase resigned from the presidency of the company, Aug. 6, 1913. He was, however, subsequently elected to the chairmanship of the Board of Directors, a new office.

SAMUEL CHASE

Samuel Chase, son of Daniel and Sarah March Chase, was born Sept. 28, 1707, at Newbury, Mass. After spending parts of two years at Littleton, Mass., about 1733 he came with his father who was known as "miller" Chase to that part of Sutton which includes the present town of Millbury. The father owned a mill that was located at the place now called "Pleasant Falls" on the Blackstone or, as it was then called, the Half Way River.

Before his majority, he married, first, in May, 1728, Mary Dudley. At Pleasant Falls, for a number of years he also owned one half of a saw mill, with the dam, privilege of the water, etc. In December, 1740, he, in company with Francis Dudley, Perez Rice, Samuel Barton and Benjamin Morse, for 100 pounds, bought five-sixths of five acres of land of Benjamin Gowing on "Halfway" River, with the privilege of the river for building of dams and for flowing, as they should see fit. This was the water privilege in "Armory Village" on the old Armory site, and its first occupancy. He seems to have been an active member of the Company. In November, 1742, he had a house on the land and he made an additional purchase of three acres in his own name. He helped to establish the first industry at this place, an iron refinery, which is mentioned at this time. In 1878 he sold his interest in this business to John Hazeltine.

About 1765, he moved to Cornish, New Hampshire, for, in 1767, he is mentioned among the town officers as selectman.

He was later commissioned as a magistrate and was judge of the court of common pleas "for ye County of Cheshire." His son, Dudley, was the father of Bishop Philander Chase and grandfather of Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase. Gen. Jonathan Chase of New Hampshire, the assistant of Brig.-Gen. Stark in the Revolution, was his son, to whom General Stark gives the credit for practically fighting the campaign in the Revolution, which brought about the surrender of the British Army at Saratoga.

Judge Chase was the leading man of his time in Cornish, and many of his descendants have since been prominent. He died in Cornish, N. H., at the age of 93 years.

MICHAEL COOGAN

Michael Coogan was born in Ireland where he was trained to be a gardener, but as a young man he emigrated to America and came to Millbury. He worked at first for the Waters and Goodell Company when their mill was built at Bramanville. He afterward purchased from this company a small mill at Pleasant Falls, on the road to Wilkinsonville, where he worked on shoddy. In 1850, a little below the Greenwood Crossing on North Main St., he built a small mill which later became known as the "Burling Mill." The last years of his life were spent with his adopted daughter, Mrs. Callahan, on the Grafton Road, near the County Bridge.

HOSEA CRANE

In 1849, Hosea Crane moved to Millbury, and established the business of manufacturing knit goods. At first this was conducted on a small scale, but it steadily increased and, in 1857, he took as a partner, Samuel A. Waters, thus making the firm of Crane & Waters. A year later Horace Waters succeeded to the interest of Samuel A. Waters, and a large and prosperous business was carried on for many years. This firm introduced the manufacture of knit underwear in this part of the country.

Mr. Crane was chosen a director of the Millbury Bank, in 1856, and was made president, in 1863, continuing in this position for sixteen years. He was also first vice-president of the Millbury Savings Bank. He was a man of strict integrity, and the confidence accorded him by his fellow townsmen is shown by the numerous offices of trust and responsibility to which he was called. He was once elected state senator, twice a representative, several times a member of the board of selectmen, and often chosen to other important offices. At the funeral service of Mr. Crane, the Rev. George A. Putnam, of the First Congregational Church, paid the following tribute: "He believed in God's Word, and was a keeper of the Christian Sabbath. He prized Gospel ordinances, and few are they who have so uniformly occupied their places at church, through a long series of years as he. Elsewhere he will be missed. Our manufacturers and bank officials have lost one of their most cautious advisers. Our town has lost an honorable and highly-esteemed citizen, and our own parish, one of its most able and benevolent supporters."

JAMES M. CRONIN

James M., son of James and Bridget Cronin, was born in Brainwood, Illinois, but his life had been spent in Millbury since a boy. He was in the general store business for twenty-five years, starting in a small way with his brother Thomas J. Cronin, in the Dudley Building on Elm street. After a few years he bought the interest of his brother, and was thereafter alone in the business, which grew under his management. He bought the building known as the Fairfield Block on Elm street, and later as Cronin Building. He sold the block in 1911 to James J. Grogan, but continued his store in one side of the building. He was a member of several fraternal organizations, and at the time of his death was on the school board. He died in Millbury Dec. 3, 1912.

WINTHROP R. CUNNINGHAM

Winthrop R. Cunningham, a well-known business man, was born in Spencer, Mass., in 1820. Coming to Millbury at the age of seventeen he entered the employ of Waters, Flagg and Harrington, then engaged in the manufacture of guns, with whom he worked for several years. He was afterwards engaged in the foundry business with Matthias Felton, and later with John Martin. Following this he dealt in stoves and hardware on the site now occupied by "The Millbury Journal" building, but later he bought the old Randall block (Main and Elm Sts.), and transferred his business there. His son, R. Clark Cunningham, afterwards became a partner. In 1895, the building was destroyed by fire. After a short interval the present block was erected by Mr. Cunningham and the business was continued. His son succeeded him in the business.

CHAPTER XXX

INDEPENDENT SKETCHES, D-H

JAMES DIKE

James Dike was a descendant of a family which early settled in Sutton. He was an old-time employee at the armory in Millbury Center, where he was engaged in welding gun-barrels. He was a very efficient workman, enjoying the confidence of his employers and the esteem of his associates. Among his fellow workmen were the Lilleys, who were also excellent iron workers. At his decease in his eighty-third year, Mr. Dike had been a resident in Millbury for over fifty years.

JASON EMERSON

Jason Emerson, one of the old time manufacturers, is pleasantly remembered by the older citizens as one who took much interest in local affairs. He was greatly respected and filled an important place in the early activities of the town. The firm of Emerson & Brierly was located at Bramanville. His connection with the mill industry brought him prominently before the people of the county.

GEN. JOSEPH FARNSWORTH

General Farnsworth's name among business men appears in the early history of our town, and, before that, in the Sutton records. He was made a Brigadier-general of the First Brigade in the Seventh Division of Massachusetts Militia. He afterwards moved to the state of New York, where he died, in 1855. The name of Farnsworth has been conspicuous in all the various departments of life in Millbury, but, like that of many of the old families, it has disappeared, either by death or removal. Further records of General Farnsworth will be found elsewhere in this history.

MATTHIAS FELTON

Matthias Felton, of the firm of Felton & Co., was the son of Joel and Susannah Felton. He engaged in mechanical business first with his brother Newell at New England Village, now North Grafton. About 1840, he removed to Millbury and established an iron foundry which assumed considerable proportions. He conducted this successfully until his removal to Philadelphia, in 1861. He died, March 5, 1881. He was a public spirited citizen, much respected by his fellow-townsmen, having been one of the selectmen in 1855.

BENJAMIN FLAGG

Benjamin Flagg, a prominent manufacturer, was born in Worcester, Mass., in 1807. He was a descendant in the seventh generation of Thomas Flagg who emigrated from England as early as 1637 and settled at Watertown, Mass. He received his education in the schools of Worcester, and at the Academy in Hadley, Mass. He was early associated with Col. A. H. Waters in gun-work under the firm name of Waters & Flagg. A milling-machine for iron work was here invented by Mr. Flagg. Later its operation was extended to the working of wood. Mr. Flagg was a man of strong convictions and positive ideas. His connection with the Millbury Cotton mills in the firm of Waters, Harrington and Flagg may be found in the chapter devoted to business on the Blackstone.

SILAS M. FREEMAN

Silas M. Freeman was for many years a resident of this town, having come here from Sturbridge, Mass. He was one of the old time stage-drivers who drove at times from Sturbridge to Worcester and also from West Sutton to Woodstock, Conn.

At one time, while carrying several passengers in his stage-coach from Worcester to Sturbridge, one of his horses became balky, whereupon Mr. Freeman, knowing the horse's vicious disposition, gave him a hard lashing. One of the passengers remonstrated with him for using the whip so freely, but Mr. Freeman, knowing the disposition of the horse better than the passenger, was quite vexed with the action of the horse and with the man's interference, so he told the traveller to "shut up," or the whip would be put over him. Upon arriving at Sturbridge the passengers alighted and one of them said to Mr. Freeman, "Do you know who that man is whom you threatened to whip?" "No!" replied Mr.

Freeman, "and I don't care; I'm running this stage. Who is he?" "That man," said the passenger, "is John Quincy Adams, President of the United States."

At another time General Lafayette was one of his passengers. It was after his stage days were over that Mr. Freeman resided in Millbury, having charge of the town farm for several years. Upon retiring from this position he bought a small place, situated on the Old Common, where he passed the remainder of his days. In manner and appearance Mr. Freeman was rather gruff, but he was one of the best and most kind hearted of men.

DR. LEONARD GALE

Dr. Leonard Gale was born in that part of Sutton which became Millbury, July 25, 1800. He received his early education in the local public schools. Colonel Waters, who was an intimate friend of Dr. Gale, gave many years ago some interesting facts in regard to Dr. Gale's connection with Morse and the electric telegraph. He said that Professor Morse first took the idea from Dr. Jackson of Boston but, as Professor Morse was wholly lacking in scientific knowledge and training, his experiments were unsuccessful. In his extremity, he took Dr. Gale into his counsel, who, being a scientific man, and familiar with electricity, constructed the apparatus which made the telegraph a success. The studies and experiments by Prof. Joseph Henry, once of the Smithsonian Institution, also contributed greatly. Thus the real inventors were Dr. Jackson, Professor Henry, and Dr. Leonard Gale. Professor Morse only invented the dash and dot alphabet. To Professor Morse, however, belongs the credit of bringing the invention before the public, securing government aid in the construction of the first line between Washington and Baltimore, and so accomplishing its commercial success. The first line was constructed under the direction of Dr. Gale and was entirely successful. Dr. Gale occupied a professor's chair in several colleges, and was for many years an examiner in the patent office at Washington.

MOSES D. GARFIELD

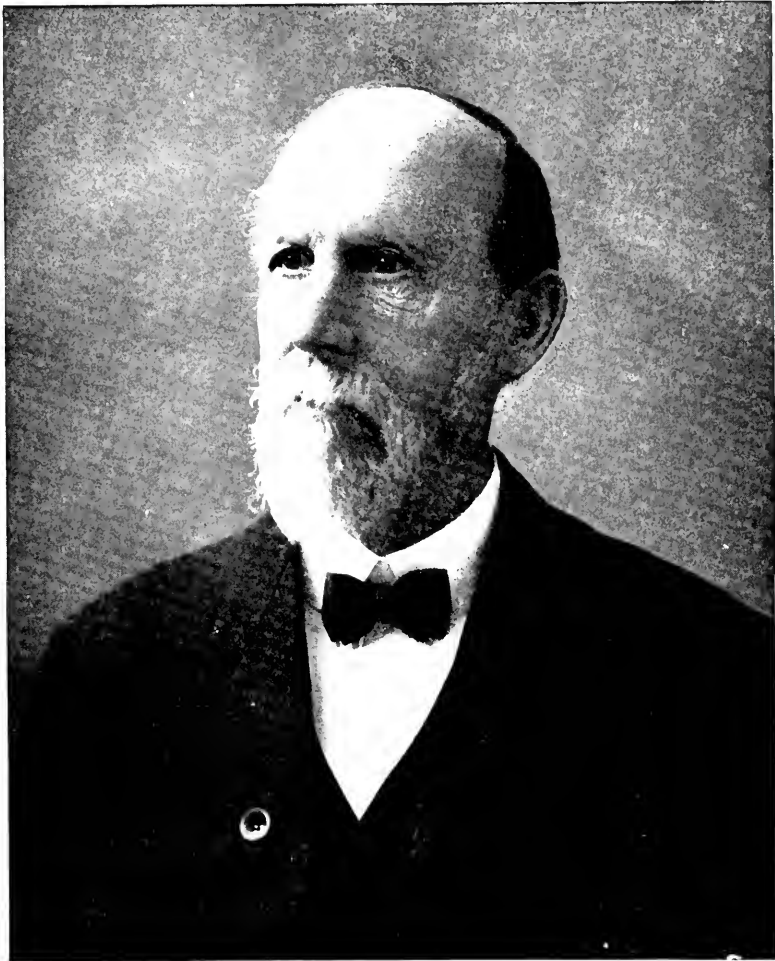

The old saying that "An honest man's the noblest work of God" may be applied to the subject of this sketch. Moses D. Garfield, son of Andrew B. and Hannah (Dwinnel) Garfield, was born in Auburn, Mass., in 1835. Except for a few years of early manhood which were passed in Sutton, from infancy until the close of his long and useful life, he resided in Millbury. His education was received in the public schools of this town and the events of his after life give evidence that he made good use of his opportunities. Upon reaching majority he entered the employ of Ezra Marble, senior, then engaged in the manufacture of shuttles and shuttle irons at Sutton, with whom he worked until 1863, when he became a member of the firm of Wilder, Searles & Garfield.

During the war of the rebellion, when the price of shuttle-eyes was high, the importation of porcelain shuttle-eyes, which previously had come from Europe, was diminished, so that manufacturers were obliged to use those taken from old worn-out shuttles. A shuttle-eye is small, but the millions of shuttles, plying back and forth in the almost countless number of looms throughout our country, make considerable wear and tear on the eye of the shuttle, so that this diminutive article becomes one of considerable importance in its construction, baking and glazing. The unsatisfactory method of using old eyes gave Mr. Garfield his opportunity. This quiet, unassuming man said little, but thought much, and, like Thomas Blanchard, he became impressed with an idea. He believed that shuttle-eyes could be made in this country as well as in Europe. He severed his connection with his partners, in 1864, and began to carry his idea to completion, having purchased a location on Tainter Hill, in Millbury. After many experiments, his endeavors proved to be a complete success and he had almost a monopoly in the manufacture of these goods, producing a shuttle-eye that was of such superior merit that no other manufacturer was ever able to equal him in the enduring quality of his product.

The secret of manufacturing these articles of porcelain did not die with Mr. Garfield, but it was imparted to his daughter, Elizabeth M. Garfield, who, since his death, has continued the business founded by her father.

In addition to his constant labors in these lines of manufacture, Mr. Garfield did much surveying, in which he was careful and proficient. No man was better acquainted with the lines, metes and bounds of old estates hereabout.

IRA NATHANIEL GODDARD
1830 - 1914

IRA N. GODDARD

In 1853, Ira N. Goddard was chosen town clerk and he continued to hold this position, so that the centennial year marked the sixty-first in his term of office, and at the time of his death he had been elected for the sixty-second time. No other town clerk in the Commonwealth can show such long continued service and it is doubtful if another can be found in the entire country who is able to equal it.

Mr. Goddard started his business career in partnership with his father as a retail dealer in boots and shoes and at the latter's death he continued the business alone for several years. In addition to his duties as a town clerk he also built up a large business in fire insurance. His familiarity, also, with the records of the town made his assistance valuable to all who had occasion to delve into the transactions of past days, for since his occupancy of the office of Town Clerk great changes had taken place in the town, but he was responsive and efficient amid all the demands which were made upon him.

Although not a lawyer by profession yet Mr. Goddard's intimate connection with local affairs and his familiarity with the statutes relating to them caused many people to seek his advice in legal matters. He was instrumental in securing pensions for many soldiers, for he ever took a warm interest in the welfare of those who enlisted for the defence of the Union. He was a representative to the legislature in 1905, but he declined a re-election. Young in appearance, even in his latter days, genial and courteous to all, few men who have held public office so notably have laid claim to the good will and endorsement of such a host of friends. For many years Mr. Goddard was a member of the Second Congregational church. In 1897, he was elected president of the Millbury Savings Bank.

(See Genealogy.)

NATHANIEL GODDARD

Nathaniel Goddard came to Millbury from Royalston, Mass., in 1819. He immediately engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes for the local trade. In 1826, his brother, Danforth, became a partner with him, and they carried on the business under the firm name of N. & D. Goddard for eight years, after which Danforth retired. Abner Rice then went into partnership with Mr.

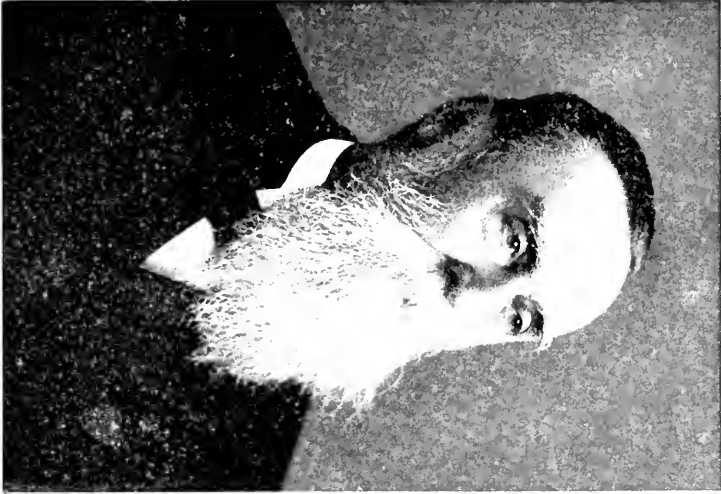

Goddard and they continued the business under the firm name of Goddard & Rice. Trade increased with them from year to year and soon they had a good southern and western business. In 1841, George H. Rice became identified with the company, which then became Goddard, Rice & Co. and, in addition to the making of boots and shoes, they began the currying of leather. In 1844, Abner Rice retired and the company name became again Goddard & Rice. In 1851, the firm dissolved and Ira N. Goddard became a partner with his father, so that the firm became N. Goddard & Son. This company retailed boots and shoes, and kept for a long time the only store of the kind in town. Mr. Goddard attended daily at his store, until 1887, the year of his death.

Mr. Goddard was a deacon of the Second Congregational Church for fifty years. Throughout his long business life, he was ever found to be a man of truth, honor and integrity. He was a strong anti-slavery man and sought to do away with the liquor traffic. Genial and kind in his manner, respected by all, he made friends on every hand.

REV. JOSEPH GOFFE

The following article is taken from extracts of a manuscript prepared by the Rev. Joseph Goffe, near the close of his life. He died at the age of seventy-nine, six years after this was written.

The Rev. Joseph Goffe was born in Bedford, N. H., near the western bank of the Merrimac River, August 6, 1766. His father's name was John Goffe, and his mother's maiden name was Jemima Holden of Groton, Mass. They had a family of eleven children, seven sons and four daughters, of whom he was the sixth son and eighth child in succession. His father was a farmer by profession, but bore military commissions under both George II. and George III. and served in the wars with the Indians and French in Canada. His father was usually called Major John Goffe, and he was the only son of Col. John Goffe of Derryfield (now Manchester), N. H. His grandfather was the only son of John Goffe, Esq., who was the son of John Goffe who fled to this country from England in 1662-63. This last named John Goffe was without doubt related to William Goffe, the regicide, who was a general in Cromwell's army, and was appointed by him as one of the judges who condemned King Charles I. to die on the scaffold, in January, 1618, and who, upon the restoration, together with his father-in-law, Whalley, another of the regicide judges, fled to this country as outlaws, whither they were pursued by the King's officers, but were never overtaken.

He went to Dartmouth College, was received into the Sophomore Class, and graduated in 1791, with a class of nearly fifty students, the largest class that then had ever been in that college. His next step was to apply himself to the study of the Bible and to systematic theology. Accordingly, immediately after leaving college, he put himself under the care and instruction of the Rev. Dr. Burton of Thetford, Vt., with whom he lived and studied about three months. In May, 1792, he went to New Haven, Conn., and put himself under the guidance and instruction of Dr. Jonathan Edwards (the younger Edwards) with whom he studied about six months. In December of the same year he was called to Sutton.

The terms of his settlement at the North Parish were five hundred dollars, two hundred fifty dollars yearly salary, and ten cords of wood annually. With this small salary he maintained himself and family, and laid up a little every year, for about fifteen years, when, on account of the depreciation of the currency, the parish added one hundred dollars to his yearly salary, making it three hundred fifty dollars, which was the most he ever received.

After preaching to this people as candidate and pastor for the space of thirty-eight years, after witnessing seven distinct seasons of special revival, and after receiving nearly four hundred members into the church he was released from the stated labors of the ministry at the age of 64 years, and retired under comfortable circumstances into the more private walks of life.

The chief instrumentality he used for the instruction of his people and the promoting and conducting of revivals was a plain and simple exhibition of divine truth. His great aim was to address the understanding, judgment and conscience of his auditory and, if possible, make them enlightened, judicious and consistent Christians. His system of doctrines was generally that taught by the Edwards, father and son, Bellamy, Hopkins and Emmons. His sermons were not hasty effusions of the moment, nor were they thrown together on the spur of the occasion, but were well and carefully studied and written out in full. More than nine-tenths of his sermons were double, that is, two from the same text, one for the forenoon and one for the afternoon of the Sabbath, and he attributed to this method no small part of this success.

He assisted in instituting the present American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions for he was a member of the General Association, which met in Bradford in 1810, and was made chairman of the committee of overtures. His old friend, the late Dr. Spring, of Newburyport, aided by the professors of Andover and several others, had formed and matured the grand design of instituting such a Board, with a view to the conversion of the whole world to Christ. The good doctor desired him to put some notice of it on his minutes, as he did, and laid it before the Association for their consideration and action. The Association adopted the plan, and proceeded to choose the first Board of Commissioners, in which he acted by his voice and by his vote.

He wrote and published nearly two thousand sermons written out in full, with a variety of addresses, tracts, dissertations and essays all in manuscript with a small volume of "Lectures on the Millennium."

On the 20th of December, 1796, more than two years after his ordination, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Waters, daughter of Ebenezer Waters of Sutton. They lived very happily together for more than forty-two years. She died on the 26th of January, 1839, aged sixty-eight years. They had five children, two sons and three daughters, all of whom lived to come to maturity.

(See Genealogy.)

CAPT. JOSEPH GRIGGS

Thomas Griggs came from Brookline to Sutton and bought what was then known as the White place, which is still in possession of his descendants. July 4, 1776, a day memorable in the history of our country, Thomas Griggs led to the altar as his young bride, Mary Goddard, of Grafton. Three children were born to them, among the number being Joseph, the subject of this sketch, whose birth was at the old homestead in Sutton, Nov. 3, 1786. After spending his childhood upon his father's farm, as a young man he went to Charlton, and learned the tanner's trade of Colonel Bacon, a famous tanner of those days. Associated with him at that time in learning the trade, was Calvin Crane, who was afterwards employed by him at West Millbury. Young Griggs worked at his trade in Northampton, Mass., but when business became dull and the employer stated to his workmen that he should be obliged to reduce the number of his men, without waiting for any one to be named as among those to leave, Joseph volunteered to be among the number.

He returned to Sutton and went to school and later he taught school in Millbury. Soon after this, he went to Providence and worked at his trade but soon returned to Sutton. Near the farmhouse of Charles Halberg in West Millbury, Mr. Griggs maintained a tannery with Colonel Fay, of Westboro. Some time after this a tannery was begun on the water privilege located just below the wool-scouring mill now operated by A. D. Windle at West Millbury. The persons associated with Mr. Griggs at that time, and later, were Mr. Abbot, Benjamin Whitney, Lieut. John Jacobs, Colonel Fay and other West Millbury people. A stock company was formed but one member after another withdrew, so that the company remained Griggs, Abbot & Whitney. Meeting with financial reverses Mr. Abbot assumed the debts of the company in Rhode Island, and Mr. Griggs those in Massachusetts. Thus he showed his integrity and his high sense of honor for the debts which he assumed were paid in full, principal and interest. He resumed business, and was associated for a short time with the late Capt. Amasa Wood.

The coolness with which Captain Griggs met every disaster, was well shown at the time his tannery was burned, many years ago. As related by Mr. William G. Davidson, Captain Griggs, when informed of the fire, calmly dressed himself and started to do what he could to save his property, without the excitement characteristic of most men at such a time. Fearing that a tall chimney, which was left standing, would fall, he requested the people assisting, to leave his property to suffer, rather than risk their lives for his benefit. Suddenly, Mr. John C. Davidson was missed by Captain Griggs, who expressed much solicitude for him as he was to be found nowhere about the scene, and the captain went home, to look for him there. Soon Mr. Davidson appeared, and the captain was so overjoyed at his coming, that he fell upon his knees and thanked God for his friend's safe keeping, praising his Maker, that amidst all the calamities that had befallen him, the life of his friend had been spared. As described by one who heard it, "the prayer was the most fervent and effectual one he ever heard."

Captain Griggs was a member of the Baptist church in Millbury. He assisted in its organization, and labored ever to advance its interests. It is related of him that when on one Sunday a man called at his door, and wished to transact some business, Captain Griggs told him plainly that he never transacted business on the Sabbath, and the man left.

He took great interest in the schools of the town, at all times seeking to advance the cause of education. He was also a good singer, and took great interest in that part of religious exercises. He was a man much respected in the community, having great influence with the help he employed. The young stood in awe of him yet they loved and respected him. Every industrious man that wanted work was furnished with it if it was a possible thing for him to do. It is related of the captain that, when a man whose note he held was taken sick and in need of assistance, Captain Griggs immediately went to him, gave him the note and inside of it several dollars to help him in his misfortune. He was prominent in the anti-slavery cause, and ever looked forward to the time when all in the country should be free.

Captain Griggs was a large man and of commanding presence. He was commissioned as captain in the Massachusetts Militia. He married a daughter of Jonathan Trask, of West Millbury, by whom he had several children, among whom were Almira, and Mary T., wife of Mr. Jonathan Munyan, of Worcester. After the death of Lieutenant Trask, his large farm came into the possession of Captain Griggs, who occupied it for many years, until his removal to Worcester, where he died Dec. 6, 1852, respected and honored by all who knew him.

THE HONORABLE HENRY CLAY HALL

The Hon. Henry Clay Hall served for nearly thirty consecutive years in the diplomatic service of the United States in Cuba and Central America, serving under eight Presidents, from Buchanan to Cleveland, a record that is believed to be without parallel in the history of the diplomatic service of the country. Much of his work was rendered during critical and important times in the history of the nation. He was in Havana, Cuba, as consul-general during the exciting years of the Civil War, where his life was in great danger, but he remained at his post of duty to the end. His conduct of the affairs of his office at that time attracted wide attention and won for him the esteem of the President and other officials of the government. He became interested in the Nicaragua Canal, and drafted the original treaty for its building. In 1882, Mr. Hall received from President Arthur a commission as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the five Central American states, and continued his residence at Guatamala until 1889. The last years of Mr. Hall's life were spent in Millbury where he was greatly respected. He died here Oct. 29, 1901.

In 1856 Mr. Hall married Miss Leila Echeverria who was born in Cuba, but who spent her early girlhood at the home of Mr. Ebenezer Waters Goffe, at the Old Common, Millbury, in company with her life-long friend, Mrs. Elizabeth Goffe Peirce. Mrs. Hall's youth, however, was spent on the plantation of her family in Cuba where she was reared amid the advantages of wealth and luxury. After her marriage to Mr. Hall in this country she lived at Havana amid the society of the diplomatic corps and American residents. She was a close student of her husband's duties and sympathetically supported him in his tasks.

Mrs. Hall was an artist of some merit and painted in oil colors several Cuban scenes with unusual appreciation of local coloring. She was also well-known for her exquisite needle-work.

After Mr. Hall's death Mrs. Hall continued to reside in Millbury, having as her companion the friend of her early girlhood, Mrs. Elizabeth W. Peirce, widow of the Rev. Charles H. Peirce.

Mrs. Hall died in 1915.

THOMAS J. HARRINGTON

Thomas J., son of Noah Harrington, was born at Worcester, Mass., in 1804. His education was received in his native city but, in 1826, he came to Millbury where he was employed at the armory of Asa Waters. In 1845, in company with Asa H. Waters and Benj. Flagg, he built the Millbury Cotton Mills. In 1847 he sold an interest which he had in a woolen company.

Mr. Harrington was highly respected. At one time he was president of the Millbury Savings Bank. He served for a short time as Town Clerk.

Mr. Harrington married Eliza, daughter of deacon Elijah Waters, whose home was at the corner of Main and Elm streets. Mr. Harrington resided here and later in the adjoining house on Elm Street.

William Harrington, a brother of Thomas J., erected the Harrington Block in Worcester and from him the corner received its name.

(See Genealogy.)

WILLIAM H. HARRINGTON

William H. Harrington, son of William, was born in Worcester, in 1824. The emigrant ancestor was Robert Harrington, who settled in Watertown, Mass., as early as 1642 and, in 1648, married Susanna George of that place. An ancestor served in the Revolutionary War.

Mr. Harrington was a highly respected citizen and is well-remembered by the older people. He was closely identified with the industrial life of the town.

Chauncy G. Harrington, a brother of William H., was formerly employed in town in the manufacture of iron tools.

William H. Harrington was a principal factor in the ownership and operation of the Atlanta Mills and in that connection he acquired much real estate including the Randall Block.

He married a daughter of Elder Forbes.

ITHRAN HARRIS

Ithran Harris, a soldier of the War of 1812, lived on High St., Bramanville. At one time he was engaged in the manufacture of shoes. He held a commission as Justice of the Peace and held court in the house later occupied by Hosea Crane. He was commonly called "Judge" Harris and was highly respected.

COL. JONATHAN HOLMAN

Jonathan Holman was born in that part of Sutton now included in West Millbury, in 1732. He was a son of Solomon, Jr., and a grandson of Solomon Holman of Newbury, Mass. His mother, the second wife of Solomon, Jr., was Mercy Waters of Sutton. In 1742, he was one of the petitioners for a new, or second, parish in Sutton.

Colonel Holman had a good share of the military spirit in him, for the tidings of the Boston massacre in 1770 raised the blood in his veins to the fever point. Twelve years before, he had bravely fought for England in the Colonial war and, when the call to arms came in 1775 to resist aggression, the men of the North parish quickly responded and they had in him a tutor who knew by experience that grim-visaged war meant death to many strong, brave breasts. His old musket of the days of the French war had been laid aside with its scars of a contest that had been waged fiercely in behalf of the mother land, but it was replaced by a sword drawn in the cause of freedom for the American people. A firm friend of Colonel Holman at this time was Ebenezer Learned, of Oxford, who, though connected with those opposing the patriot's cause, bravely espoused the side of freedom. With Mr. Holman he had bravely fought in the war with France, and had participated in the conquest of Canada. In 1775, Learned was early in the field, and he sought Jonathan Holman, who was chosen Major, as one of the officers of the regiment which he had organized. With other brave-hearted men he was at Bunker Hill to shield the patriot homes near that spot sacred to the cause of liberty. Soon the 5th Massachusetts regiment was organized, and its command was bestowed upon Colonel Holman. In 1776, after Boston was evacuated by the British, Gen. William Heath was ordered to New York, from Massachusetts. On the thirtieth day of March he arrived there; on July 27, he wrote as follows in his diary: "A regiment of militia, under command of Colonel Holman, arrived from Massachusetts." On the twenty-seventh day of August Holman's regiment received a baptism of fire near New York that steeled the hearts of his men for yet harder conflicts which were to follow. In October, his regiment met the foe at White Plains and although no great advantage was gained, yet it nobly bore its part in the fray and the entire command under Colonel Holman received the commendations of the superior officers. Some time after the battle of White Plains, Colonel Holman and his men were sent to Rhode Island on an alarm, and remained there during December, 1776, and January, 1777. On Sept. 26, 1777, his regiment of militia was sent to reinforce the northern army. He was at Bennington where the regiment was engaged in opposing the invasion of Burgoyne and at Saratoga, on October 17, he took part in the fight which not only humbled that general but marked the turning point of the Revolution in the effectual check of the British. Soon after this battle the regiment returned home having been gone on this campaign thirty days. This victory under Gates and Schuyler kindled new zeal for the patriot cause and, as Wilkinson told the tidings of victory, he exclaimed in a burst of enthusiasm, "The whole British army has laid down arms at Saratoga." Colonel Holman's active military career ended soon after the surrender of Burgoyne, although he did not resign from the service until 1779. Peaceful pursuits at home then took the attention of the men from the North and South Parishes of Sutton, who had borne aloft unsullied, amid disaster and victory, the banner of a free people.

Colonel Holman later became an extensive land owner in Millbury and in the state of Maine. He was a successful farmer and business man. About 1800, he built for his large family a mansion which was considered to be one of the best in the county. Having helped to secure the liberties of his country, the old hero retired to his extensive farm (now the home of John W. Pierce) in West Millbury, and lived there until 1814, when he was gathered to his fathers. The old building, a solid and enduring structure, is still standing, though dimmed by age. A beautiful lawn reaches away to the south, around which lie the pleasant fields once the pride of a Holman, who moved here from old Newbury. The land joins the farms of Capt. Samuel Trask and Capt. Samuel Small, who also went as soldiers to the war of the Revolution.

Colonel Holman filled many important offices in his native place, for his sterling character and sound judgment gave him a high standing with his fellow-citizens throughout his life. In fact, our honored ex-president, William Howard Taft, may justly be proud in having for an ancestor such a worthy man as Jonathan Holman.

Many people find it hard to understand why there are two monuments in our cemeteries erected to Colonel Holman, but the explanation is that some of his relatives, years after his death, wished to have the remains brought to the central Cemetery but others, who were more closely related, wished them to remain in the place where the body was first interred, which was a portion of his father's original farm. Accordingly, a stone to his memory was raised in the Central Cemetery by those who failed to have their wish granted. Thus in "God's acre" at West Millbury, the old North Parish burying ground of Sutton, beneath a towering marble shaft lie the remains of this Revolutionary hero, and around his resting-place the graves of many who contested by his side on the battle-fields of our country are scattered.

The hum of industry is still heard in his native village, the plow still turns the furrow on the broad acres that once were his, the cattle graze in the pastures as of old. Where long ago his mill-wheels turned round and round, other mills are running and his contemporaries have gone the way which all the living must follow. Though later generations walk where his feet have often trod, and yet later generations will come and go, his record as a man and a soldier is written indelibly and on the page inscribed with the list of Worcester county heroes no name is more deeply impressed than that of Jonathan Holman.

In the same year that Colonel Holman died his son Elijah, who became the residuary legatee under the will of his father, executed a bond in favor of his mother-in-law, which conveyed to him the entire estate of his father.

RODNEY N. HOLMAN

Rodney Nelson Holman was born in Millbury, Oct. 8, 1834. He was a descendant of Lieut. David Holman, a Revolutionary soldier. For many years Mr. Holman was engaged in the insurance business, through which he became well-known throughout New England. He enlisted in Company F, 1st Battalion, Mass. Heavy Artillery. He was a member of Geo. A. Custer Post, G. A. R., and filled important offices in that organization. He was a member of Olive Branch Lodge A. F. and A. M., Tyrian Royal Arch Chapter, Hiram Council of Worcester, and Adah Chapter, Order of Eastern Star. He was an active member of the Second Congregational Church. A son, Charles F. Holman, is editor and proprietor of "The Millbury Journal," and has served as assessor.

(See Genealogy.)

JUDGE JOHN HOPKINS

Judge John Hopkins, born March 19, 1840, was a native of Leonard Stanly, England. In 1842, his father, James Hopkins, came to America, living for a time in Dracut, Massachusetts, and later moved to Canada. As a boy John Hopkins began work in a woolen mill, in West Eaton, N. Y. When sixteen years of age, he found employment in a woolen mill, at Waterford, R. I. Some time after this he attended school at Andover, at Auburn, N. Y., and at Burlington, Vt. He later entered Dartmouth College from which he was graduated in 1862. In this same year he read law in the office of J. B. Cooke, at Blackstone. He also taught school in this state, in Rhode Island, in Vermont, and in New Hampshire. In 1864, he was admitted to the bar of Worcester County, Massachusetts, and for twenty-seven years he was a practicing attorney, having an office at Millbury, and one in Worcester.

In 1891, Mr. Hopkins was appointed Judge of the Superior Court of the Commonwealth, a position which he held until his death.

Judge Hopkins was an able speaker and his appearance before legislative committees carried great weight for his arguments were clear, concise, and hard to controvert. He was considered one of the ablest criminal lawyers in the state, and stood high as an attorney in civil cases. His long connection with the sewerage contest between Millbury and Worcester made him extensively known. He served the town in many important positions, having been representative in the General Court in 1882-1883, selectman, member of the school committee, assessor and trustee of the town library.

He married Mary C. Salisbury, of Blackstone, Mass. Their children were: Herbert S.; Herman; and Grace. The death of Judge Hopkins, which occurred May 19, 1902, removed one of our ablest citizens and one who was universally respected.

BION B. HOWARD

Bion B. Howard resided in Millbury in the 60's and 70's and left a wholesome impression on the town. He was a gentleman with many interests under his care. Twice he was agent of the Cordis Mills which prospered under his direction. In 1872 and 1873, he was successively on the board of selectmen and he also served as cemetery commissioner. In 1879, he was elected a director in the Millbury National Bank. He is remembered as an owner and admirer of fine horses.

JUDGE JOHN HOPKINS
1840 - 1902

EDWIN HOYLE

Edwin Hoyle came to America in 1852, when a lad of eight, and went to live with relatives at Millbury. He received a common school education and worked in a cotton mill. He early went into business for himself and was a pioneer in the art of waste scouring in the United States. His mill was located on a street leading from West Main street along Ramshorn Stream and his former residence is opposite. In politics Mr. Hoyle was a Republican. He was actively interested in public affairs, especially in the welfare of the town.

SAMUEL E. HULL

The Hull family is descended from the Rev. Joseph Hull, a clergyman of England, who came to this country from Somerset. He lived in Hingham, and later became a pastor of the Church at Yarmouth. Several of the family resided in Uxbridge and Millbury. Elias, son of William Hull, of the sixth generation, was born in Uxbridge, Mass., in 1806. The farm at the foot of Hull Hill, owned by William, descended to Elias who lived there until his death in 1871. Samuel E. Hull, son of Elias, was born on this farm in 1843, and remained there until he reached his majority. He received his education in our public schools, and at Eastman's Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Mr. Hull enlisted during the Civil War, and served at Fort Warren, Boston harbor. He then returned to Millbury, where four years were spent on the farm, and in the saw-mill connected therewith. For five years he was a wood-molder at Worcester. He next went to Philadelphia, Pa., where he remained three years with a manufacturing company. For eleven years, he was employed by the C. D. Morse Co., at Millbury. For a year he was engaged as guard at the State Prison at Concord.

Mr. Hull engaged in business for himself, in 1882, succeeding Briggs & Co. in the cotton and wool-waste trade, at Millbury. In 1892, he succeeded to the wool business of D. C. Sumner in Worcester which, together with the business at Millbury, was conducted by him until his death.

Mr. Hull was president of the Millbury National Bank, and a trustee of the Millbury Savings Bank. He served as a director of the Millbury Water Company for a long period. For several years he was a selectman of the town and for part of the time chairman of the Board. For two years he represented the town in the House of Representatives, and for two years he was in the State Senate. Mr. Hull was a familiar figure in the conventions of his party here and elsewhere.

Mr. Hull saved the lives of five of the townspeople when a horse with a carriage containing them backed off a bridge. In recognition of this a watch was presented to him by the town, having on it this inscription: "In April, 1871, S. E. Hull rescued five persons from drowning. This watch is presented to him by the town of Millbury, Massachusetts, as a testimonial of his services at the time." The pond at which this catastrophe occurred was situated at the Hull farm, located on the western side of the Blackstone River three-quarters of a mile above Greenwood Crossing.

(See Annals, 1872.)

Mr. Hull was a Knight Templar, a member of George A. Custer, Post 70, G. A. R., and of the Home Market Club of Boston; also a member of the Massachusetts Republican Club, as well as the Commonwealth Club of Worcester.

CHAPTER XXXI

INDEPENDENT SKETCHES, J-S

DR. CHARLES JEWETT

Among the many prominent men who have had a home in Millbury may be mentioned Dr. Charles Jewett, the noted temperance lecturer, and fellow-worker with John B. Gough, John H. W. Hawkins, and others. Dr. Jewett was born in Lisbon, Conn., Sept. 5, 1807. As a lad, he worked for a time at making nails by hand. He received part of his education at the Academy in Plainfield, Conn. His medical studies were pursued under Dr. Elijah Baldwin, of South Canterbury, Conn.

Dr. Jewett began the practice of medicine in East Greenwich, R. I., in 1829, at the age of twenty-two. He soon became much interested in the cause of temperance and from that time until his death he labored to do away with the liquor traffic. In after years, he bought the farm now owned by Calvin W. Brackett, and moved there in 1849. Wm. M. Thayer, in his life of Dr. Jewett, says: "From the time the doctor became a citizen of Millbury, he identified himself with all that was necessary to promote the welfare of the town and the church. The schools, the lyceum, the library, and whatever else was indispensable to social and intellectual growth, enlisted his deepest interest. Especially the moral and spiritual growth of the community absorbed his attention. He and his family united with the (2d) Congregational Church and Society (then) under the pastoral care of Rev. Leverett Griggs. The service which the doctor and family rendered to both pastor and people was highly esteemed. Dr. Jewett's wit, humor, talents, piety and tact became an element in the social, intellectual and moral condition of the town." Dr. Griggs in a letter says: "it is with pleasure I pen a few thoughts respecting Dr. Charles Jewett. He was a parishioner of mine, very much respected and beloved the few years he resided in Millbury, Mass. Dr. Jewett was ready for almost any emergency. In Millbury we were generally favored with a course of lectures in the winter. On one occasion a large assembly convened, but the expected lecturer did not come. Inquiry was made of the doctor whether he would consent to address the audience. No one, I presume, expected anything but a temperance talk. He rose and delighted that audience for a full hour, with an exceedingly entertaining lecture on Shakespeare. He quoted lengthy passages, and represented the different characters, as but few men are able to do."

In the spring of 1854, Dr. Jewett moved with his family to Batavia, Illinois, and his departure was much regretted. His stay there was short, and he later moved to Minnesota. He resided at Faribault, Minn., in 1855, still engaged in every good work. In 1856, he wrote to his friends in the east asking help to build a place of worship for the people of his locality. The Second Congregational Church at Millbury responded with thirty-five dollars, and he had the satisfaction of soon seeing a church and Sunday School organized there, and a house of worship erected. John C. Crane was a pioneer in Minnesota at the time Dr. Jewett was at Faribault, and he has testified to the esteem in which the doctor was held.

Dr. Jewett returned to Massachusetts in 1858 and for a few months resided again among his old neighbors, in Millbury, after which he again engaged in temperance work elsewhere.

Dr. Jewett was a strong anti-slavery man, and circulated petitions for abolishing slavery in the District of Columbia. Upon the passage of the Fugitive Slave Law he became at once a volunteer station agent on the "under-ground railroad," and his house at Millbury (in 1915 occupied by Mr. Ralph Nutting) was known to fleeing fugitives as a safe rendezvous. He is said to have fitted (as Mr. Thayer tells) a place under a stairway in his dwelling at Park Hill, where foot-sore travellers, with "skins not colored like his own," might be secreted. The good doctor took these fleeing slaves early in the morning, after their arrival, and placed them on board a train for Canada and freedom. Some years later, after his Minnesota venture, Dr. Jewett moved to Wisconsin, where he met sickness and financial troubles. He became discouraged but he was helped by his old friend, John B. Gough, and by Mr. L. M. Sargent. On April 3, 1879, Dr. Jewett died at Norwich Town, Connecticut, after a long and useful life. We are told that he was the father of thirteen children.

THOMAS KENDALL, Jr.

Thomas Kendall, Jr., son of the Rev. Thomas Kendall, first minister of Foxborough, Mass., was born there August 3, 1786, being the fifth Thomas in direct descent from Francis Kendall. In 1800, the father bought the John Kidder farm situated very near the Oxford line in Millbury (then Sutton), on a road which leads from the head of Ramshorn Pond to Federal or Long Hill in Oxford. The Rev. Thomas Kendall married Ruth, daughter of Richard Waters, an original settler of Sutton. It is believed that from him and William Plaise, another ancestor, gunsmiths, Mr. Kendall inherited much of his mechanical ingenuity. Thomas Kendall, Jr., married Olive, a daughter of Lemuel Crane at Oxford, Mass. The history of Sutton states that Mr. Kendall had five fingers on each hand.

At the home place Mr. Kendall had his shop in which he made, it is believed, the first complete thermometer in the country. While using thermometers previously in his tests, he had found that the only "standards" were imported and that they were expensive. He thereupon invented a machine for graduating the scale to conform to the variation of the column of mercury and he produced an accurate instrument at a comparatively small cost.

Mr. Kendall had received a good education and was a capable machinist. He installed the machinery in the old Dudley Merino mills, which were among the first to use power-looms in this country. He manufactured surveyors' compasses and many other useful articles possibly equipping with their instruments his brother-in-law, Ebenezer Waters, and his father-in-law, Lemuel Crane, who were both civil engineers. In the "Massachusetts Spy" of February 25, 1817, the following advertisement appeared:

"Thomas Kendall, Jr., Millbury, Mass., manufactures Thermometers of all kinds used by gentlemen, distillers, dyers, and those who make use of lead or oil in tempering steel. Also makes surveying compasses, scale protectors, spirit levels, and engraved mechanics' tools—goods forwarded by Post Riders.

"THOMAS KENDALL, Jr."

When Mr. Kendall was modestly laboring in his shop, two other inventors lived within three miles of him, namely, Thomas Blanchard and Asa Kenney, with both of whom he exchanged ideas.

In 1820, Mr. Kendall's health became very much impaired and he was induced to move with his family to New Lebanon, New York, where he lived as a country gentleman, looking after a small farm and interesting himself in the affairs and improvement of the town, then largely populated with settlers from New England. With the help of his eldest son, he made a few thermometers, taking them to New Haven (Yale College), Albany Observatory, New York City, Philadelphia and Washington. These were tested thoroughly and placed on the market, but on account of Mr. Kendall's health the business was conducted by his son John, a lad of eighteen. It was continued by him and the family until 1892, the year of the death of John Kendall, when the old shop, built in 1833, was permanently closed.

Mr. Kendall became interested with Elam Tilden (father of Samuel J. Tilden) in a school for the higher education of boys, and it was while on a visit to New York City in the interests of this school that he contracted a cold which resulted in his death at Albany, N. Y., December 10, 1831. He was buried at New Lebanon, N. Y.

The "Albany Gazette," in 1881, thus referred to him:—"The life of an individual like Mr. Kendall deserves a brief notice. As our country advances in science, it will be a matter of patriotism to gather up the names of those who were its earliest promoters, and in the list of practical men no one better demands attention than the subject of these brief lines. He was decidedly an individual of a keen, investigating turn of mind, and of great industry. We believe we are correct in stating that he was the first in this country who attempted the manufacture of thermometers. These were originally, of course, rude and imperfect, but within a few years most of them were accurate and well constructed. So generally were his merits allowed that some years since he received the patronage of the Regents of the University in an order to supply all the academies of New York with his thermometers."

ASA KENNEY, Jr.

Asa Kenney was born in West Millbury (then a part of Sutton) in 1768. His youth was spent on the farm but he afterwards turned his attention to mechanical work and was regarded as one of the most skilful mechanics of his day. He occupied a small shop, directly opposite that of Thomas Blanchard, in West Millbury and connected with this was a brass foundry, the first one built this side of Boston. Thus he was the pioneer in brass work for this section. He also made silver spoons, trusses, surgeon's lancets and gold beads. Brass trimmings used for gunwork at the armory of Asa Waters, and at the other gun shops in the county, were cast at his shop.

Mr. Kenney also gained a knowledge of clock construction being one of the few good clock-makers of the time, such as Robert Burr of Lexington, and Charles Stratton of Holden. He made a specialty of the tall brass hall clocks that are now so highly prized and many clocks made by him are still running of which some are to be found in Millbury and Sutton, one being in the possession of Mr. Henry W. Carter. It was then the custom to make a few clocks and go on a circuit to find purchasers, but the superior workmanship and the excellent time-keeping qualities of his instruments furnished Mr. Kenney with much unsolicited work. Many of these clocks were built with an indicator which gave the day of the month and the changes of the moon. Some were constructed with a vessel upon the top and, as the pendulum swung back and forth, the heaving of the vessel could be plainly seen. The price paid at the time for many of these was as high as seventy-five dollars and today the owners are loath to part with them at any price.

It is uncertain when the custom of using brass balls upon the horns of cattle originated, but the first ones used in the county were made by Mr. Kenney. Previously, a clumsy piece of wood had been used.

Mr. Kenney disputed with Thomas Blanchard the claim to the invention of the eccentric lathe, and the contention was referred to a board of arbitrators, of which the Hon. Salem Towne, of Charlton, was chairman. Mr. Blanchard's counsel was Gov. Levi Lincoln and the Hon. John Davis. The counsel for Mr. Kenney were the Hon. Samuel Hoar, of Concord, and the Hon. Jonas L. Sibley, of Sutton. A gentleman who was present at the hearing stated that "Kenney exhibited a beautiful brass model polished like a mirror; Blanchard exhibited a rather clumsy wooden model about four feet long." After a hearing which continued several days the matter was decided in favor of Thomas Blanchard.

In personal appearance Mr. Kenney was of medium height, rather thick-set, and in his prime weighed about two hundred pounds. He was a man of generous nature, liberal with his means, and although he had no superior in his special line of work, he did not succeed in securing to himself a competence. Unlike Thomas Blanchard, he died poor.

Mr. Kenney continued his work in brass until the infirmities of age came upon him. He was succeeded by his son Hiram who built a shop nearby.

MOWRY A. LAPHAM

Mowry A. Lapham was born in Burrillville, R. I., in 1819, where he attended school until he was sixteen years of age. His father was a carpenter and mill-workman with whom he worked for two years. He then moved to Waterford, Mass., and worked as a carpenter for two years. The following two years were spent in a machine-shop after which he was employed for two years at the machine works of Southwick & Brown at Millville. He next was employed by Hawes, Marvill & Devoll of Fall River. While living here he married Harriet T. Thayer, of Mendon, in that part of the town which is now Blackstone. At the age of twenty-six, having returned to Millville, he was employed in the machine-shop of Farnum & Harding, as superintendent of the iron and wood-working department.

His career as a manufacturer began in 1860, when he went to Cherry Valley, Mass., and engaged in the manufacture of Kersey-meres, in the firm of Lapham & Smith. Upon the retirement of Mr. Smith, two years later, Mr. Lapham, as sole owner, operated the mill until it was burned, four years afterward.

In 1863, he bought the Burbank paper-mill privilege in Millbury, then owned by F. W. Richmond of Providence, R. I. A company was formed by M. & S. Lapham, and a mill was built. After the death of Smith Lapham, the business was continued under the name of Mowry A. Lapham. The first mill erected by Mr. Lapham was burned in 1876 and the present mill was built in 1879. As a successful manufacturer he contributed notably to the material welfare of the town.

Mr. Lapham never lived in Millbury, but resided in Worcester.

For six years he was a member of the board of Aldermen and for many years was a director of the Manufacturer's Mutual Insurance Company of Worcester.

Mr. Lapham had two children, Frederick A., once selectman of Millbury, and Hattie M., who married F. A. Leland, of Worcester.

DR. WILLIAM H. LINCOLN

Dr. William H. Lincoln, eldest of five children, was born at Dorchester, Mass. He attended the local public schools and later the So. Paris, Maine, Academy. As a young man he began the practice of dentistry in Portland, Maine. In 1850, he entered Bowdoin Medical School at Brunswick, Maine, and for six years kept up the practice of dentistry and attended to his medical studies, receiving the degree of M. D. from Bowdoin in 1856.

He began the practice of medicine at Turner, Maine. Here he married Laura Nudd who died about a year after their marriage. Soon after this he moved to Hubbardston, Mass., where he continued the practice of his profession. Here, in 1859, he married Eunice A. Reid.

In 1862, Dr. Lincoln enlisted, as assistant-surgeon, in the Seventh Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers with which he served three years, being promoted to the rank of surgeon. At the conclusion of the war he was made a fellow in the Massachusetts Medical Society.

In 1865, Dr. Lincoln began the practice of medicine in Millbury and resided here for the remainder of his life. He was faithful in his attention to his patients. His manner was zealous and determined, for to him the patient was always of paramount and the attention to friends of secondary importance. His practice was a wide one and he was known as a skilful surgeon as well as a competent physician.

Dr. Lincoln was a member of Olive Branch Lodge, F. and A. M.; of Tyrian Royal Arch Chapter and its treasurer for seventeen years; of Worcester County Commandery of Knights Templar; and of George A. Custer Post 70, G. A. R. For many years he was a member of the Second Congregational Church.

(See Genealogy.)

NYMPHAS LONGLEY

Nymphas Longley, son of John, was born at Norridgewock, Maine, in 1793, but as a young man he moved to Millbury. Here he became prominent in local affairs and was usually referred to as 'Squire Longley. He served on the board of selectmen and as overseer of the poor. He was a man of intelligence and worth, kind-hearted, and enjoyed the respect and esteem of his fellow-townsmen, conducting himself in the manner of a gentleman of the old school.

(See Genealogy.)

EZRA LOVELL

Capt. Ezra Lovell served actively in the Revolutionary War (see record of Revolutionary Soldiers). He rose from the grade of corporal to the rank of first lieutenant. He afterward attained the rank of captain and was generally known by this title. He was a conspicuous man of his generation and an influential one in local affairs. As grandson of one of the earliest settlers and grandfather of Russell Buckman Lovell who is still living in Millbury at an advanced age Captain Lovell was a member of one of the most representative Millbury families that the town can boast. He was a farmer in his middle and later life.

JOHN MARTIN

In 1856, John Martin moved from Lincoln, R. I., to Millbury, which continued to be his residence. He was first employed by Joseph Merry in the cotton waste business at the location which the Hull Bros. at present occupy. Later he was engaged in the foundry business with Warren Sweetser, having a shop on South Main Street. After retiring from this enterprise, he turned his attention to farming. He again became interested in foundry work with W. R. Cunningham, but he sold this out when the latter retired. He was much interested in the public affairs of the town and served as a member of the board of assessors for one year. He was a trustee of the Millbury Savings Bank from 1884 until his death. He was a member of the Olive Branch Lodge of Masons.

FRANCIS MCCRACKEN

Francis McCracken, who was of Scottish descent, made carpets and other woolen goods on hand-loom at the old Common in the early days of Millbury and is reputed to have been the first weaver of fancy kerseys by hand in town. Previous to his coming to this country he held a commission in the British army. He lived to a good age, being ninety-two years old at the time of his death.

(See Genealogy.)

DR. WILLIAM BOWEN MOORE

Dr. William Bowen Moore, son of John Elias Moore, was born in Charleston, S. C., Feb. 13, 1805. He was a graduate of Brown University and of the Medical School of Philadelphia, Penn. He practiced medicine in Millbury, from 1828 to 1842, and was considered a skilful physician. As his health became impaired, he sought to recuperate in his native city, placing himself under the care of an eminent physician who resided there, but all efforts in his behalf proved futile, and he died there, Apr. 10, 1843. A Charleston paper, published at the time, thus referred to him:

"It is not often that the grave closes over one whose loss is so afflicting, so irreparable as Dr. William Bowen Moore who died here the 10th instant. As a physician and surgeon Dr. Moore was highly respected by the faculty. He was skilful and his affectionate manners rendered him always a welcome visitor in the sick room. Dr. Moore was uniformly courteous and affable. The poor of the towns where he practiced will long remember his kindness. In a letter to a friend in this city, a short time before his death, he said, 'Nothing on earth is so eloquent and overcoming as a good heart. It is noble, yes, Godlike, to overcome by charity and love. If there is anything I grieve over, it is my inability to do for my kind that which my heart prompts me to do.'"

His daughter was the first wife of Nathan H. Sears.

CHARLES DIMINICK MORSE

Charles Diminick Morse was born at Woodstock, Conn., where he received his early education.

About 1850, he came to Millbury and entered the employment of J. Coombs & Co., manufacturers of sashes and blinds. This industry had been established by Allen & Goddard near the site of the present N. Y., N. H. & H. depot in a building which is still standing below the Gowing bridge. He remained with this firm for a year when Mr. Coombs moved to Chicago. In 1852, T. S.

Fullam, E. M. Park, A. S. Small and C. D. Morse formed a firm known as Fullam, Morse & Co., which purchased the business of Coombs & Co. Later in the same year Mr. Small retired and, in 1853, Mr. Fullam also retired, selling to Horace Armsby. The firm then became Armsby & Morse. About 1856, Mr. Park retired. In 1871, Mr. Morse bought the interest of Mr. Armsby and the firm became C. D. Morse & Co., which it continued to be until the time of Mr. Morse's death.

The shops were totally destroyed by fire, July 24, 1872, but they were immediately rebuilt. In 1881, another fire occurred with a partial loss, but the works were again soon repaired.

Mr. Morse filled many important positions of trust and honor in the town. He served on the board of selectmen, but declined a re-election, owing to the pressure of private business. He was a member of the board of assessors and of the board of fire engineers. In 1878, when after a long and heated controversy it was decided to build a new town hall, he was made chairman of the building committee. He was a member of the committee appointed by the town to bring about some legislation that should compel the city of Worcester to properly treat its sewage before putting it into the Blackstone River, and it was while serving upon this committee that his ability as an indefatigable worker attracted general attention throughout the state. During the sewage contest he not only gave much time without compensation, but he expended many dollars of his own money.

He was a leading spirit in the movement for a public supply of water, as he was largely instrumental in securing a charter for and in the organization of the Millbury Water Co., but he did not live long enough to see his plans carried out.

In 1863, Mr. Morse became a member of the board of directors of the Millbury National Bank, and, in 1879, upon the death of Hosea Crane, he was chosen to be its president, filling the position with ability until his death. Among other offices held by him were the following: vice-president and member of the board of investment of Millbury Savings Bank; director of Millbury & Worcester Street Railway Co.; president of Millbury Electric Company; president of Millbury Business Union, and a Director of the Millbury Water Company.

In politics Mr. Morse was a Republican, and was a man of influence in the councils of his party. In 1873, he was elected as representative to the General Court by the district which at the time included the towns of Webster, Dudley, Sutton, Oxford, Douglas, and Millbury.

CHARLES DIMOCK MORSE

JOHN RHODES

Mr. Morse was a member of Olive Branch Lodge, F. and A. M.; of Tyrian Royal Arch Chapter; and Worcester Commandery Knight Templar. He was connected with the Builders' Exchange of Worcester, and was its president for two years. He belonged to the Worcester Board of Trade, and the Home Market Club of Boston. He was a member of the Second Congregational Church of Millbury, which he supported loyally.

Mr. Morse was one of the most conspicuous men of his generation in Millbury. He stood for progress and improvement in all matters, frequently exerting his influence for better schools, roads, public buildings, fire protection, and general conditions. He was a man of firm convictions and resolutely maintained his purposes. In the controversy over the sewage question, in the location and erection of the town house, and in the provision for an adequate water supply he stood in the midst of ardent controversy, but in all he was a most potent factor in bringing each to its final consummation. Few men in all its history have been so intimately identified with the progress of the town or known abroad as such valued and representative citizens.

(See Genealogy.)

JOHN RHODES

John Rhodes was born at Whitesboro, N. Y., Feb. 5, 1813. His father, who was a dyer, was at the time engaged in farming. John Rhodes followed his father's occupation until nineteen years of age, when he went to North Carolina, travelling through the state with a team and selling dry-goods.

His first mill-work was done as a dyer in a Connecticut mill, and later he moved to Providence, R. I. When he was twenty-four years of age he was employed in the same capacity by J. & A. Morse, of Smithville, R. I. In 1846, he moved to Bellingham, Mass., where, until 1851, he operated a mill for the manufacture of cotton warp. He then came to Millbury, and, in company with Joseph H. Merry, rented a small mill, now occupied by Hull Bros., where for three years he continued the manufacture of cotton warp.

In 1854, the firm bought the stone mill (now occupied by E. F. Rice & Co.) and upon the retirement of Mr. Merry some time later

Mr. Rhodes continued the business alone. About 1864, he leased, at North Oxford, what was known as the "Protective" mill, and a year later he bought the property, and renamed it the "Oxford Cotton Mill." He then became associated with a partner, in the firm of Rhodes & Wilmarth. The mill was sold by Mr. Rhodes in 1888. In 1872, he bought what is now known as Mayo Mill No. 3, then known as "The Pinafore" situated on the site of the Old Braman mill.

Several years after the death of Alfred Morse, at Farnumsville, in company with Wm. Andrews, of Woonsocket, and Capt. Peter Simpson, of Millbury, Mr. Rhodes bought the privilege, tenements, hotel, and all the factory property formerly owned by Mr. Morse. The business was continued by them for a few years, when Mr. Rhodes withdrew.

Mr. Rhodes married, in 1838, Sarah B. Johnson, of West Woodstock, Conn. They had two children, Otis W., and Maria, who married Henry M. Wilcox, of Johnston, R. I. Mrs. Rhodes died in 1880. In 1869, Mr. Rhodes was chosen to represent the district in the legislature, a position which he filled acceptably. For some time previous to his death, he was in ill-health, and his interests were looked after by his son-in-law, Mr. Wilcox. The closing years of his life were spent in the fine residence which he built at the corner of Main and Elm streets, once the site of the home of Dea. Elijah Waters.

The career of Mr. Rhodes as a business man was honorable and successful. For many years he was a director in the National Bank. He was a prominent mason, for many years being treasurer of the Olive Branch Lodge. He contributed generously toward fitting up the present Masonic Hall.

HON. HENRY C. RICE

The Hon. Henry C. Rice was born in Millbury in 1828. He was a son of Oliver Rice, a former well-known citizen, whose trade was that of pail-maker. These he made of sassafras wood which was strong and light. He lived at the Hodgdon place on Providence Street.

Henry C. Rice was graduated from Brown College in 1850 after which he studied law in the offices of Peter C. Bacon, Esq., the Hon. Dwight Foster, and P. Emory Aldrich, Esq. He was admitted to the bar in 1852. He represented Worcester in the General Court for two years, being a member of the committee on the revision of the statutes of the state. In 1879, he was a senator of the Commonwealth.

He married Josephine, daughter of the Hon. Charles Allen. He died at Worcester in 1891.

SAMUEL SAWYER

Samuel Sawyer, a Civil War veteran, was born in Westbrook, Maine, in 1808. He came to Millbury in 1833, and for almost fifty years followed the trade of a blacksmith. At the breaking out of the Civil War he raised a company for the service backed by Col. A. H. Waters who assumed whatever expense attended the work, but because of rivalry the efforts failed. His father had been a soldier in the War of 1812, losing an arm in that struggle. As he was determined to do his share as a soldier, in 1862 he enlisted in the 36th Massachusetts regiment. In 1828, he became a member of the Worcester Light Infantry and at the time of his death he was the oldest member of the organization. During his connection with this company he formed the acquaintance of Ambrose E. Burnside who later became a Union general. During the war General Burnside found out that Mr. Sawyer, who at the time was over fifty years of age, was a private under his command, so he sought to make military duty easy for him. Later, it is believed, General Burnside recommended him to General Sherman for whom he became despatch carrier. General Sherman did not forget the aged Millbury private for when, after the war, the general was a guest at the New England fair, held at Worcester, among the thousands of people assembled he recognized the white haired despatch carrier of war days and he gave him a hearty hand shake as a comrade. Mr. Sawyer was in engagements at Spotsylvania, Cold Harbor, in the Wilderness and before Petersburg, being under fire for forty days and nights.

To his delight he was at the dedication of the Bunker Hill monument, and heard the famous oration by Daniel Webster.

He died in February, 1900, at the age of eighty-one. A son of Mr. Sawyer, Alphonso P., was appointed auditor for the government at Porto Rico, by President Taft, holding the position for over a year. Another son, Charles H., resides in Millbury, but is engaged in business in Worcester.

IRVING B. SAYLES

Irving B. Sayles was a native of Woonsocket, R. I., and his early life was passed there. He came to Millbury when a young man and was associated with Nelson Walling at the Walling Woolen mill in Bramanville for whom he was bookkeeper.

In 1893, he was appointed a national bank examiner by President Grover Cleveland and assigned to a district in Massachusetts. He quickly mastered the duties of the office and continued to fill the position until 1906, when, upon the death of Amos Armsby, treasurer of the Millbury Savings Bank, he was chosen to fill the vacancy. The wisdom of the choice was demonstrated by the faithful and highly efficient manner in which he discharged the duties of the office from first to last.

Mr. Sayles entered into politics soon after coming to Millbury and became a leader in the Democratic party. He held many offices within the gift of the voters of the town, including those of selectman, assessor, trustee of the town library, and school-committeeman. He was still in service as library trustee and on the school board at the time of his death. In 1872 he was elected representative to the legislature of the Commonwealth and, in 1886, was elected senator from the third district. In 1888, he was nominated for Congress from the tenth district but was defeated by a very small majority by the Hon. Joseph H. Walker of Worcester.

Mr. Sayles was a member and Past Master of Olive Branch Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and a charter member and Past High Priest of Tyrian Royal Arch chapter of Millbury. He was also a member of Worcester County Commandery Knight Templars of Worcester. He was Past Senior Grand Warden of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of Massachusetts.

His courteous and dignified bearing and his serene disposition caused his relations with the officials of the bank and with the public to be most agreeable.

Mr. Sayles married, first, Amelia Walling, daughter of Nelson and Eliza Walling. Their children were Dwight, Nelson Walling, and Ethel. Mr. Sayles married, second, Cora Campbell.

NATHAN H. SEARS

Nathan Henry Sears was born at Brewster, Mass. In 1848, he moved to Worcester where he worked on leather goods. In 1853 he came to Millbury where he was foreman for the firm of Johnson, Brown and Co. who manufactured leather goods. He kept a drug store from 1865 until 1898.

Mr. Sears was a prominent citizen in many lines of activity. He was for a number of years a member of the fire department and part of the time was its chief, having one of the steam fire-engines named in his honor. For over forty years he was commissioner of cemeteries, much of the time being chairman of the board. During this period the condition and appearance of the cemeteries was greatly improved, a change in which he took much pride. He caused the graves of Revolutionary soldiers to be marked. He has long been identified with leadership in the Republican party. He represented the district for a term in the State Legislature. For sixteen years, i. e., from 1898 until 1914, Mr. Sears was postmaster. He was town treasurer for two years in 1872 and 1873.

Mr. Sears served two enlistments in the Civil War, the first being with the Tenth Unattached Co. and the second with Co. F., 1st battalion of heavy artillery, both terms of service being at Fort Warren in Boston Harbor.

Mr. Sears was a member of the Unitarian Society of Millbury in whose affairs he ever took a warm interest. He was a member of George A. Custer Post 70, G. A. R. He was a prominent Mason, having taken thirty-two degrees in that order.

Capt. PETER SIMPSON

Capt. Peter Simpson, son of Peter Simpson, was born in St. Ours, near Montreal, Canada, in January, 1821. At the age of sixteen he left home and worked on a farm in Claremont, N. H. In 1838, he went to Woonsocket, R. I., where he was employed in the woolen mills of Edward Harris, after which he worked in woolen mills at Blackstone. He later returned to Woonsocket, and was employed in the woolen mill of Daniel Paine. He afterward returned to the employ of Mr. Harris with whom he remained until about 1860 and was for many years superintendent of his mills.

At the beginning of the Civil War, Mr. Simpson joined the First Regiment of Rhode Island Volunteer Militia, a three months' organization, and went to the front as captain of the Woonsocket company. He was in the first battle of the war where he distinguished himself for bravery. He returned with his company and began the manufacture of cotton goods in a small mill in the town of Franklin. In 1862, he moved to Millbury. During the Civil War, Captain Simpson raised a company of Millbury men and proceeded to Boston, but, owing to some misunderstanding with the authorities, the company was not accepted, so it returned home. (It is understood that preference was given to militia companies.)

In 1874, in company with the late John Rhodes and William Andrews, he purchased the Farnumsville Cotton Mills. In 1878, Andrews & Simpson bought Mr. Rhodes' interest, and conducted the mills until 1885, when the property was sold.

Captain Simpson was a man of great business tact, personally looking after his interest in his mills. He was at the office nearly every morning when the wheel started. He was prominent in town affairs. He served as a director of the Millbury National Bank. He was President of the Millbury Electric Light Company. He also served as chief engineer of the fire department for a number of years, a position which he filled with great credit to himself and to the town. He was very charitable to the poor, and many a one in trouble has reason to thank him for his kind deeds. He gave liberally toward the building of the Baptist Church, and continued to be a generous supporter.

Captain Simpson was a member of Olive Branch Lodge, F. and A. M., of Tyrian Royal Arch Chapter, and of Worcester County Commandery of Knights Templars.

He married Maria Follett. They had two daughters,—one, the wife of S. N. Rogers; the other, the wife of W. G. Farnsworth. Captain Simpson died in Millbury in 1889.

(See "Industries on the Blackstone.")

AMOS SINGLETARY

Amos Singletary, son of John and Mary Grelee Singletary, was the first white person born in what is now the town of Millbury. In the old County-Bridge, or Providence street, burial place, there is a slate grave stone erected to his memory, on which there is inscribed, "Amos Singletary, died 1806." Mr. Singletary was an important person in the early history of Sutton. All the education that he received was acquired at home. For four years he was a member of the provincial Congress. His name appears frequently in transactions between the town of Sutton and the state government during the time of the Revolutionary War. He was justice of the peace and quorum, and a bail commissioner. He was the father of two boys and seven girls and his son, Amos, was father of twelve children.

JOHN SINGLETARY

John Singletary and his wife, Mary Grelee, (as we learn from church records) joined The Church of Christ in Framingham, Mass., in the year 1710. He was dismissed from that church to Sutton, in 1720, and Mary Grelee, his wife, was transferred in 1721. It has been stated that Mr. Singletary came here from Haverhill, Mass., where he was born. His home was at the outlet of Singletary Lake which was named in honor of the family. He succeeded Ebenezer Daggett in developing the first industry in Millbury, a grist mill. He built the second industry, a saw mill, and also the third industry a grist-mill. The Singletarys became connected by marriage with many of the early families among whom may be mentioned the Stockwells, the Goodells, the Gales, the Goulds, the Dwinells, and the Burnaps.

(See "Industries on Singletary Stream.")

(Taken largely from the funeral address delivered by the Rev. George A. Putnam and afterwards published.)

Dr. Leonard Spaulding was born in Carlisle, Mass., April 2, 1816. He received his academic education at Phillips Academy, Andover, but was obliged to relinquish his purpose of going to college on account of failing health. Arriving at the age of twenty-one, he went west, spending nearly four years in teaching. Returning, he commenced the study of medicine, taking his first course at Hanover, N. H., and graduating at Pittsfield, Mass., in 1843. He commenced to practice his profession in this town one year later, viz., 1844; since which time, until his decease, he has dwelt constantly here, so that residents of Millbury are familiar with his history.

Dr. Spaulding was most justly held in high esteem as a faithful, intelligent, and successful physician; a man of close observation, patient investigation, and good judgment. His reputation was founded on true merit and not on any groundless pretensions. His practice was characterized by great kindness, gentleness, and a tender regard for the feelings of his patients. About a month before he died, in speaking of his past life, he said, with tears starting in his eyes, "that which gives me the greatest pleasure in looking back is, that I have been kind to the poor;—I have tried to be."

He had more than average intellectual ability, and was characterized by a practical common sense, great carefulness in forming his opinions, and a commendable candor and moral courage in expressing them. Though not prominent as an official, his position was one of much influence both in civil and ecclesiastical affairs. He had a strong social nature which with his other qualities, drew him to the people, and the people to him.

He might have stood up before the people and said, as ancient Samuel did, "Behold, here I am. Whom have I defrauded or whom have I oppressed?"

For fifteen years he held the office of clerk, and for seven years he was superintendent of the Sabbath School of the First Congregational Church. He was not demonstrative, in the usual sense of that word; not a great religious talker; the rather did he take on that type of piety which shows itself in loving mercy, doing justly, and walking humbly with God. He seldom spoke of his personal feelings. Even in his last days he seemed to shrink from drawing aside the veil to permit any one to go in with him where the secrets of his heart were kept.

He was a cherished and worthy member of the medical profession, a skilful practitioner, a careful and candid counsellor in whom his patients found not only a sympathizing physician, but also a true friend. As a townsman he was a most excellent citizen, loyal and trustworthy, whose influence was strongly and widely felt, particularly in the school department, in which he was specially efficient. As a Christian gentleman he was one whose counsel was sought frequently and whose genial influence was more and more a blessing to those with whom he mingled.

Dr. Spaulding's home for many years was at the corner of West Main and Beach streets in Bramanville. His wife, a daughter of deacon Tyrus March, survived him for many years.

ITHAMAR STOWE

Ithamar Stowe came to Millbury from Grafton, Mass. He was at one time agent for Capt. Amasa Wood in his shoe factory at Thompson, Conn. For a year he was in charge of the factory at West Millbury. He was a man well acquainted with leather and its manufacture, as well as with agricultural matters. Later, Mr. Stowe owned the Tainter farm, which still remains in possession of his descendants.

He was a remarkable all-round man. Upon the generation following his own he left the impression of being an elderly man with wonderful physical vitality for he would often be seen going from his farm to the Center on a dog trot.

He early identified himself with the Baptist Church in which he was a liberal giver.

CHAPTER XXXII

INDEPENDENT SKETCHES, T-W

SAMUEL DAVENPORT TORREY

Samuel Davenport Torrey was born in Mendon, in 1789. William Torrey, a progenitor, was a conspicuous character in Massachusetts, being for many years a member of the House of Deputies (and always chosen clerk), a magistrate, and a captain of militia. He died in 1690. He was an educated man of affairs, having some knowledge of Latin and also fair literary ability, which appears through a printed essay on "The Futurities," a quaint production still extant.

He had three brothers who settled severally—Philip in Roxbury; James in Scituate, Plymouth Colony; and Joseph in Newport, Rhode Island. William's oldest son was the distinguished scholar and preacher, the Rev. Samuel Torrey, who lived in Weymouth and died there after a pastorate of fifty years. He was educated at Harvard College, and it is recorded that he subsequently twice declined the presidency of the college. He had also the unusual honor of preaching three "election sermons" before the "Great and General Court of Massachusetts." He left no descendants.

Samuel Davenport Torrey established himself early in life in Boston, in the West India trade, at No. 25 South Market Street, near Faneuil Hall. In 1831, his health being somewhat impaired and having acquired what he regarded as a competency, Mr. Torrey retired from business and located permanently in Millbury.

For forty-six years he was one of the substantial citizens of the town, bearing an important part in its affairs, and with those of the Second Congregational Church of which he was a member. Mr. Torrey was twice married. His first wife, Delia Chapin, died in 1821. In 1824, he married Susan Holman Waters, daughter of Asa Waters, Jr., and granddaughter of Colonel Jonathan Holman. Five children were born to them, four daughters and one son, the latter dying in infancy. The daughters were Delia Chapin, still living and unmarried; Louisa Maria, wife of Judge Alphonso Taft, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and mother of the honored ex-president of the United States, William Howard Taft; Susan Waters, who married Samuel A. Wood, once of Millbury and later of San Francisco, Cal.; Anna Davenport, wife of Prof. Edward Orton, of the Ohio State University, and later state Geologist of Ohio.

Mr. Torrey was a man of marked individuality and great integrity of character, possessing thorough methods of business.

(See Genealogy.)

HENRY P. UPHAM

A Millbury boy, Henry P. Upham, has gained distinction in the Northwestern section of our country. He was born here in 1837 and was son of Joel W. Upham, a maker of water-wheels, who for some time resided in Millbury, but later moved to Worcester. At the age of twenty Henry went to Chicago and thence proceeded to St. Paul, which was at that time a fur trading post of some importance. He engaged in a small way in the lumber business in a mill of his own, but this was soon abandoned and as clerk he entered a St. Paul bank in which by his merits he rose to the position of president. He became one of the leading financiers in that city and the close friend of Mr. James J. Hill, the great railroad man of the Northwest.

Mr. Upham was much interested in historical matters. He has been president of the "Minnesota State Historical Society," governor of the "Society of Colonial Wars," member of the Mayflower descendants, and a "Son of the American Revolution." The "St. Paul Pioneer Press" of May 2, 1909, thus referred to him: "In the death of Henry P. Upham, the city has lost one who, throughout the greater part of its history, was a powerful factor in its development, and hundreds of those with whom he was brought into contact have lost a kindly friend. Identified, as he was, throughout his active career with the first founded and most conspicuous banking institution of the city, an institution that has always been recognized as one of the leading banks of the Northwest, Mr. Upham, for the greater part of his life, was regarded as the foremost banker of this section. As a citizen, Mr. Upham took a keen interest in every public project and exercised a great deal of influence upon the development of the community."

NELSON WALLING

Nelson Walling, a descendant in the sixth generation of Thomas Walling, who lived at Providence, R. I., as early as 1651, was born at Burrillville, R. I., in 1813. The family was prominent in the early history of that city and of the adjacent towns.

In 1853, Mr. Walling moved to Millbury and built the mill which formerly stood on the location now occupied by the W. W. Windle Co. mill and for years he made this one of the leading industries on Singletary stream, manufacturing a superior quality of woolen cloth. He was contemporary with such manufacturers as John Rhodes, Mowry A. Lapham, Hosea Crane, and Horace Waters. (See Industries on Singletary stream.)

Mr. Walling was a man of few words, studious, and quiet in his manner. He apparently cared little for public office, but he was interested in the welfare of the community, especially having a concern for the large number of people in his employ. For a time Mr. Walling occupied a house opposite his mill, but later he purchased the estate formerly owned by 'Squire Clough R. Miles, which is still occupied by his family. Here he lived the life of a gentleman farmer, having cattle that were well-bred and owning a fine pair of black driving-horses that were widely known. He greatly improved the estate, for he found the yard intersected with the ditches and gullies of the old canal and on the corner of the street the old Canal Store stood in ruins. The house was lavishly furnished and the grounds were evenly graded.

Mr. Walling married, first, Eliza Sayles, of a Rhode Island family. Their children were Albert, who was drowned; Hosea; Martin; Caroline; Amelia; Antoinette; and Mary, who died young. Mr. Walling married, second, at Woonsocket, R. I., in June, 1854, Sarah Ann, daughter of Peter and Eliza (Hathaway) Place. Their children were Eliza, married George Clement; Anna Adele; and Sarah Hortense.

Mr. Walling died in Millbury in 1885.

ASA WATERS, THE FIRST

Nathaniel Waters (1671-1718) of Salem, in the year 1715, bought three thousand acres of the wilderness, within the territory that was to become the town of Sutton, but, dying three years later, he probably never lived here, and his land was divided between his two sons, Nathaniel, Jr., and Jonathan (1715-1786), who had farms in the north part of the township. The home farm of the latter was on the east side of the road leading from Singletary pond to West Millbury at the east end of the village. Probably the site of the first house is marked by an old well. The present dwelling stands nearly opposite where a road branches to the westward. There for four generations lived a Jonathan Waters. They were descended from James Waters an iron monger and citizen of London who died in that city and was buried in St. Botolph's parish, February 2, 1617, leaving a widow, Phoebe, daughter of George Manning, and a son, Richard. Among the manuscripts in the British Museum is a pedigree prepared by that George Manning showing his descent through eight generations from Symon Manning, who was a crusader to the Holy Land in the reign of Richard I. and who died before 1272. The widow Phoebe Waters married a widower, William Plasse, a gun maker, of London, who had a daughter, Rejoice Plasse. This family, Mr. and Mrs. Plasse and their two children, were in the migration that crossed the Atlantic before 1636 to the new plantation on the Massachusetts Bay. Richard Waters married in London his step sister, Rejoice Plasse. William Plasse and his step-son followed the trade of gun making in Salem. A grandson of Richard² Waters was the Nathaniel⁴ who bought Sutton land, and a grandson of the latter, and son of the first Jonathan⁵, was the Asa Waters⁶ who was born in the north parish of Sutton, January 27, 1742. He and his brother Andrus inherited the mechanical talent of their progenitor, Richard. Both were gun makers, and were among the first to perceive the industrial possibilities of the swiftly descending waters of Singletary brook. The two brothers established trip hammer works where the Holbrook Mill stands, or a little below, and forged gun barrels, scythes and other iron implements.

One April night in 1775, Paul Revere's alarm that British troops were marching out from Boston to destroy military supplies at Concord was spread as fast as horses could travel to every town in the colony and at every one found companies, armed, disciplined and officered, ready for the expected emergency. Like a swarm of angry hornets marched from every town its complement of minute men. Sutton sent seven companies. Asa Waters was lieutenant of a company from the north parish. The provincial troops surrounded Boston and the King's troops were besieged within the town. In the later part of the season he was lieutenant of Capt. Bartholomew Woodbury's company of Colonel Learned's Regiment, part of the besieging force. On April 4, 1776, he was commissioned First Lieutenant of Capt. Abijah Burbank's 13th company of the 5th Worcester County regiment.

Armories for the manufacture of firearms were very few in the colonies at the beginning of the Revolution and, as the importation of arms became very difficult, the work of the gun makers was therefore of the greatest value to the American cause. The iron ore was mined at Salisbury in the northwest corner of Connecticut, the pig iron carried across a rough country to Douglas where it was refined and thence carted to the Sutton Waters Armory to be made into the various metallic parts which were assembled to make up the completed gun. Andrus Waters died from exposure at the mines after two years, and was buried at West Point, with military honors, his death lamented as a public calamity.

Asa was left to pursue the business, which he did with vigor and success. This was the first armory where water power was employed in the making of guns.

Gun powder was as essential to the American cause as firearms and as difficult to obtain. The British in Boston could readily have dispersed their besiegers had they known how small was the supply of powder in the American army. October 18, 1776, the Massachusetts authorities appointed a committee to build a powder mill in Sutton, and appropriated £200 from the state treasury to construct it. Asa Waters was put in charge of its operation. The mill stood partly over the pond where the Winter store now is. A long row of pestles and mortars extended on each of its four sides, all worked by power from the Singletary. The difficulty was in finding the ingredients needed to make the explosive. In after years Mr. Waters was often heard to say, "that there was hardly a barn in Worcester county under which I have not bent my back scraping up saltpetre." He served on committees for the raising of troops and other patriotic efforts during the war, but following the evacuation of Boston his principal public service was in providing munitions of war, guns and gun powder.

He built himself a mansion on Elmwood Street where he lived the last twenty or thirty years of his life. (See Old Houses, p. 370).

In his later years he was known as Deacon Waters. He was a large land owner and the registry of deeds shows he sold altogether more than 800 acres. He married, June 14, 1764, Sara Goodell, daughter of Capt. Samuel Goodell of Sutton. Oil portraits of himself and his wife were exhibited at the Centennial Exhibition. He died, Apr. 29, 1799. His grave in the West Millbury cemetery was visited in September, 1912, by his great-great-grandson, William Howard Taft, then President of the United States.

ASA WATERS, THE SECOND

Asa Waters, the second, was born in Sutton, November 2, 1769, probably in the house of his father, the first Asa Waters, at the southeast corner of West Main and Rhodes Streets. He developed, to a remarkable degree, skill and ingenuity in the trade which seemed hereditary in his family for several generations, that of gun making. He and his elder brother, Elijah, had learned that trade in the shop of their father on Singletary Stream. The brothers in 1797 purchased the neighboring water power on the Blackstone river. This purchase included the site of their future armory, and as well the gristmill long a landmark on the east side of Main Street and on the north bank of the river where the road crosses it, and also the land between the river and Elm Street as far east as the Cordis dam. They made guns, scythes, saw mills saws and like products.

In 1808 they built the armory which gave its name to the village and contributed so much to its prosperity. The same year they undertook their first contract with the national government to supply firearms for the army. Elijah after a long illness died in 1814 and Asa became the sole proprietor. His son, the third Asa Waters, in an article upon Gun Making ("Journal of Progress," Philadelphia, June, 1887) thus describes his father's work:

"Possessing great physical strength, unusual energy and mechanical talent, he introduced various improvements in gun making, which wrought great changes. * * * * Two only will be referred to. Gun barrels were welded and forged up to this time entirely by hand power, the super having two strikers. All this was in the recollection of the writer. On October 25, 1817, he was granted letters patent for his invention for welding gun barrels under trip hammers with concave dies, striking four hundred blows a minute and controlled by a foot treadle. This patent was signed by James Monroe, President, John Quincy Adams, Secretary of State, and Richard Rush, Attorney General. This invention was copied by all the armories of the United States and in Europe, and his claim to originality has never been disputed. In the following year, 1818, observing that the English process of grinding the barrels down before a revolving stone left the metal of uneven thickness around the calibre, and thus liable to explode, he invented a lathe to turn the barrel to uniform thickness. This patent, December 21, 1818, * * * * * was the first patent ever issued for turning a gun barrel in a lathe, save one which was a failure. This proved a success so far as the gun barrel was round."

Years later, when the wonderful inventions of Thomas Blanchard for turning the irregular end of the gun barrel and the wooden gun stock, had come into general use and knowledge, claims were made to deprive Millbury of the honor of being the place of the discovery of this new principle in practical mechanics. (See p. 412 for letter from Maj. Wright to Col. Asa H. Waters.)

The first contract by the United States for the making of guns in Millbury was dated September 8, 1808, and called for the delivery of 1000 stands of arms, i. e. a musket and bayonet complete, of a certain pattern, in each of the following five years, the price of each to be $10.75, delivered at Springfield, after a full and correct inspection by officers appointed for the purpose who should certify accordingly. Such contracts, made with Asa Waters for periods of five years, were continued during thirty-seven years and meant much to the prosperity of Millbury assuring steady work for a body of skilled mechanics.

By the contract made in 1818, two thousand stands were to be delivered each year during the term of the contract, the barrels should be proved before acceptance, and delivery was to be made at the Watertown arsenal or its vicinity. The price was $14.00 per stand with additional compensation for boxing and transportation from Millbury. Mr. Waters also agreed to give the free right to work under his patent for welding gun barrels wherever guns were made for the United States government.

Writing to the Ordnance department twenty years later (1838) Mr. Waters states that the saving to the government by the use of his patent was $13\frac{1}{2}$ cents for each barrel welded at Harper's Ferry Arsenal, and that at that same rate the annual saving to the government was about \$5,000 on the guns made for the United States, and that if the method had been adopted at Harper's Ferry when adopted at Springfield the government would have saved \$150,000 at the former place.

In the contract of January 1, 1829, the price was $12.25 for each stand, including bayonet, flints, screw drivers, wipers, ball screws and spring vices.

February 7, 1840, Asa Waters and Son made a contract with the chief of the Ordnance department to manufacture 15,000 pistols, to be delivered in parcels of 750 and at the rate of 3,000 per year. The price of each pistol with its appendages was $7.50, and the expense of proving, inspecting, packing and transporting was to be paid by the government.

The following is somewhat abbreviated from a document in the handwriting of Asa Waters, the second.

Mr. Waters developed four water powers on the Blackstone river, viz.:

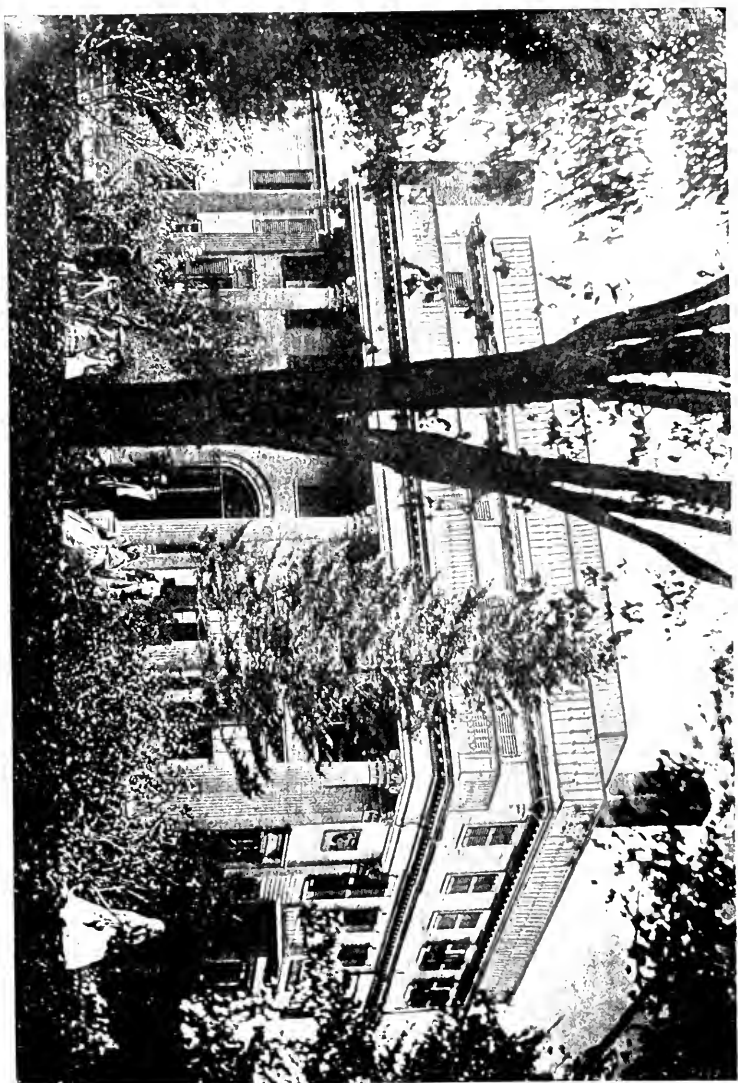

1. The Stillwater, which successively gave power to the "flannel mill," the Stillwater Mill, the sash and blind shop, etc., and where the Felters Works and Millbury Machine Shop now stand.
2. The Armory, later the Atlanta Mills, etc., immediately west of South Main Street.
3. The Cordis Mills.
4. The Wilkinsonville. For all of these Mr. Waters built dams and water ways.

He founded the Millbury Bank in 1825, was its largest stockholder and its first president. He was a representative to the Legislature in 1823. He was one of the largest land owners in the county, and gave the site for the Academy at the northwest corner of Elm and Waters Streets. This deed was conditioned upon its continued use for educational purposes.

The residence Mr. Waters built for himself was the stateliest in the county. A fine colonnade of the composite order distinguishes the entrance front, and its carved entablature is carried about the main house, with pilasters at the corners. Above the main cornice a third or attic story is crowned by another carved cornice and an ornamental fence. All is most unusual in its academic correctness and skillful treatment. This is one of the latest examples of the colonial period, that is, of the English Georgian style adapted to a wooden architecture. The two neighboring residences are in the Greek temple fashion which prevailed throughout New England five years later. The architect was Mr. Bryant of Boston, who the same year built the first railroad in America, that for carrying granite blocks to be used in the Bunker Hill monument. Capt. Louis Bigelow of Worcester was the master builder. Two years were taken for gathering materials. The frame was raised in June, 1826, and a large company collected, the Rev. Mr. Goffe offered a prayer, and a collation was served. The reader should recall that this was before railroads existed or even the slow moving canal boat. Everything brought into Millbury came by wagon. Hence the use of hard pine from the South, mahogany from Central America, marble from Italy and brick from Baltimore was an unprecedented proceeding so far from tide water. Woodworking machinery had not been invented, therefore boards and mouldings, joinery and carving had all to be slowly wrought by hand. The finishing lumber was made of pumpkin pine from Maine, an ideal material for the purpose, the clear wide soft pine, no longer found in our markets. Mr. Waters enjoyed his Thanksgiving of 1829 in his new house, but its completion was not celebrated until 1832, when numerous musicians, vocal and instrumental, were engaged, an original ode written by the host was printed, and was sung by a choir led by Capt. Timothy Longley. A general invitation was extended, and large numbers attended from this and neighboring towns. Mr. Waters always regarded Christmas with great veneration and hence the day was selected for his house warming. Visitors flocked to the completed house as to a wonder. Gov. Levi Lincoln invited Daniel Webster and a party of prominent officials to ride down from Worcester to see the house. When Henry Clay, the great apostle of a protective tariff, visited New England in 1835, he held a reception in the east parlor and the manager of the Cordis Mill presented him with a roll of fine broadcloth made in Millbury. During the palmy days of the New England Lyceum lectures, Agassiz and other famous lecturers were entertained here. It has been a hospitable household to which gathered kindred scattered from the Bosphorus to the Pacific. In later years the granddaughter of the builder of the mansion has there entertained a President of the United States, William Howard Taft, and the inventor of that most marvelous of inventions, the telephone, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell.

“Asa Waters possessed a mind of uncommon strength and comprehensiveness. It was a mind conscious of power and delighted in its own activity. It was always at work and always bringing out some result indicative of itself. And there was always about it something noble and far reaching. No one could listen to his conversation without being struck by it. And it was especially apparent in his business. These qualities of his mind enabled him to transact such an amount and variety of business and to do it with propriety. To his enterprise especially is to be attributed the manufactures which constitute the chief support of the village in which he lived and indeed the village itself of which they were the origin. He was distinguished for his energy and perseverance. Obstacles which anyone else would have deemed insurmountable, it seemed to be his delight to conquer and overcome. It is no small praise to say that a man of such extensive business transactions, and extending through so long a period, had the confidence of all with whom he had dealings as a man of strict honesty and uprightness. When came a reverse in his business under circumstances which would have enabled him to effect a favorable compromise with his creditors, he refused to avail himself of such an advantage but resumed business with the encumbrance upon him and paid to the full every such claim. Such an act of integrity deserves to be published as a tribute to the memory of the dead and for the imitation of the living. His public spirit which made him the efficient friend of whatever related to the good of the community, his attachment to the institutions of religion and the cheerful and liberal support which he always lent to them, his generous and open hearted hospitality, those who knew him will long remember." (The Rev. S. G. Buckingham, his pastor, in the "Worcester Palladium," December, 1841.)

Asa Waters married May 19, 1802, Susan Holman, daughter of Col. Jonathan Holman.

Asa Waters, the second, died on Christmas Eve, 1841. His last words were: "I am going from this room to one above."

ASA HOLMAN WATERS (1808-1887)

The third Asa⁸ Waters (Asa⁷, Asa⁶, Jonathan⁵, Nathaniel⁴, John³, Richard², James¹) was born in the north parish of Sutton, now Millbury, February 8, 1808. His mother was Susan Holman, daughter of Col. Jonathan Holman, commander of the Sutton regiment in the war of the Revolution. Christened simply Asa, to distinguish his name from that of his father and grandfather, in 1833 he added a middle name by authority of the legislature and became legally Asa Holman Waters.

He prepared for college at Munson Academy and entered Yale with the class of 1829. He took high rank in scholarship, was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society and secretary of its Yale chapter. At commencement he was orator. Soon after graduating from college he became associated with his father in the gun business. Later he studied at the Harvard Law School, was admitted to the bar in 1835 and had arranged to open a law office in New York City, when his father's ill health made necessary his return to assist in the Armory business. He became a partner with his father in 1837 under the firm name of Asa Waters & Son.

This continued until the death of the father in 1841. Asa Holman Waters then organized the firm of A. H. Waters & Co., to continue the armory business. This partnership lasted many years. The policy of the national government since 1808 had been to supplement the manufacture of fire arms at the two arsenals, Springfield and Harper's Ferry, by contracts with six private armories of which the Waters armory was one. Suddenly without proper warning the system which had prevailed for thirty-seven years was abandoned in 1845, no more contracts were made with the private armories, and their proprietors found their establishments without government employ, their invested capital useless, and the body of skilled mechanics without work in their special trade. This was a serious blow to the prosperity of Millbury. Colonel Waters had to find other uses for his shops, his water power and his plant. The explanation of this unexpected conduct on the part of the United States ordnance department, a story of scandal in high places, is given in the History of Sutton, p. 575. But other uses were found for the property, and the old Armory grounds continued the busy center of Armory Village. At the outbreak of the Civil War the national government had urgent need of additional gun factories and Colonel Waters was given contracts which kept the old armory again busy days and nights, with a force of about two hundred men, making parts of guns, ramrods and bayonets to be assembled in complete guns at Springfield. Colonel Waters took financial risks, but the contracts were profitable.

Where Asa Waters the Second had what was called his "flannel mills," Colonel Waters built the Stillwater Mill which in 1851 consisted of three buildings on ground now occupied by the Millbury Machine Shop and the brick portion of the Felter's Works. The mill was burned in 1868. Following the loss of the government arms contracts in 1847, Colonel Waters built and operated the Waters Cotton Mills, the buildings now used by the Linen Mills.

The old Armory was again metamorphosed at the close of the Civil War, and Colonel Waters as president organized the Atlanta Mills for the manufacture of woolen goods. He was president and long a director of the bank founded by his father. Like his father and grandfather he was a large owner of real estate. His commission as postmaster of Millbury ran from 1836 to 1848. Postage stamps were introduced by the British post-office in 1840, and by the United States in 1847. For a few years preceding the latter date several local offices printed what are called postmasters' stamps. One of these Millbury stamps (1846) has been sold for $1500.

Mr. Waters gained his title of colonel by appointment on the staff of Gov. Marcus Morton in 1843. During the following years he passed from the Democratic party, through the Free Soil party, to the Republican, with which he remained until his death. He represented Millbury in the General Court in 1848-49 and in 1853 was a member of the Constitutional Convention for the amendment of the state constitution. He took an active part in the debates where figured Isaac Davis, Richard Henry Dana, Charles Sumner, Henry Wilson and other distinguished publicists. Through the years of the great anti-slavery struggle preceding the war, he was a frequent and persuasive speaker at political meetings throughout the county. He vigorously participated in the efforts to preserve Kansas from the slave power in 1854 and 1855. He was always interested in town affairs and for many years took a prominent part in them.

April 15, 1861, President Lincoln called for troops to defend the Union. On the 19th, the Sixth Regiment Massachusetts Militia was attacked in the streets of Baltimore and the first blood of the great struggle between the states was there shed. The blanks printed by the Commonwealth for the enrollment of additional volunteers are dated April 23. Colonel Waters promptly took measures to raise a Millbury Company and met the necessary outlays. April 27th and 29th, one hundred and seven names were affixed to the enlistment paper. (See p. 154.) However, the company was not accepted because then and for some time afterward only companies belonging to the militia regiments already organized were taken into the war service. Many names on this early roll were of men who enlisted in later regiments, served valiantly in the field and are found on the Millbury Roll of Honor. (p. 161.)

Colonel Waters occupied a leading position in the business of Millbury for nearly forty years, passed successfully through the trials of the two great panics of 1837 and 1857 and was one of the very few who in those times of financial distress paid all his debts in full. He retired from active business about 1870 with a good property. In the calm of advancing years he found delight in his pen and did excellent work with it, contributing to the daily press and to the magazines. He maintained a spirited controversy with Oliver Johnson, the noted abolitionist of New York, as to how much influence Garrison and his partisans exerted in the destruction of human slavery in the United States. His articles in "Harper's Monthly" and elsewhere first brought Thomas Blanchard and his wonderful inventions to a wider popular understanding.

In 1874, Colonel Waters, his wife and two unmarried daughters, went abroad to visit his married daughter, the wife of Professor Grosvenor of Roberts College, and spent two years in Constantinople and Egypt, at a time when such travel was much less common than it has since become.

Colonel Waters delighted to trace the steps beginning with the use of his father's inventions and Blanchard's eccentric lathe in the old armory, through successive stages, to the development of the peculiarly American system of the interchangeability of parts in machinery, that is, where each piece of a machine was so exactly duplicated that all the various parts could be assembled complete without further fitting.

He prepared several articles for the "History of Sutton," published in 1878, including "Sutton in the Revolution," "Gun-making in Sutton and Millbury" and the records of the Waters Family. He was also much interested in the preparation of the "History of Worcester County," printed in 1879.

Retired from business he had leisure for entertaining his friends and exercising hospitality. From his youth up, he was gifted with fine conversational powers. His sense of humor was keen and comprehensive and as a story teller few could surpass him. His conversation was always bright, entertaining and instructive.

Colonel Waters married June 27, 1849, Mary Elizabeth Hovey, daughter of Daniel and Susan (Jacobs) Hovey of Sutton. He died January 17, 1887.

COLONEL ASA HOLMAN WATERS
1808 - 1897

MRS. ASA HOLMAN WATERS
1829 - 1892

CHARLES H. WATERS

Charles H. Waters, son of Horace Waters, was born in Millbury, in 1828. He received his education in the district school and at Wilbraham Academy. He entered a factory at the age of fifteen and devoted himself with such zeal to his work that he soon became a skillful workman, with a good understanding of the processes of manufacture. At the age of eighteen, he was overseer in a cotton mill, of which he later had entire charge. In 1848, at Little Falls, N. Y., he was engaged in manufacturing articles from flax. In 1851, at Jewett City, Conn., he started mills for the manufacture of rope and twine.

When the wire cloth mill was started at Clinton, he went there as agent and he did the same work for this industry that H. N. Bigelow had done for the manufacture of Brussels and Wilton carpeting, that is, he adapted the inventions of E. B. Bigelow to the weaving of wire cloth. He also added much directly to these inventions and obtained many patents. Indeed, it has been said that "the Clinton Wire Cloth Mills were created by Mr. Waters," for he was the central force in the corporations, serving twenty-two years as manager, and later as president. He superintended the construction of the works of the Avery Lactate Company at Littleton.

Mr. Waters married Mary Farnsworth of Groton, in 1853. Though he was engaged in business in Clinton, his home was at Groton, where he was a foremost citizen, devoted to the interests of the community. His death occurred March 13, 1883.

DEACON ELIJAH WATERS

Deacon Elijah Waters, son of Asa Waters, senior, was born in Sutton, in 1767, and for many years he was one of the chief manufacturers and business men of the town. The various business enterprises with which he was connected appear under the industries mentioned elsewhere. His success in the iron and gun industries show that he was a man who pushed to completion the task in which he was engaged. Contemporary with him were his brother Asa, junior, Joseph Farnsworth, Aaron Trask, and John B. Blanchard, a brother of Thomas, the inventor. His home was at the corner of Main and Elm Streets.

HARVEY WATERS

Millbury has been the birthplace of many ingenious and useful inventions and, among others, those of Harvey Waters justly deserve mention. Mr. Waters, son of Dea. Elijah Waters, of armory fame, was born July 11, 1804. He resided here, when making many of his inventions, but later moved to Boston, where he was recognized by the courts as an expert of superior merit in litigation concerning patents. One of his inventions has been thought worthy to be classed with "Babbages's Calculator," pronounced by British critics to be the nearest approach to the human intellect of anything ever created by man.

Pins were formerly made in England by hand and their manufacture had been repeatedly attempted in this country, but unsuccessfully, until Mr. Waters invented machinery for making them. His first machine made them with solid heads but when these were taken to market, he was told that his pins would not sell, because they were not like the English pin, which had a fine wire head. When he asserted that his style was the best, the reply was given that, "'Tis not in fashion, and 'tis useless to argue or contend against fashions." He then devised and built a machine to make the English pin at one motion from wire of two sizes. When he took these newly devised pins to market, he found it flooded with English pins selling far below cost. Knowing that it cost the English much labor to stick pins to the paper by hand, he determined to stick them by machine, for he knew that then his two machines would defy all competition. Accordingly, he contrived and built such a machine. Into the top of a large hopper the pins were poured, shaken down through an opening which arranged them in parallel lines, forty-eight pins in a row, all pointing the same way. At one motion the whole was thrust into paper, in less time than is required to read this description. Like Babbage's calculating machine, this was taught to count rapidly and correctly. By this triumph of American genius, the manufacture of pins became permanently established in this country. Mr. Waters sold his machines and they were moved to Derby, Conn., where the business was continued. While experimenting on his pin-machines he occupied a room for a year in one of the armory buildings of Asa Waters at Millbury Center.

Mr. Waters next turned his attention to the manufacture of scythes. Hitherto the blades had been drawn out under triphammers, but he conceived the idea of rolling them out between grooved rollers and although the curving of the scythe presented an obstacle, after years of persistent effort and the trial of many ingenious contrivances, he overcame this difficulty and made scythes cheaper, if not better, than they had ever been made before.

When the Civil War broke out, Mr. Waters invented a machine for rolling bayonet blades which saved grinding and the weapon only required buffing. This machine was adopted at once at the U. S. Armory in Springfield and by many private contractors. Of the bayonets made during the war hundreds of thousands were rolled out on Mr. Waters' machine.

HORACE WATERS

Horace Waters, son of Elder Samuel Waters, who was a manufacturer and agriculturist, was born in Millbury, in 1799. He received his education in the schools of his native town and assisted his father on the farm and in the mill. In 1831, he became connected with the firm of Waters & Goodell, manufacturers of broadcloth, and continued with them for some time. In 1856, he succeeded to the business in partnership with the Hon. Hosea Crane. For nearly half a century he was connected with the business and religious affairs of the town, being a strong advocate of temperance. His residence on Rhodes Street is now owned by Francis H. Rice, of the firm of Edward F. Rice & Co.

JONATHAN EDWARDS WATERS

Jonathan Edwards Waters was born and resided on the farm which had been settled first by his great-grandfather, Jonathan Waters. This was situated at the top of the hill which rises from Singletary Lake and descends again to the Ramshorn Stream (in 1915, owned by Clifford R. Harris). This homestead, so long in the possession of the Waters family, was also the birthplace of Asa Waters, senior, the Revolutionary gun-maker. Though descended from that line of the family which had as its ancestor, Richard Waters, gun-maker, of Salem, Mr. Waters, with the exception of a short period spent at making shoes at Grafton, was engaged in farming. He was a nephew of Elijah Waters, the benefactor of the First Congregational Church.

For many years he was active in church and town affairs, often acting as moderator in the town meetings. He served as selectman and as highway surveyor. He was one of three who surveyed the roads of the town and placed markers at the angles.

As a farmer he was the most extensive fruit raiser in the town and in particular he raised a great number of apples.

Genial and courteous, a man of strong convictions, he was one whom it was well for the town to have as a citizen.

OSGOOD H. WATERS

Osgood Herrick Waters, son of Horace Waters, was born in Millbury, Oct. 13, 1835. He was named for the Rev. Osgood Herrick, one of the early ministers of the First Church. After receiving his education in the public schools he entered the knitting mill of his father, in which he worked thereafter. He was an active member of the Republican party and was honored by its members with many positions of trust. He represented his native place in the legislature of 1884. He was a member of several town committees, and the building committee of the present schoolhouse at Bramanville. He was a director of the Merchant's & Farmer's Insurance Company. As a deacon of the First Congregational Church he sought to advance religious work in the community and for a long time he was a teacher in the Sunday School of the Church in which one of the Bible classes still bears his name. Mr. Waters married Miss Ellen Crane. They had one child, Miss Carolyn Waters. He died in August, 1895, and Mrs. Waters in January, 1912.

SIMEON WATERS

'Squire Simeon Waters, son of Abram Waters, was born in Sutton, in 1775. He married Sarah, daughter of Asa Waters, Sr. From early deeds and records we find that he was consulted for neighborly advice and that he exerted a strong influence in the community. In religious matters he ever showed a loyal interest. He was contemporary with Stephen and Thomas Blanchard, Capt. Joseph Griggs, Capt. Amasa Wood, and General Burbank. His son, Simeon Sylvester, was for many years a resident of the West Village, but the later years of his life were passed in Wellesley.

SIMEON WATERS
1775 - 1850

SIMON FARNSWORTH
1782 - 1869

DR. GEO. C. WEBBER

Dr. George Clark Webber was born in Hallowell, Me., Nov. 15, 1837. He was a son of the Rev. George Webber, D. D., a highly honored member of the Maine Methodist Conference and for sixteen years a presiding elder. He prepared for college at Wesleyan Seminary, Kent's Hill, Me., and was graduated from Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., in 1860. After his college course he was principal of Brainard Academy at Hadem, Conn., for two years, after which he entered the Harvard Medical School, graduating in 1863. At intervals after his graduation from the Harvard Medical School he taught in the schools of Maine. He first practiced medicine in Kennebunkport, Me. In 1866, he moved to Newton Upper Falls, and, in 1870, he came to Millbury.

During the war, from 1863 to 1865, Dr. Webber served as acting assistant-surgeon in the navy. He was assigned to the Kinsington and later was transferred to the Commodore Barney.

He was a member of George A. Custer Post, G. A. R., of Millbury, and his last public words were addressed to the school children at West Millbury on the afternoon preceding Memorial Day, in 1895.

Dr. Webber was a member of Olive Branch Lodge, F. and A. M.; of Tyrian Royal Arch Chapter of which he had been high priest; and of Adah Chapter, O. E. S. He attended the First Congregational Church.

Dr. Webber was the founder of the Millbury Natural History Society and its president at the time of his death. Under his direction a large number of natural history specimens was collected. He was elected a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, in 1871. He was also a member of the Worcester County Branch and was for some time its president. Dr. Webber was one of the strongest advocates for a public supply of water and was one of the committee that reported in favor of having the town construct its own water system. As a physician and an educator he was esteemed not only within the limits of the town but also beyond its borders.

Dr. Webber married, in Maine, Nov. 24, 1864, Sarah P. Leavitt. They had a son, Howard, and a daughter, Carrie. Dr. Webber died at Millbury in June, 1895.

CHARLES A. WHITNEY

Charles Amos Whitney was a son of Col. John Whitney of Princeton. As a young man he entered the employ of A. Wood & Sons, shoe manufacturers, with whom by diligence and skill he became foreman in the cutting department. He moved to Chicago and engaged in business for himself until the great fire in that city. Later he returned to Millbury and engaged in farming in West Millbury on the Jonathan E. Waters place. Here on one of the best farms in town he remained for several years, until failing health compelled him to abandon the pursuit of agriculture. He served on the board of selectmen for several years and as tax collector, holding that office at the time of his death. (See Genealogy.)

THOMAS WINDLE

Thomas Windle, manufacturer and business man, was at the head of the firm of Thomas Windle & Son, which carried on a wool scouring business on the Ramshorn stream. He was born in Burnley, Eng., March 6, 1845. He learned the trade of wool sorter at Cherry Valley. In 1862, he enlisted in K Co., 25th regiment Mass. volunteers, with which he performed hard service and suffered seriously from malaria contracted in the Dismal Swamp. In 1875, he began the manufacture of woolen cloth at Baltic, Ct., in company with his brother-in-law, Edwin Hoyle, under the firm name of Hoyle & Windle. Later, he was in the same business in Millville, Hopeville, Ct., and in Woodville, R. I. He came to West Millbury in 1880, and later bought the old tannery property owned by Salem Griggs, which he converted into a wool-scouring mill. He was widely-known among the woolmen, especially throughout New England, and New York.

He was a Master Mason and a charter member of General Thomas Post, G. A. R., of Leicester.

He married, in 1866, Hannah M. Buckley, daughter of Charles and Sarah Buckley, who were natives of England.

(See Genealogy.)

AUGUSTUS S. WINTER

Augustus S. Winter, for many years a prominent business man, as a young man entered the employ of Silas Dunton, who was then engaged in the dry goods and grocery business in Randall Block. Mr. Winter was later employed by Crane & Aldrich in the same store. Some years afterward, he started the Union Store at Bramanville. He later became the sole proprietor, making this one of the leading stores in town in the grocery and dry goods business. Since his death the store has been carried on by his son, Alvan J. Winter. He owned the Millbury Grain Company.

Mr. Winter accumulated a fortune in business. He was well known in towns nearby from which he received considerable trade. A financier of much ability, he was a trustee in the Millbury Savings Bank, and a director in the Millbury National Bank.

Mr. Winter was a prominent Mason having been a past master of Olive Branch Lodge, F. and A. M., and a member of Worcester Commandery, Knights Templar.

He married, in 1868, Sarah F. Moody, of Northbridge.

Capt. AMASA WOOD

Amasa Wood was born at Upton, in 1784. His early days were spent much after the manner of the young men of those times, farming pursuits engaging much of the time during the year, with limited school attendance in winter.

He married Sarah Foristall of Bellingham, in 1811. About 1808 he moved to Sutton, in the part which is now known as West Millbury, and engaged in farming and the manufacture of shoes. The room in which this work was done was what is now known as the west room or parlor of the Wood mansion, now owned by Charles F. Soule. As these were the primitive days of the manufacture of shoes in Millbury, the number of persons then employed was small. Every part of the work was done by hand, except that of rolling the soles. Mr. Wood carried on the business for some time alone, but was subsequently joined by his brother Asa, who with his family moved to West Millbury.

For some time they pursued this line of business together, but the families of both increased by the addition of numerous children, and the house accommodations were somewhat limited, so that the partnership was dissolved, and Asa returned to Upton. Soon after, the business was removed to another part of the house in which it was carried on for many years. The difference between the manufacture of shoes then and now may be realized from the fact that at that time the goods were carried in saddle-bags upon horse-back to Boston and Providence. Many years ago Captain

Wood exhibited with much pride the old saddle-bags used on these occasions. The fatigue of these journeys was somewhat relieved by the numerous taverns along the routes, in which in those days burned the great back-log fires roaring up the chimneys, around which were gathered the settlers who solaced themselves by numerous mugs of old time flip, brought to the acme of perfection by the old time seething flip-iron. Upon these journeys, which occupied about a week's time, Captain Wood was often entrusted with business for the settlers nearby and often carried considerable sums of money. His arrival home was the occasion for a gathering of neighbors and friends to hear the news from along the route, to get the prices, and to congratulate the captain on his safe arrival home. Increasing business later demanded better accommodations so a shop was built close by and the number of persons employed was increased. A portion of this shop is included in the present barn. The barn formerly stood on the opposite side of the street.

Becoming associated with his brother Ezekiel, who was in business in the South, he shipped goods to Georgia, and other southern states. Captain Wood was also connected with the late Captain Griggs and others in the tanning and currying of leather in a shop that was to the rear of the present brick building and a few rods below on the Ramshorn stream, but this partnership was of short duration. On March 17, 1833, this shop was burned with all its contents, but it was soon rebuilt, and business again started. His son, Amasa C., became associated with him in business. The eldest son was engaged in business in Georgia.

The financial crisis of 1837 came like a cloud upon the business of the country and the firm of A. Wood & Son was embarrassed but brighter times appeared so that the firm was again established and the following prosperous years placed it upon a sure foundation. His other sons, William H. and Samuel A., were in the shoe business in the South. Subsequently, another son, John G., was engaged in the currying business near his father's shop and some time later he became a partner in the firm of A. Wood & Son. The shop was enlarged and a general country store was added to the already considerable business, which amounted to many thousands of dollars annually. The quality of the goods made by them was such that throughout the cotton states, the West, and California, shoes bearing the name of "A. Woods & Son" were looked upon as ne plus ultra.

The business interests of A. Wood & Sons were not wholly confined to West Millbury, the South and West. For some time they operated a large tannery at Halifax, Vt., and still later they owned and operated for many years an extensive tanning and currying establishment at Williamsville where the leather manufactured was of the best quality. A steady progress in the business was made, new machinery was added as fast as the inventive genius of the country brought it forth, and steam power was introduced. Thus business progressed, until many of the people of West Millbury and the surrounding towns were engaged in their employ.

The death of Captain Wood occurred in 1856. He was a man widely known and respected and held many positions of honor and trust within the gift of his fellow-citizens. He was commissioned as captain in the Massachusetts militia in early life. He was on the board of selectmen for some years, and was honored with a seat in the legislature of the Commonwealth.

Captain Wood was one of the old school gentlemen in every sense of the term, polite and affable to all with whom he came in contact, and a lover of children. He was emphatically a self-made man, with good natural abilities. By his death, the town of Millbury lost one who, for a long period, faithfully served its interests and who was instrumental in helping the town toward that prosperity which it now enjoys. He liberally gave to the church and every good enterprise that was presented to him. He was a constant friend of the American Peace Society and annually gave to its support.

In personal appearance Captain Wood was a tall, thick set man weighing when in his prime about two hundred fifty pounds. He had a kindly expression of countenance which, combined with his genial presence, made him truly one of the best of men.

Mr. William H. Wood moved to California where he became engaged in an extensive wholesale business. Mr. Charles V. Wood became engaged in business at Macon, Georgia.

(See Genealogy.)

JOHN GOODELL WOOD

John Goodell Wood, son of Capt. Amasa Wood, was engaged in currying leather in a shop near his father's factory at West Millbury. He was afterwards made a member of the firm of A. Wood & Sons and continued in the manufacture of shoes with that firm until about 1880.

Mr. Wood was widely known as a lover of good horses and he was the first to introduce expensive and pure-blooded race horses into the town. He purchased the stallion, "Charles Backman," when it was only a ten-months-old colt for five thousand dollars. He raised "Lady Ellen" that trotted a mile in 2.28. He also owned the widely known gray mare, "Lady Sontag." He was also interested in thoroughbred sheep and cattle for he introduced into the town South-down sheep of pure blood. He also introduced full-blooded short-horned Durham cattle, owning a monster bull that weighed 2,200 pounds and cost him five hundred dollars, as well as a cow, "Lady Chesterfield," that cost six hundred dollars. The prices then paid for such stock were lower than they would be today. His horses were cared for by Newell White who was noted for his beard of unusual length.

The estate formerly owned and occupied by Mr. Wood contained about two hundred acres. Many years ago the house, which is over one hundred years old, was thoroughly repaired at great expense. The estate is now occupied by Mr. Charles F. Soule.

Mr. Wood purchased the West Congregational Church building when its use for church purposes was discontinued. He moved this to the site of the Rich mill on Ramshorn Stream and started a cotton mill which he operated.

CHAPTER XXXIII

THE DWINNELL CEMETERY

CHAPTER XXXIV

CEMETERIES

The oldest burial-places within the bounds of Millbury are the Providence Street, or County Bridge; the Dwinnel; and the West Millbury cemeteries. The oldest of these places, as the stones now standing show, is the Dwinnel cemetery. That on Providence Street (the County Bridge) is next in age and the one at West Millbury is third. These three "God's acres" of the early days in North Parish, Sutton, are not much more in area than that name implies.

DWINNEL CEMETERY

The Dwinnel cemetery is located close to the northerly road running from Millbury to Auburn, about a mile from the Greenwood Crossing of the Providence & Worcester Railroad. This quiet spot is the resting place of many members of the early families, including Revolutionary soldiers, both officers and privates, as well as soldiers in other wars. The place is now but little used.

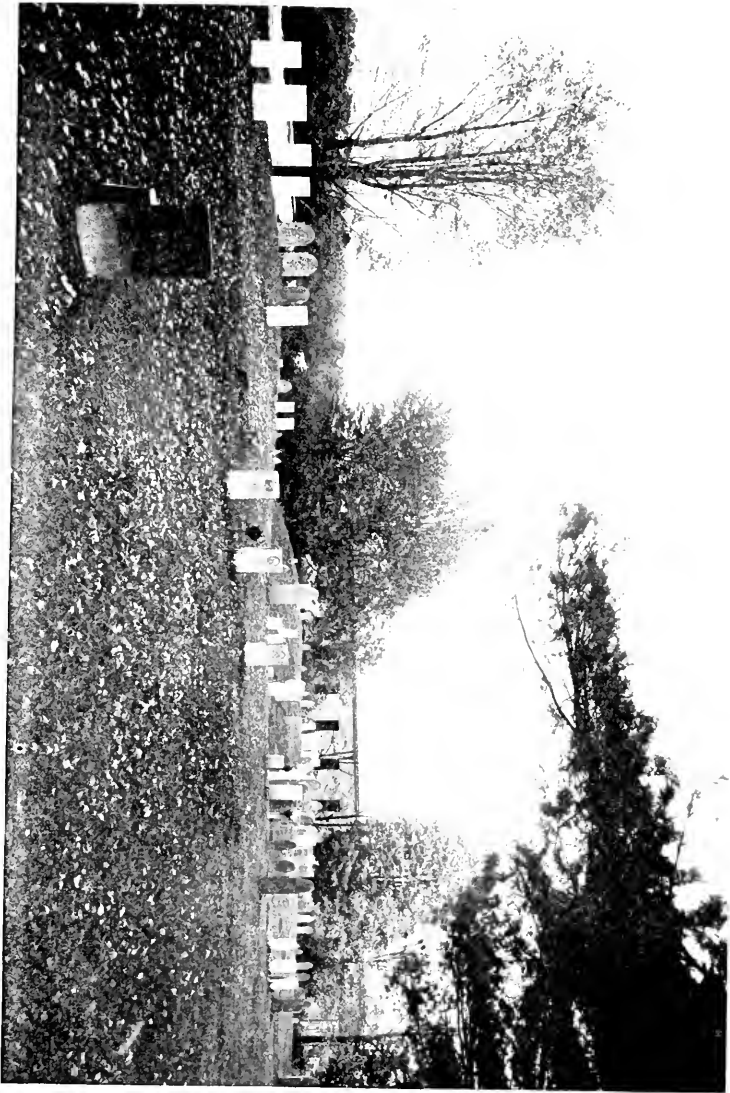

Among the soldiers of the Revolution here buried are Solomon Dwinnel, Joshua Carter, Robert Goddard, Dr. James Freeland, Capt. James Greenwood, the Hollands, the Bancrofts and the Bonds. The place was neglected until 1861, when, on June 21st, the proprietors deeded it to the town for one hundred dollars ($100). The names given in the deed were, Henry K. Greenwood, Daniel G. Livermore, Andrew P. Garfield, Sullivan Bancroft, Henry L. Bancroft, Anson G. Livermore, L. Dwinnel, S. Dwinnel, Amasa Bond, Amasa Richardson, and George W. McCracken.

Following is a list of the names of those interred in the Dwinnell cemetery.

COUNTY BRIDGE CEMETERY

The County-Bridge Cemetery is pleasantly located along the Blackstone River. It was early used by families in the southeastern part of Sutton and in it lie buried the remains of many representatives of the old families who were once prominent in the business, military, political, and social life of the region. In this enclosure lie the remains of Amos Singletary, the first white child born in what is now the town of Millbury. Among other families are the Dudleys, the Goodales (or Goodells), the Marches, the Rawsons, and the Stiles. The remains of Capt. Abijah Burbank are interred here together with those of thirteen other soldiers of the Revolutionary struggle. From Reuben R. Dodge of Sutton, who copied some inscriptions here, we learn that "ancestors of the well-known Chase family are buried here. Daniel Chase was the progenitor of bishop Philander Chase and judge Salmon P. Chase, formerly Secretary of the Treasury (of the United States, afterwards Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States), also George L. Chase, the well-known president of the Hartford Insurance Co. Ebenezer Rawson, the well-known antiquarian and historian, has a large marble headstone in the center of the cemetery."

Very few burials have been made here lately, but new stones have been erected and the general appearance of the place has been much improved.

The following copy of a deed gives the names of the early proprietors of this cemetery and its bounds.

THE WEST MILLBURY CEMETERY

WEST MILLBURY CEMETERY

This cemetery was a part of the original Solomon Holman farm but the Holmans allowed other families to use it. On March 3rd, 1845, the town voted to appropriate the sum of $60.00 "to repair the fences and purchase the right which Elijah Holman has in the 'Grass Hill' burying-ground." Simeon Waters, Wm. M. Benedict and Hervey Pierce were chosen as a committee to see that this vote was carried out. Although the $60.00 was expended, the right of Mr. Holman was not purchased, for in 1851 Mr. Elijah Holman deeded it to certain proprietors.

In this cemetery lie buried some whose names were a power in the early days of Millbury. Among these are Gen. Caleb Burbank, who gave the town its name, Jonathan Holman, a Revolutionary colonel, and several patriots who marched at the call from Lexington, such as Capt. Samuel Trask, Lieut. Joel Tainter, Lieut. Asa Waters (1st), Capt. Andrew Elliott, Abram Waters, Capt. Samuel Small, and Dea. John Pierce, also Colonial, Revolutionary, and Civil war soldiers. Twenty-one graves of Revolutionary heroes are marked and eight of those who fought in the Civil war. Other prominent men whose remains were interred here include Capt. Joseph Griggs, Capt. Amasa Wood, Aaron Pierce, the first town clerk, the Rev. Osgood Herrick. Two colored people are known to rest here, one a Revolutionary soldier, Peter Willard, and the other Dolly Harris, once a slave from Georgia, who was partly owned by Capt. Amasa Wood. She came to Millbury with the captain's brother and never returned South, but spent the rest of her life with the family of Captain Wood, highly respected by young and old in the village. She was thought to be one hundred years old at the time of her death. Mrs. John Hinds, whose body is buried here, was over 100 years old when she died.

The fact that the cemetery had been transferred to proprietors had been lost sight of by the townsmen for many years, and up to the spring of 1912, it was supposed that it was the property of the town and the commissioners of cemeteries had had it in charge. In that year, however, it became known that the cemetery was privately owned and the commissioners declined to give it further service, except to care for the few perpetual-care lots.

In that year a meeting of the heirs was held and a committee consisting of George I. Stowe, Henry W. Davidson, and Henry W. Glover was chosen to see what could be done toward putting the cemetery in good condition. Subscriptions were called for from former and present residents and from relatives of those buried here. Among those who responded was President William H. Taft, a descendant of the Waters and the Holmans.

A new wall was laid in cement, with iron gates replacing the old wooden ones and the old stile. The old foot-stones were removed, headstones were reset, if needed, and all the broken ones were replaced. The grounds were graded and seeded anew, so that this burial-place of the fathers no longer shows any trace of what Whittier says in his poem of "The old Burying-ground":

"The drearest spot in all the land
To Death they set apart
With scanty grace from Nature's hand
And none from that of Art."

On the afternoon of Nov. 2, 1912, the proprietors, their heirs, and others interested in the cemetery, met at the Union Chapel, West Millbury, and formed an association for the perpetual care of the cemetery. The committee in charge of the improvements reported.

The future care of the cemetery was put in the hands of trustees, consisting of George I. Stowe, chairman, Henry W. Glover, Henry W. Davidson, and William H.

Stockwell, West Millbury, and Theodore H. Small, Worcester, the latter having had much to do with starting the investigation and in the preliminary work.

The original deed transferring the property to the proprietors after having been brought to light was given into the hands of the present association. Following is a list of those whose remains have been interred in the West Millbury Cemetery.

CENTRAL CEMETERY

The Central cemetery is situated on the Western bank of the Blackstone river, across a bridge that is near the junction of Waters, West and River streets. It is conveniently located and easy of access. In the development of the town the time had arrived when the need of more room for interment was felt in some place near the center of the town. At the annual town meeting, held March 6, 1843, it was voted “That the selectmen be a committee to purchase forthwith for the use of the town, a piece of ground suitable for a burying-ground, that they lay out such portions of it as they see fit for private use, and sell the same for the purpose of first paying for the ground, and that the balance, if any, be appropriated to rendering the ground suitable and convenient.”

The selectmen attended to their duty for we find the following on the town records. "Asa H. Waters, administrator of the estate of Asa Waters, Esq., deeded to the town, for a cemetery, a piece of land said to contain 3 acres and 122 rods, more or less. Deed dated Dec. 1, 1843, (signed) A. H. Waters. Witnesses, T. J. Harrington, Simon Farnsworth. Recorded, Dec. 4, 1843," The price paid for the land above was \$94.06. At an adjourned town meeting held April 1, 1844, it was voted "that the selectmen be authorized to purchase 3 and $\frac{1}{4}$ acres of land near the new cemetery, if it can be purchased for the same sum per acre, that was paid for the lot purchased last year."

It was also voted "that the finishing of the new cemetery, building of fences, making roads, and all other business and labor to be done, in order to complete the new cemetery, be left with the present board of selectmen, to finish in a good, substantial and workmanlike manner."

April 4th, 1854, Asa H. Waters, for $514.06 deeded four acres and eighteen square rods of land adjoining Central cemetery to the town (deed recorded May 30, 1854).

Under the care of the various commissioners who have had charge of this cemetery it has been adorned so that it is now well kept and beautiful.

ST. BRIDGET'S CEMETERY

The Cemetery used by our Roman Catholic fellow-citizens is along the Blackstone river adjoining Central Cemetery. In 1864, permission was given by the town to open this place for burial purposes. Previously, the people of the Roman Catholic faith made use of the Central Cemetery and St. John's Cemetery in Worcester. After the opening of St. Bridget's Cemetery, however, some bodies were taken from the Central cemetery and re-interred in the new one, set apart for that purpose. The first burial in St. Bridget's Cemetery was that of Mary Ann Reardon, aged nineteen years, whose body was interred July 22, 1864.

SECTION II

GENEALOGY

GENEALOGY

In the following genealogy those names have been included that were returned to the committee after blanks had been distributed to all, hence there is no attempt at a complete record of Millbury persons, even during the time of their residence in the town. So far as possible, each individual is recorded under his own family name, although, in a few instances, a wife's parents are recorded under the family name of her husband. Usually, a wife's name is given both under her maiden family name and under her married family name and a reference from one to the other is indicated by the abbreviation q.v. (quid vide—which see). The other abbreviations used are self-explanatory. The exponent at the right of a name signifies the number of the generation in direct descent. Family names only are given in the index.

The number of children in a family is often not complete especially when only one is recorded. This is for the reason that in most instances only the direct descent is given, omitting, for instance, the names of brothers and sisters of parents.

For other data in regard to Millbury families see Vital Statistics.

CARTER FAMILY.

This well-known family has filled, through its members, many important places in the history of Millbury. The English ancestor, the Rev. Thomas Carter, was a native of Hertfordshire. He arrived in New England as early as 1635, and settled in Dedham. The name of Timothy Carter appears early at Sutton as a land owner, but the first settler of this name was Joshua⁴, a great-grand-son of the Rev. Thomas of Dedham. His name is found in our list of Colonial troops, and that of Joshua, Jr., on the roll of Revolutionary soldiers. Capt. Rufus Carter built and later resided in a brick house near the Auburn line, on the road from the Old Common to Ward, now Auburn. His rank of captain was received in the militia. He was a mill wright by trade and an excellent workman. Rufus Carter, son of Capt. Rufus, and father of Henry W. Carter, is mentioned elsewhere in this work in connection with the Wellman House, or later the Carter house, situated on the Old Common.

The Rev. Thomas¹ Carter, immigrant ancestor, was born in Hertfordshire, England, about 1608, and married Mary ————. He died in Woburn, Mass., Sept. 5, 1684. She died Mar. 28, 1687. They had eight children, Thomas (see below) being the eighth.

CRANE.

(See Crane Genealogy by E. E. Crane.)

Henry¹ Crane, immigrant ancestor, was born in England, in 1621 and was the progenitor of the Milton branch of the family, to which the former United States Senator, the Hon. Winthrop Murray Crane belongs. He settled in Dorchester, Mass., and bought a farm of 120 acres, together with a house, Sept. 1, 1654. A road was laid out through Dorchester Woods, from Braintree to Roxbury, passing his house. This was the first road over Milton Hill, and was laid out by Braintree, now Quincy. There is an autograph letter of Henry Crane, written May 7, 1677, in the Massachusetts Archives, Vol. 30, p. 239, in answer to an order requiring him to dispose of three Indian servants, since the colony had made it unlawful to hold Indians in bondage. He was selectman in Milton, in 1679, '80, and '81. He was a trustee of the first meeting-house in Milton, was engaged in iron manufacturing in Dorchester and Milton, and acquired considerable property. He married, first, Tabitha ———, in England, who died in 1681. Children: 1. He died in Milton, Mar. 21, 1709.

Ensign John² Crane, son of Henry¹, married, Dec. 13, 1686, Hannah Leonard, dau. of James and Hannah Leonard, of Taunton. Her father, Capt. James Leonard, was one of the Leonard brothers, who started the first forge for iron work in America. John Crane died, Aug. 5, 1716, buried in the Fox burying-ground at Berkeley, Mass. Son: John, b. in Berkeley, Mass., d. there, Oct. 31, 1777, m. Hannah Adams, descendant of the Adams family of Braintree. She is buried at Oxford, Mass.

Lemuel³ Crane, son of John², was born in Berkeley, Mass., Oct. 29, 1736, and died in Oxford, Sept. 28, 1814. During the Revolution, he was a loyalist, and was imprisoned with other Tories in the Taunton jail on account of his political views. For this reason, also, he left Berkeley, and moved to Oxford, Mass., in 1780. He married, Dec. 13, 1759, Bathsheba Gilbert, dau. of Col. Thomas Gilbert, leader of the New England Tories, and a friend of Gen. Gage. He left Boston with Gen. Gage, when the British evacuated it in 1776, and first settled in Windsor, N. S. He died in Gagetown, on the St. John river. Children, all born in Berkeley, except the youngest: 1. Lydia, b. Apr. 3, 1761; 2. John, b. Oct. 3, 1763; 3. Hannah, b. Sept. 26, 1765; 4. Gilbert, b. DAVIDSON.

John¹ Davidson, and Sarah Overton were married in Salem, Mass., Mar. 8, 1719, and they were the only Davidsons in Salem, up to that date. April 12, 1720, William King, of Sutton, sold to John Davison, of Salem, thirty acres south of Ramshorn Meadow, abutting on the old road running east and west, near the boundary between the two precincts of Sutton. The road is still there, but it has long been discontinued as a public highway. The farm remained the property of John Davison, until about 1763, when it is described as the property of Benjamin Davidson. The property was never added to, or sold from, during the seventy-two years that it was in the possession of the Davidson family. It was sold to Stephen and Solomon Marble, Apr. 4, 1792. There is no record of John and Sarah Davison's family in Sutton, except as abutters of adjoining estates, but these records are quite numerous. One or two bear the name Davis, but all the rest are Davison or Davision.

Benjamin² Davidson bought a farm in the South part of Spencer, near the Leicester and Charlton boundary, Nov. 7, 1792. His two sons went with him at the time, or soon after. The son John³ and his entire family went to Montpelier, Vt., soon after, and the name of Davis (by which many called them in Sutton) was the name they went by, after settling there.

Benjamin² Davidson, son of John and Sarah Overton Davidson, resided in Sutton and Spencer. He was born about 1727. He married, in Sutton, Mass., Apr. 29, 1751, Mary Whittemore. DOLAN FAMILY.

As early as 1848 the late Peter Dolan, a native of Queens county, Ireland, was employed as a farmer in town, but he later purchased the farm overlooking Ramshorn Pond, on which Samuel Darling once resided. This place, consisting of one hundred and twenty-five acres, under the care of Mr. Dolan and his sons, has been brought to a high state of cultivation, so that it has become one of the best farms in the western part of the town. It commands a beautiful view of the surrounding country. New buildings have been erected, fields been cleared and the land has been made highly productive. The place now includes part of the last battle-grounds on which was fought the final skirmish between the white and red men in the region. On land near by, now owned by Edward H. Dolan, a son of Peter Dolan, is the site of the old block house which was used at that time. The location, however, is just over the line in Sutton.

The place is now occupied by children of Mr. Dolan, viz.: Edward H., John, and Mary. Edward Dolan is the owner of the land near by, once the home of Theophilus Kenney. The Charles Bugbee farm was purchased by John Dolan. Thomas Dolan, a son of Peter, has for many years been chief of police in Millbury and was formerly road commissioner.

GOODELL FAMILY.

One of the earliest families to settle in the territory now included within the limits of Millbury was the Goodell family. Its members were extensive land owners near the Blackstone River. Members of the family married with many of the other older settlers, so that its descendants have been among the most prominent and representative of Millbury people.

Asa Goodell, a soldier in the Revolution, was an early broadcloth manufacturer. Asa Goodell, Jr., and Samuel Goodell held commissions in the militia.

At the site of the Cordis Mill and that of the Mayo No. 4, the Crane and Waters Mill, several by this name have been engaged in successful textile work, superior broadcloth, in particular, having been produced.

Mr. Samuel Goodell, of this early family, resides near the ancestral possessions on Grafton St.

One of the old houses of the town, once occupied by members of this family, formerly stood on the road to Grafton. For many years after it ceased to be occupied it was known as "the haunted house," but at last the old structure succumbed to the ravages of time.

HOLMAN.

Solaman¹ Holman was born probably in 1671-2 and died May 7, 1753, in his eighty-second year. He married, first, Mary Barton, of York, Maine, who was born, probably, in 1673, and died Oct. 18, 1736, aged 63 years. He married, second, Elizabeth Kelley, widow of Mr. John Kelley. Her maiden name was Emery. She was born about 1680, and died May 8, 1753, in her seventy-fourth year. All are buried in West Newbury, in Walnut Grove Cemetery.

The Holman family was of Welsh origin. Two brothers, Solomon and John, came to Newbury about 1690. Coffin's "History of Newbury" states that "Solomon Holman and his wife Mary came to Newbury about 1693 or 1694."

The West Precinct Church, in West Newbury, was started Jan. 22, 1698. More than thirty communicants gathered there Oct. 26, 1698. To it was ordained the Rev. Samuel Belcher.

From the Registry of Deeds of Essex County, Salem, Vol. 16, p. 12, we learn that a transaction from Samuel Poore to Solaman Holman was received on record, Apr. 17, 1702.

Solaman Holman was a member of the second foot company of Newbury, under Hugh March, Jan. 15, 1710-11.

The following parcels of land were bought by Solaman Holman of Newbury, in Sutton, Mass:—

June 30, 1719, of James Smith, of Boston, who was a sugar merchant,—five hundred acres in Sutton, Mass., for 140 pounds, lot 22, 100 acres etc.,—lot 14, 30 acres, etc., paid in full, Jan. 27, 1727.

June 29, 1722, one hundred acres for fifty pounds from Prescott Hall, in Sutton,—9 lot—range 22, next to the Oxford line.

April 1, 1723, of Thomas Jackson, for one hundred and ninety pounds, in Sutton, No. 4, 2 range, thirty acres—one hundred acres in lot No. 23 etc.

Note—These three sales are recorded in the registry of deeds in the Boston Court House, as this portion of Worcester County was originally embraced within the limits of Suffolk County. (The records at the registry of deeds in the Worcester Court House begin with 1730.)

Soloman Holman divided among his sons, Edward, Thomas, and Soloman, lands in Sutton, now known as Millbury.

The men by the name of Holman in the Colonial service were Solomon², Solomon³, John, David, Edward, Stephen, and Col. Jonathan.

The children of Solomon¹ Holman, all born in West Newbury, Mass., were: 1. Mary, b. Feb. 24, 1694, d. Dec. 29, 1716; 2. Solomon (see below); 3. Edward (see below); 4. Elizabeth, b. Oct. 24, 1701, d. by drowning, in 1703; 5. Elizabeth, b. Mar. 14, 1703, m. Oct. 28, 1725, William Anderson, d. Sept. 13, 1727; 6. John, b. Oct. 24, 1705, d. Feb. 6, 1762, m. Judith Huse; 7. Sarah, b. Oct. 11-30, 1707, d. Oct., 1707; 8. Ruth, b. Dec., 1708, d. Jan. 1708-9; 9. Rachel, b. Sept. 23, 1710, m. Samuel Waters; 10. Sarah, b. May 8, 1713, m. Abel Chase; 11. Anna, b. Apr. 25, 1715, d. Feb. 20, 1788, m., Richard Waters; 12. Thomas, b. June 24, 1717, m., first, Deborah Huntington, m., second, Mary Rich, m., third, Sarah Cooper, m., fourth, Mary Palmer. His will is dated June 15, 1790.

Solomon² Holman was born in West Newbury, Nov. 25, 1697, and married there, first, May 23, 1722, Mary Brickett. He married, second, at Oxford, Aug. 28, 1729, Mercy Waters of Sutton. From 1726 he had an estate in West Millbury from which was to be seen the site of the fort or block-house used in the early days of Sutton as a refuge and defence against the Indians. He died in West Millbury, Apr. 17, 1785. He had ten children of whom the fourth, a son of the second wife, was the Col. Jonathan of Revolutionary fame (see below).

Edward² Holman, son of Soloman¹ and Mary (Barton) Holman was born in West Newbury, Jan. 26, 1699, and died May 12, 1742, (administration of will). He married, May 19, 1726, Hannah Emory, of Newbury, dau. of John³ (Jonathan², John¹ Emory) who was born June 19, 1706, and died in 1756 (will probated Nov. 2, 1756).

The will of Edward² Holman is dated Apr. 7, 1742.

Hannah was guardian of her children in May, 1742, Solomon³ being about four years of age. Hannah's will was made May 3, 1756. The administration is dated Nov. 2, 1756. Daniel Dike, Nov. 5, 1755, was appointed guardian of Joshua, who was fifteen years of age. Edward Holman was received into the church in 1731. The Proprietors' Records of Sutton state that Solomon¹, of Newbury, June 6, 1732, divided land which he had purchased in Sutton among his three sons Solomon², Edward², and Thomas².

The children of Edward² and Hannah (Emory) Holman were: 1. Hannah, b. Feb. 4, 1727, d. about 1815, m. Mar. 8, 1749, or 1750, John Severy; 2. Mary, b. Oct. 24, 1728, m. in Haverhill, Mr. Fish; 3. Edward, b. Oct. 13, 1730, m., first, May 7, 1754, Rebecca Gale, m., second, Sarah Kenney; 4. John, b. July 21, 1732, called, "John, Jr.," d. probably Mar. 1, 1780. (See "S. and S. of Rev." Vol. VIII, p. 155, probably Sergeant John); 5. Elizabeth, b. Oct. 4, 1734, m. Jonathan Cutler, Oct. 20, 1757, who was baptized Oct. 23, 1737, and was a son of Ebenezer Cutler; 6. David (see below); 7. Solomon, twin, b. Apr. 12, 1738, living in 1756; 8. Sarah, b. Apr. 12, 1738, m. Benj. Hudson (or Hulson) of Oxford, Mar. 16, 1756, who was born Mar. 22, 1727, son of William and Mary (Farrington) Hudson; 9. Joshua, b. May 13, 1741.

Col. Jonathan³ Holman, farmer, son of Solomon² and Mary (Brackett) Holman, was born in Sutton (now West Millbury) Aug. 13, 1732, and married there, first, Nov. 3, 1763, Hannah Sibley, of Uxbridge. Children: 1. Ruth, b. Dec. 6, 1764; 2. Solomon, b. May 24, 1766; 3. Robert, b. May 28, 1768; 4. Peter (see below); 5. Ruth, b. Dec. 20, 1771; 6. Jonathan, b. Jan. 3, 1774, m. Polly Cummings, May 2, 1799; 7. Mercy, b. Nov. 14, 1775; 8. Ebenezer Waters, b. May 25, 1778; 9. Elijah, b. Feb. 2, 1780. Col. Jonathan Holman married, second, in Sutton, July 10, 1783, Susanna Trask, dau. of Capt. Samuel Trask, of Sutton. He died in Millbury, Feb. 25, 1814. She died there Feb. 25, 1849. Children: 1. Susan, b. Feb. 22, 1784, m. May 19, 1802, in Sutton, Asa Waters, Jr., (q. v.); 2. Luther, b. Oct. 12, 1786; 3. Nancy, b. July 14, 1792. See Independent Sketch of Col. Jonathan Holman; also Revolutionary Soldiers.

Lieut. David³ Holman, son of Edward² and Hannah (Emory) Holman, was born Feb. 19, 1737, and died, in West Millbury, June 15, 1813. He married, first, in Sutton, July 4, 1760, Lucy Thurston, who was born in Uxbridge, Apr. 28, 1745, and died in West Millbury, June 5, 1798. He married, second, June 10, 1790, Hannah Waters who was born Dec. 7, 1741, and died July 3, 1813. She was a dau. of Nathaniel and Mary Waters. The Colonial Record states that he was at the relief of Fort Henry in August, 1757, and that Edward Holman was in the same company. Dec. 29, 1758, he was with Capt. Solomon Holman's company (see Mass. Archives, Muster Rolls, Vol. 95, p. 515.) (See Chapter on Revolutionary Soldiers.)

Lieut. David Holman, and his cousin, Col. Jonathan Holman, were ranked among the bravest men who went out from Sutton. Eleven members of the family from Sutton fought in the Revolutionary War.

A record of Lieut. David Holman's services may be found in the History of Sutton, Mass., 1878, pp. 97, 103-119; Revolutionary Archives, State House, Boston, Muster and Pay-Roll, Vol. 1, pp. 33-34; Vol. 43, p. 217; Vol. 52, pp. 42-46; in Rhode Island, Vol. 2, p. 3; Militia Officers, Vol. 28, pp. 25-107.

Peter⁴ Holman, son of Col. Jonathan³ and Hannah (Sibley) Holman, was born Oct. 16, 1769, and married, in Sutton, Jan. 25, 1797, Lydia Greenwood.

Children: 1. Harvey, b. Nov. 9, 1797, d. Oct. 7, 1801; 2. Lucy, b. June 3, 1799; 3. Harvey, b. June 26, 1802, d. July 3, 1803; 4. Peter, b. Jan. 30, 1804; 5. Lydia K., b. Nov. 10, 1805.

Rev. Nathan⁴ Holman (Lt. David,³ Edward², Solaman¹), son of Lieut. David³ and Lucy (Thurston) Holman, was born in that part of Sutton which is now West Millbury, May 17, 1769, and died Oct. 28, 1844, in Attleboro, Mass. He married, Nov. 23, 1801, Lettice Morey, dau. of the Hon. Samuel and Mary (Hodges) Morey. She was born Dec. 25, 1768, in Norton, Mass., and died Mar. 6, 1848, aged 79.

Nathan Holman labored on his father's farm until his twenty-first year, when his ardent thirst for knowledge set him to work to procure a liberal education. He could expect but little assistance from his father, who had eleven children, but by uncommon adherence to his cherished purpose he succeeded. He was graduated from Brown University, Providence, R. I., in 1797, and later took the degree of A. M. with distinguished honors. He studied theology with the Rev. Dr. Emmons. Oct. 15, 1800, he was ordained in Attleboro, succeeding the Rev. Ebenezer Lazell, and labored there for twenty-one years after which he was dismissed, May 22, 1821, to the regret of his people, but he continued his residence there and supplied vacant pulpits. He died suddenly Oct. 28, 1844, at the age of 79. His monument is conspicuous in the burying-ground north of the meeting-house. A pyramidal shaft has upon it above the usual dates the brief inscription, "Look to God."

The following lines were written by Mr. Holman at the end of his freshman year and posted in his room at college in 1794.

"RULES FOR REGULATING MY CONDUCT.

"I. Never to neglect the addressing myself to the Supreme Governor of the Universe, morning and evening.

"II. To be particularly careful to shun all bad company, such as use profane and vulgar language, and are inattentive to their moral conduct.

"III. Never to speak in a jesting romantic way, but always to speak the truth, and in sincerity.

"IV. Never to make the foibles and imperfections of others the theme of discourse, but when others do this, to speak well of the person thus spoken against, if possible.

"V. At all times and in all places to treat every person with proper respect, as their station requires.

"VI. To be particularly careful to keep the Sabbath, avoiding all things unnecessary to be performed on that day, and refraining as far as possible from the vanities that are so apt to attract the unwary mind.

"It is my earnest desire that I may pay proper attention to the above rules, and I do this day determine, the Grace of God assisting me, that I will follow them.

(signed) "NATHAN HOLMAN."

THE PARKE OR PARK FAMILY.

The Park family, which has been conspicuous in the history of the town, dates from the last of the 16th century, or very early in the 17th, when a patent was granted conveying the title of Baron of The Exchequer. About the same time a number are recorded as Knights of the Garter; and seven Coats of Arms came from the original one. The local line descended from the Cambridgeshire branch. Edward was a cousin of Governor Winthrop, of Massachusetts.

The first of the branch to which the local representatives belong who landed in this country was named Richard¹. He landed in what is now Boston, in 1635, accompanied by his wife, a son, and two daughters. Another son, apparently, joined them later. He settled upon a tract of land on the bank of the Charles River, where Cambridge now is, having a holding of about 800 acres.

From him the line descended through Thomas²; Jonathan³, of Watertown; and Jonathan⁴. Jonathan⁴ Park was born in Watertown, or Newton, Mar. 30, 1695. Coming to Sutton, the portion now Millbury, in 1730, he purchased 300 acres of land from William Dum; paying therefor 425 pounds. This land is described as being part of a grant to Richard Dum, conveyed to Rev. James Allen, and as bounded "westerly by the Backquachoag (Blackstone) River, and 200 rods south of Worcester." This included what is still known as Park Hill, which was so named from the Park homestead on its crest. And the house still stands—though many times altered—behind its guard of tall sycamores.

He was twice married. His second wife, Abigail Smith, was the mother of the local line. Children: 1. Jonathan (see below); 2. Sarah, m. Asaph Putnam in 1743; 3. Abigail; 4. Phineas (see below); 5. Lucy, m. Benj. Sibley, in 1754; 6. Dorcas, m. Joshua Woodbury in 1752; 7. one other. He died in Sutton, December 20, 1763.

Jonathan⁵ Park was born in Sutton, Aug. 30, 1722, resided there, died there; Mar. 10, 1789. Jan. 28, 1743, he married Lucy Sibley (born Apr. 26, 1726). Twelve children: 1. Jonathan (see below); 2. Lucy, m. Andrew P. Putnam, Jan. 10, 1764; 3. Reuben (see below); 4. Eleanor, m., first,— Ruggles, m. second, Joel Johnson, Sept. 27, 1768; 5. Moses (see below); 6. Hannah, m. ——— Trask; 7. Aaron (see below); 8. Joshua (see below); 9. Caleb (see below); 10. Betsey; 11. Abigail, m. Isaac Willard in 1790; 12. Samuel (see below).

Three of the sons were soldiers of the Revolution: Aaron, Joshua, and Caleb. Two of them serving as non-commissioned officers in Colonel Burbank's regiment, and the third in that of Colonel Learned.

Of Caleb it is further recorded that he married Ruth Woodward, in 1784, and lived at Dixfield, Me., afterward returning to Sutton.

The men of this generation and the one immediately following were noted for their exceptionally large and heavy frame; and many stories have been told of their phenomenal strength—especially prominent being Aaron and Caleb, and their nephew John.

Phineas⁶ married Ruth Newton, of Shrewsbury, in 1750, and they had ten children. Of nine of these there is no record; but Thadecus was baptized Jan. 25, 1761, and in after years moved to Chester, Vt., and his wife Ruth lived to the great age of 95 years.

Jonathan⁶ Park (Jonathan⁵) was born in Sutton, Sept. 22, 1743. He moved to Newfane, Vt., where he died in 1827. He married three times—first, Elizabeth Fletcher; second, Sarah Scott; third, Miriam Fiske. Children: 1. Elizabeth; 2. Lucy; 3. Jonathan; 4. David; 5. Submit; 6. Samuel; 7. Lydia; 8. Ephraim; 9. Rhoda; 10. Moses; 11. Nathan F.; 12. Sarah; 13. Miriam.

Reuben⁶ Park (Jonathan⁵) was born in Sutton, Oct. 12, 1746, and died at Bernardston in 1813. He married Mary Barton in 1768. He was a Revolutionary soldier, serving in Colonel Learned's regiment. Children: 1. Mary;

2. Jonathan; 3. Gracia; 4. Reuben; 5. Simeon (who removed to Ohio); 6. Levi; 7. Hannah. Of Levi, who was born after his father removed to Bernardston, it is recorded that he was a farmer, the father of twenty-one children, and that he lived to see twenty of them grow to man's estate.

Samuel⁶ Park (Jonathan⁵) was born May 5, 1767. He married, first, Polly Holman, and second, Lucy ———, since "Aaron, son of Samuel and Lucy, was baptized May 13, 1804." Children: 1. Samuel; 2. Salmon; 3. Luther; 4. Calvin; 5. Aaron.

Moses⁶ Park (Jonathan⁵) was born in Sutton, May 19, 1750, living there and in Millbury, after the partition, where he died in 1842. He married Hannah Barton in 1770. Children: 1. Lucy, m. Amos Trask in 1795, lived at Dixfield, Me.; 2. Moses, b. July 22, 1773, lived in Maine and also in Michigan; two children died young. He married, second, Lydia Bixbee, or Bixby, May 19, 1779. Children: 1. Lydia, m. John Barber, of Wrentham, lived in Thompson, Conn; son John afterwards came to Millbury and lived for many years upon a portion of the old homestead—occupying the house next northerly from the Park home; 2. Aaron, m. Maria Cheney, of Auburn, in 1810; 3. Hannah, d. young; 4. John (see below); 5. Hervey (see below).

John⁷ Park (Moses⁶) was born in Sutton, Dec. 31, 1784. He lived upon the old homestead till his death in 1854. He was a lieutenant in the militia from 1820 to 1825. By occupation a farmer, he filled several offices in the gift of his fellow-townsmen and served the town in these various capacities for many years. He married Nancy Chamberlain in 1812. Children: 1. Tyler; 2. George (see below); 3. Calista, m. Marvel Prentice, of Whitinsville; 4. Emily; 5. Adaline; 6. Nancy; 7. Alanson, m. Prudence Eldridge, of East Douglas, in 1859, one child, Sophia, b. in 1869, m. George Green.

Hervey⁷ Park (Moses⁶) was born in Sutton, June 26, 1790. He chose the trade of a mechanic, working in the second armory, where he contracted for the gun-stocking from Mr. Waters. It was his privilege to make sketches of the Blanchard lathe at Springfield and he erected the second machine of its kind for the local armory, though it was used but for a short time. He also aided Mr. Waters in perfecting a routing machine for making an opening in the stock where the lock was placed; and it was this machine which practically completed the result, so largely begun by the Blanchard lathe, of doing away with the old fashioned handwork. He married Joanna Robbins, of Mendon. Not pleasing his people in either his choice of a trade, or of a wife, he was cut off from any share in the ancestral homestead, and was, like many another, obliged to begin again.

Starting with the place where the house of Mr. M. Murphy now stands, after work at the armory ceased, he turned his attention to farming and, selling his house and lot, he bought the Willard and Wesson farms (formerly belonging to Amos Singletary), on the Worcester road, near Dorothy Pond. He moved to the farm in 1835, where he died, Sept. 13, 1875.

He served the town as assessor and in various other minor offices. He was one of those who strove repeatedly, from 1823, to organize a Baptist Church in town, though no enduring result was obtained till 1835. He was a charter member of King Hiram Council of Charlton and Worcester. He was a member of the first Temperance Society in the country. One of the peculiar rules of the society was that at each meeting every member made returns of his drinking during the month and if, in the opinion of the meeting, this was too much, he was condemned to total abstinence for a set term, or paid a fine. He was also a member of the old Millbury Lyceum, and took his turn in addressing a meeting, delivering several talks upon various phenomena of Natural Philosophy, as Physics was then called. From 1808 until 1838 he was a member of the old militia. Children: 1. Lydia, d. aged 19; 2. Hervey⁸ Park (see below).

George³ Park (John⁷) was born in Millbury, Sept. 9, 1815. Removing to Worcester on attaining his majority, he spent nearly the whole of his life there, returning after the death of his sister Adaline, in 1897, to spend his remaining summers upon the old homestead, where he is noted as having planted his own garden in the 92d year of his age. He died in 1908. He had eight children, two of whom were officers of the 57th Mass. Vols., one being killed at North Anna, Va., in 1864; the other, wounded at Petersburg, died at Dansville, Va., in 1865.

Hervey⁸ Park (Hervey⁷) was born in Millbury, Oct. 12, 1831. His life was spent there, upon the farm, where he died, Nov. 26, 1900. He married Amanda Eliza Guild, in 1855, who was born in Augusta, Me., Sept. 2, 1835, and died in Millbury in January, 1896. Though primarily a farmer, Mr. Park was also, like his father, a mechanic. He was greatly interested in the Farmers' and Mechanics' Association of the town and served as its president with the exception of three years, occupying that position through the whole life of the Association until the Grange came to take its place. He was a Royal Arch Mason, a member of The Council, and also of the Knights Templars. Besides serving the town in several other positions, he served long upon the Board of Assessors, being its chariman for ten years.

Children: 1. Mary Lydia, teacher, afterwards nurse; 2. Ada Eliza, m. Chas. M. Brown (as a girl developed considerable artistic ability, not only with the brush, but also as a designer of carpets, wallpaper, and kindred articles; worked for several large firms in Worcester and in New York City); 3. Edwin Hervey (see below); 4. Alice Amanda, m. Walter H. Howe (q. v.); 5. Lucy Mabel, d. aged 8; 6. Charles⁹ Willis (see below).

Edwin⁹ Hervey Park (Hervey⁸), mechanical engineer, was born in Millbury, Aug. 6, 1860, and married, May 21, 1892, Nellie Harriet, dau. of Russell B. Lovell (q. v.). Children, all born in Worcester, residing in Millbury: 1. Dorothy Lovell; 2. Lydia Frances; 3. Norman Hervey.

Rev. Charles Willis⁹ Park (Hervey⁸) was born in Millbury, June 24, 1867. Starting life upon the farm, he entered the ministry. He married Mary Louisa, dau. of Alonzo Bunker, D. D., of Burmah, in 1898. Children: 1. Charles Judson; 2. Hervey; 3. Philip Bradbury; 4. Miriam Louisa; 5. Wilfred Bixby.

Mr. Park has been successful in his pastorates and has spoken in the prohibition cause, especially in Iowa, and New York.

Asa Holman Waters of Millbury (q. v.).

PIERCE.

The Pierce family is a very old one that has long been prominent in the affairs of the town. Several early members were successively deacons in the First Congregational Church. John served in the War of the Revolution. (See Revolutionary Soldiers.) Of the old homesteads once occupied by members of the family two are still standing.

The immigrant ancestor, Thomas Pierce, came from England to this country in 1633-4 with his wife, Elizabeth, and settled at Charlestown. He was born in England in 1583-4 and died, Oct. 7, 1666. His wife, Elizabeth, was born in England in 1595-6.

To this family belonged Franklin Pierce, formerly President of the United States. He was of the seventh generation, the same as Hervey Pierce, of WATERS.

The Waters family of Millbury traces its ancestry to James¹ Waters who lived about 1600. He had a son, Richard², a gunsmith, who married Joyce (Rejoice), dau. of William Plaise, also a gunsmith. They had a son, John³, b. in 1640, a farmer, resided in Salem, and m. in Salem, June 1, 1663, Sara, dau. of John Tompkins of that place. From two of his ten children, Richard⁴, b. in 1669, and Nathaniel⁴, b. in 1671, the members of the Waters family in Millbury are descended. Nathaniel⁴ purchased one-tenth (about three thousand acres) of the township of Sutton.

Jonathan⁵, son of Nathaniel⁴, moved from Salem and became the first settler on the Clifford R. Harris farm, of West Millbury. From him were descended Asa⁶, Asa⁷, and Col. Asa H.⁸ Waters, all of whom were gunmakers and manufacturers, as well as extensive landowners. This branch of the family intermarried with the Trasks, the Torreys, the Goodells, the Burbanks, and other well-known families.

(See individual sketches, industries, etc.)

The original farm descended to Elijah⁷ Waters, who was unmarried. He was a generous man and bequeathed a substantial fund to the First Congregational Church as well as bequests to other religious societies. The farm passed from his hands into the possession of Jonathan E.⁸ Waters who in turn bequeathed it to his daughter, Mrs. Charles A.⁹ Whitney, so that until comparatively recently the estate had never been out of the possession of some member of the family, since the progenitor settled there as a pioneer.

The original residence stood to the east of the present dwelling on the same side of the road.

VITAL STATISTICS

1850 - 1899

1850 - 1899

Vital statistics up to 1850 have been published previously by the State. The names given in the following lists include the births, marriages and deaths that have occurred in Millbury from 1850 until 1900. As the names are arranged alphabetically they are not found in the general index. To avoid confusion concerning the identity of names these vital statistics have been printed as recorded in the town records, even though some errors of orthography are knowingly repeated for, in many cases, the spelling has been done phonetically.

For other data see Genealogy.
